THIS WEEK'S MOTTO:

Learn to do a thing well, then quickly.

Advertisers and Subscribers may have their correspondence addressed to the care of any of our offices and they are invited to use them at any time. At the Head office, Toronto, a place is set apart where they can see all the latest newspapers and the latest issues of trade papers from all parts of the world, where they can do their correspondence or obtain any information. Parcels may also be directed to the Head office.

The measure to enforce early closing referred to last week has since been rejected by the Quebec Legislature.

A bill is before the House of Commons to amend the Winding-Up Act, empowering the court to dispose of books and papers when a company is being wound up and about to be dissolved; freeing the company and liquidators from responsibility at the end of five years; and providing for the discharge of the liquidator when winding up is nearly completed.

The Food Exposition to be held in New York next October is conceived and is being prepared for on a gigantic scale, as befits the occasion. It is in commemoration of the discovery of America, and will be the first national Food Exposition held in the United States. The way has been paved for its success by the satisfactory results of food expositions that have already been held in various sections of the country. The experience of these exhibitions makes the scheme of a Food Exposition of national magnitude an easier undertaking than it would otherwise be, and probably is the main cause of such a project being ventured upon. The Food Expositions have done good, and are a healthy protest against a tendency that has been a growing one for some years, to adulterate goods.

The production of iron and steel, and the manufacture of products from that material has been wonderfully cheapened in the past decade. Invention and the development of mechanical processes have played their part in this change. One result of it that is very observable in grocery stores is the use of packages made of steel plate (tinned) and wire, in the place of wood and paste board, and frequently in place of glass. Canned goods and many table lines are now put up in tin plate packages, that could hardly have been sold if the price of tin plate had remained the same as it was several years ago. The latest application of wire is to egg-packing. Little wire holders are now used by some grocers for delivery of eggs instead of the paste-board cells.

Fidelity to the Guild is plainly a waning sentiment. Ever since that one link snapped which kept all the members of one mind upon the price of granulated sugar, the esprit de corps of the Guild seems to have lacked a mainspring. The remaining restraints appear to have grown irksome to some of the houses, and now accusations are made that allege the transgression of some of those rules whose force is still supposed to be binding. The terms of discount, it is charged, have been directly evaded, and allowances (for freight, etc.,) beyond the tariff adopted have been conceded. It is said that some members are highly incensed at these little midsummer lapses from the strict letter of the fragment, which, since the suspension of Clause 2, represents the agreement. If the regulations continue to be set at naught by the offenders at whose door recent violations are laid, there will be some secession before long.

It seems the price of brooms is likely to be pitched a note higher if present indications do not relax their tension. The stiff advance in broom corn last fall brought prices up then to a higher point than they had been for a long time, and they have not gone back any since. One of the leading broom manufacturers of Canada says that the prospects for cheap brooms in the near future are anything but encouraging. Owing to the heavy and continuous rains throughout the broom corn sections of Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas and Illinois, planters have not been able to put down seed as early as customary, and they are now about six weeks behind with their seeding, and it is very questionable if they will be able to set out as much stock as was contemplated. In any event it is very conclusive that the new crop will not be ready to be put into the hands of manufacturers until October next, and as the supply on hand now is very limited (owing to short crop last season and the enormous and unprecedented advance in broom corn last season, and the consequent short purchases of manufacturers,) it is safe to prophesy that prices will retain their present high standing, and it is not altogether out of the possibilities of seeing a marked advance in prices after September or October next.

The world will be apt to ask what civic calamity has befallen Toronto, what bereavement is its trade suffering from, or what sin as an organization has its Grocers' Association committed, that is to be mourned or expiated by cancelling the grocers' picnic for 1892? What is the cause of this self-mortification, this painting black the red-letter day of the year? Surely the capacity for enjoyment is not becoming seared. The Association has twice as many members as it had a year ago, and there ought to be a liberal fund of good spirits to draw from for a day's outing. The people who attended the picnics or excursions of the Toronto Association in former years always enjoyed themselves, and there is much wonder expressed why that popular annual occasion is to be dropped out of 1892. It is a matter of regret to many young people connected with the trade that the excursion is not to be held. It is not to be forgotten that one of the strongest assimilating functions of an association is its social vitality. If that is low the power of the association to benefit its members will not be high. One of the best preservatives and fosterers of good social feeling is the gathering together to take common enjoyment in one another's company at the annual picnic or excursion.

A crowd is not always company and a big membership is not always strength. The Toronto Retail Grocers' Association ought to take due note of the latter fact, and to call to mind that though it has a much bigger membership it has also a much higher standard of criticism to satisfy. For during a man's first connection with an association his attitude is that of an outsider to some extent. His sympathies and enthusiasm are not incorporated into the general body of the association until he is pleased with it or has confidence in it. An association is therefore for some time on trial by the new members, and as they now constitute a very large and observant jury, it would be as well for the older members to feel their responsibility, and not deem their new colleagues fully enlisted until some good hearty efforts have been made to catch their interest. Since the list has been swelled by the additions put to it by the secretary, nothing of importance has been done, and but little of benefit has been brought forward at the meetings. It behooves old members to think over this in time for next meeting and have something to discuss or propose that will engage the attention of all who are present.

Scientific ideas in butter-making are being disseminated by the Travelling Dairy which the Minister of Agriculture has instituted.

The experiment under the eyes of the assembled farmers of localities where the Dairy's work is exhibited cannot fail to help along a much needed reform. There is both saving of labor and saving of substance in the new methods, and the frequent and general demonstration of these effects has been a large factor in educating farmers to the measure of enlightenment they already have regarding the making of butter. An index of that measure is the increasing supply of the raw material that is going to creameries. This is relieving country merchants from a part of the embarrassment that was inseparable from their business, and to a considerable extent is yet, namely, that of buying butter from the housewives who made it. They had either to pay the same price for all grades or else differentiate and give offence, and were always certain to cause some dissatisfaction, whichever way they took. The scientific modes of making butter are also opening the eyes of the farmers to the value of selecting cows for dairy purposes. At Chesterville the other day a farmer who was present at one of these travelling dairy exhibitions discovered that a cow he valued highly because of its fine appearance and liberal flow of milk, yielded a product that was very poor in butter fat. The domestic process of making butter does not afford a farmer sufficient data to go upon in selecting dairy cows. All the influences of the time are working to free the country merchant from the worry of the butter trade.

A bill for the inspection of apples, etc., has received its second reading in the Canadian House of Commons. Legislation that takes this direction usually trenches on delicate ground, as it is desirable that trade should be left as much as possible to regulate itself. In most things it is capable of doing so. Where price, quality, quantity or representations are contrary to understanding or agreement, the penalty usually follows in the form of lapsed custom. A man has to keep pretty closely to the line of square dealing if he is going to trade with business men, and law supplements the retribution of injured trade at about the right point. But the case of apples and other fruit that we export is somewhat special. It is a matter of Canadian, as distinct from individual, importance that our export trade in such fruits should increase every year. It will not do to leave the growth of this trade entirely to the nurture of individual interest, for the individual can often take shelter in the crowd of producers whose fruit is exported. This often occurs, and wasty, badly packed apples have been allowed to reach England and damage the name of Canadian shippers. The fruit is sometimes inferior but well faced, sometimes it is ill packed, sometimes it is put in barrels below the standard size, it is sometimes shipped in bad condition. All this is hurtful to our export apple trade, and it ought to be checked. The size of the barrels is outside the scope of such a measure, and the Weights and Measures Act would have to be amended to secure reform in this respect, and it is possible that such an amendment may be made. Nova Scotia members state that a standard barrel is particularly called for in their section, as much dishonesty was practised by growers in that province by the use of thick heads, and straight staves. In the discussion of this bill at its second reading, it was suggested that coopers be required to put their names on every barrel after a standard is adopted.

TRADE PROSPECTS AND TENDENCIES.

The following extracts from the speech of B. E. Walker, general manager of the Bank of Commerce, before the last annual meeting of that institution, have a pertinence for traders that makes them worthy of reproduction: In the egg trade the prices paid by shippers were too high, being not very much lower than before the McKinley tariff. Still there is no longer any doubt as to our ability to send Canadian eggs in prime condition to Great Britain and to sell them at a fair price. The distance has been proved to be no practical difficulty. But the business apparently requires great skill and more capital than many of our shippers possess, and it is to be hoped, in the interest of such an important trade, that it will be conducted hereafter mainly by men of tried capacity. The check caused by the United States tariff is very considerable, exports having fallen from an average, for several years, of thirteen to fourteen million dozens to eight million dozens. If the farmer can however make a profit at the prices being paid this season, the volume should soon rise to the old figures. Our manufacture of cheese again exceeds any previous season. For the year ending 31st March our export reached 111,000,000 lbs., valued at nearly $11,000,000, an advance on the last season of a million and a quarter dollars. This was again accompanied by a falling off in the exports from the United States, amounting this year to nearly a million dollars in value. The season's operations were profitable to both factories and shippers. The experiments intended to demonstrat that butter-making may be carried on profitably during the months unsuitable for cheese-making have been, I understand, a success, and if in the counties in which cattle-grazing, cheese-making, and the fattening of hogs, interests closely allied, are now successfully carried on, we can add a large manufacture of high-class butter without diminishing the output of cheese, a distinct forward movement in Ontario farming will have been made."

"We are suffering all over North America from the waning of a wide-reaching real estate boom. The sudden decrease in building operations has thrown large numbers out of employment, and the supposed profits from real estate operations have in many cases disappeared. Many people are clearly not so well off as they imagined, and a general indisposition, and in some cases inability, to spend money as freely as heretofore is the natural result. Not only have the imaginary profits of past speculations disappeared, but there are at the moment no captivating suburban ventures, nor can the dealers in city lots trade with that certainty of a steadily rising market which has been so much the cause of activity in business during late years. We have danced, and we must pay the piper with what grace we may.

There is also another grave reason for the dissatisfaction in some quarters with the results of business. There are too many people in business. This is getting to be an old story, but it seems necessary to draw attention to it until the remedy is applied. Small villages complain that their business is going to the larger towns, and the towns complain of the cities. Small manufacturers complain at the consolidations and so-called monopolies, which are becoming as marked a feature in Canada as elsewhere. Retail shopkeepers complain at the great establishments now common in many cities, where almost anything may be bought at a margin of profit which is ruinous to the smaller dealer. Unfortunately some people view these changes as abnormal, and seem to be waiting for a return to former conditions. In the meantime the merchant, manufacturer, or shopkeeper who finds himself at a disadvantage tries to meet the situation by the same old method of too long and too large credits, prices which leave too slender margin for profit, and added expenses in trying to meet his better situated competitors. But these changes, which have concentrated business in larger centres and stronger hands, are but a part of the great centralization in commerce, labor, and so many things, which is one of the most prominent developments of the last decade or two. We have applied the wonderful machinery of the age to the better organization of trade, and as this goes on with remorseless strides the small centres of the world lose their importance, and, distance being practically lessened, the area controlled by larger cities or larger business organizations is enormously increased. The farmer's wife does not so often ride in a wagon five or ten miles to the nearest village to make her purchases, but with a Saturday half-ticket goes by rail twenty or thirty miles to the nearest town or city, and with less loss of time and greater ease. The merchant or manufacturer orders his merchandise from the uttermost parts of the earth, by cable if he chooses, with certainty as to the time of its arrival. The farmer raises food on the Western prairies with no thought as to who will eat it, and thus furnishes food for outlandish folks thousands of miles away, of whom he has never heard.

This is a state of things which has brought too much ruin to individuals to warrant one in saying that it is an unmixed good, but it is a change permanent enough to demand that we should meet it with a more ready change of front than we at present offer. We talk vaguely about over-production as the source of many evils in trade, but there are many varieties of over-production. We have produced thousands of new houses in Toronto, clearly not required by the population, but it may not be these which are left vacant eventually, but the older and less attractive houses. In the same way we have a distinct over-production of shopkeepers and other men in business, and the men with the newest methods are apt to drive the others out. If business men find their trade or profits going from them, hard as it may be, they should meet such a state of affairs promptly by turning to some industry in which there is not over-production at the moment. All grumbling to the contrary notwithstanding, there is no over-production in Canadian farming at the moment, and the return from the honest industry of a farmer in Ontario or the North-West is greater proportionately than in any of the ordinary callings of men with which I am acquainted."

SIZE OF FRUIT PACKAGES.

The sizes of most packages for fruits and vegetables vary in locations, says the Rural New Yorker. For example, the Cape Cod cranberry crate holds thirty-two quarts, while a New Jersey crate holds thirty quarts. Cabbages, cauliflowers, lettuce and sometimes egg plants come in barrel crates. Beets, green peas, string beans, tomatoes, onions and some other similar articles are in crates holding about a bushel. The smallest bushel crates come from Bermuda and the largest from Norfolk. Charleston sends large quantities of octagonal crates. Tomatoes from Key West come in crates holding about a peck apiece, each tomato being wrapped in paper. When potatoes in bulk are sold by the barrel, 180 pounds are counted a barrel. The barrels have a capacity of 165 pounds of packed tubers. English and Scotch potatoes come in 168 pound sacks. All the coarse vegetables, as well as apples, etc., come in ordinary barrels, holding about two and a quarter bushels. A keg of pears means about a bushel. Some barrels, evidently made on a fence machine, with the pickets close together, are used for cheap and light vegetables from the south. A barrel made from splints, something like a basket, is sometimes seen. A dozen of celery usually means a dozen roots, though it happens sometimes, when the roots are small, two or more roots are counted as one.

CREAMERY BUTTER EXHIBITION.

An exhibition of creamery butter will be held under the auspices of the Ontario Creameries Association, in the town of Harriston, at the time of holding the annual convention of that association, in the second week of January, 1893, when the following five prizes in each class will be offered for competition:—

- (1) Butter not less than 100 lbs., made before July 10, 1892, in package or packages, suitable for export—$20, $15, $10, $5, $3.
- (2) Butter not less than 100 lbs., made after July 10 and before September 10, 1892, in package or packages suitable for export—$20, $15, $10, $5, $3.
- (3) Butter not less than 100 lbs., made after September 10 and before December 10, 1892, in package or packages suitable for export—$20, $15, $10, $5, $3.
- (4) Butter not less than 50 lbs., made first week in January, 1893, in any style of package, prints or rolls, suitable for home market—$20, $15, $10, $5, $3.

All exhibitors must be members of the Association. An entrance fee of 25 cents must accompany each entry. Arrangements for cold storage have been made with Mr. R. Y. Fish, Waterloo, Ontario, for all butters entered in classes 1 and 2, at a rate of 10 cents per hundred lbs. per month, which charge, together with other charges, such as cooperage, brining of butters, unpaid freights, and freights from Waterloo to Harriston at time of exhibition, will be charged against such butter. Butters entered in classes 3 and 4, must be shipped direct to the Secretary of the Association, Harriston, of which further notice will be given. Only such butters in classes 1 and 2, as are put in cold storage as above, will be eligible for competition. Butters for competition in Class 1 must reach Waterloo not later than July 13th; in Class 2, not later than September 13th. Ship to John Hannah, Secretary, care of R. Y. Fish, Waterloo, Ontario. Advise R. Y. Fish at time of shipment. All butter exhibited must be the property of and made by the exhibitor. All entries should be made with the Secretary at least one week previous to the date of closing in each class. Exhibitors who do not accompany their exhibit can have the same sold or reshipped by giving the Secretary notice.

EVAPORATED CREAM.

Below is shown a good photo of The Helvetia Milk Condensing Co.'s works at Highland, Ill., together with an exact cut (reduced size) of the cans in which they put up their "Highland Brand" Evaporated Cream. Our travelling representative had the pleasure of being shown through this establishment by the Manager and Secretary-treasurer, J. Wildi. The explanation of their process brought out the difference between the ordinary condensed milk and the Evaporated Cream. Sugar condensed milk is evaporated after being sweetened, but theirs is what is known as the sterilizing process, by which all germs of any disease that might be in the fresh milk are destroyed. The milk is put up unsweetened and can be used in any way that milk before it is condensed can be used.

The firm started in a small way in 1885, and now employ some 75 to 100 hands. In and around Highland, is one of the best sections of stock raising land in the United MINCING LANE.

In the year 1810, soon after the trade in foreign produce passed practically out of the hands of the Old East India Company, the merchants and brokers in the colonial trade formed what is now known as the London Commercial Sale Rooms, Limited, whereby they might facilitate the gathering of commercial news and dispose of their cargoes of produce by public and private sale. The foundation stone was laid in the year 1811 by the then Lord Mayor, on June 1st, in presence of members of the corporation and the commercial world, accompanied by the band of the East India Company, with all the usual city grandeur. In the words of the official report: "The Lord Mayor having received a bottle of rum as a British Colonial production, broke the same on the stone, and afterwards a bottle of wine, the produce of Portugal, the brave and faithfully of Great Britain, and pronounced the name of the institution to be the 'London Commercial Sale Rooms.'" As may be supposed, the party, requiring some refreshments after such great exertions, proceeded to an "elegant cold collation," where the Lord Mayor, in an eloquent and loyal speech, said "the tyrant of Europe cast unceasingly an envious eye upon this happy island and longed but would long in vain for her ships, her colonies, and her commerce."

It was not for many years that the advantages of the institution thus formed were quate, and there are in course of erection more commodious and commanding premises, which are to be worthy of their name, to meet the demands of the 1,500 subscribers.

It hardly seems credible that, in place of the auctions now held, by which goods are catalogued and sold by public bidding, buying used to be done in the following queer way: Merchants having goods to sell would take them or rather samples to the salerooms. These would be placed upon the benches, which can yet be pointed out, and by the side of each sample would be placed a candle, which was lighted when the first bidder arrived. He had to record the amount he offered for the goods to be sold on a slate, also by the side of the sample. The next bidder who came would then, if he would give a higher price, record his bid in a like manner, and so on until the candle had burned away, by which time the man who had recorded the highest bid was declared the buyer. Another queer custom which to-day would be looked upon with amazement was the way in which samples of New Porto Rica sugars were tested, which came to hand about the usual time that green gooseberries were to be had. Buyers would attend the sale rooms with their pockets full of these sour berries, schoolboy fashion, and, having cut one in half, would proceed alternately to eat the sugar and the gooseberry, until they had made up their minds as to the value of the sugar, and so on round the whole row of samples.

Mincing Lane as a market, comprising not only the "warrens" which front upon it, but also many of the neighboring streets, lanes, courts, etc., is undoubtedly one of the most important centres of commerce in the world. One comes in contact here with the great tea merchants, brokers, and dealers and the great sugar merchants, manufacturers and brokers, who are perhaps hardly less important than what is known as the Tea Trade, and again a vast number of equally influential members and branches of all trades allied to that of the grocers, who are consequently also influentially established, not to mention the hundred and one other trades, such as coffee, cocoa, wines and spirits, spices, shellac, hides and skins—in fact all the innumerable articles of daily use, which are without exception all sold, if not wholly at least to a very great extent, through the London commercial sale rooms.—Manchester Grocers' Review.

THE CANADIAN GROCER is one of our most valuable and interesting exchange and is so ably and carefully edited that its articles are widely copied by trade papers throughout the United States, and should be read with interest and profit by all grocers on this side of the line as well as Canadians. It is published weekly, at Toronto, contains 32 pages, and is only two dollars per year, and often a single number would be worth the price of a year's subscription to any enterprising tradesman who desires to keep posted in commercial affairs.—Detroit Herald of Commerce.

States, with an abundance of spring water, which is the principal requisite for the production of good milk. The company manufacture their own cans, which are tested before being filled. They have an immense trade in the Western States, and also do a large export trade. In Manitoba, N. W. T., and British Columbia, their goods are found on nearly all first-class grocers' shelves, as well as on the western part of Ontario. A number of travelling men are kept constantly on the road, and are under the personal management of Mr. Wildi, who has worked faithfully, and has realized that there's always room at the top.

recognised, and it was to all appearance a failure; in fact, so much so that for many years the sale rooms were designated "Martin's Folly," after the name of their chief promoter, and the shares were to be obtained at the price of £17 per cent. But like many other great ventures, the Sale Rooms, with the development of the produce trades in the hands of private enterprise, gradually obtained their proper recognition, and are now an essential in the tea and produce market of the world; indeed the requirements of the trade have become so great that the present buildings are quite inade-

A COFFEE CASE IN COURT.

In the action against W. H. McLaren, Hamilton, the Crown obtained a verdict of $5. It will be remembered that Mr. McLaren was charged with selling coffee compound in violation of the law, and was billed for $94. Mr. McLaren determined to fight the matter, and did so with the above result. The following is a short account of the proceedings in this case, from the Hamilton Herald:—

James Watson, of Ottawa, Food Inspector of the Inland Revenue Department, appointed under the Adulteration Act, related how, on Oct. 9, 1891, he called at W. H. McLaren's store and purchased a pound of coffee, for which he paid 30 cents. After completing the purchase, he told the clerk who served him that he intended to have the coffee analyzed by the public analyst. He divided it into three parcels, leaving one in the store, sending a second to the Minister of Inland Revenue, and the third to Dr. W. H. Ellis, Toronto.

Dr. Ellis, public analyst, told of his examination of the sample forwarded to him, and stated that he found it a mixture of coffee with other substances, chiefly peas or beans, with a little of some other starchy material and some chicory. About one-fourth or one-third of the package consisted of coffee.

Representatives of the three city papers were put in the box to give evidence regarding a letter bearing on the case published over the defendant's signature, but they were unable to enlighten Lawyer Walker regarding the communication.

W. F. Walker, Q.C., read from the depositions of the defendant, in which the main facts of the crown's case were admitted, and an extract from the Herald identified as a copy of the letter written by McLaren bearing on the matter. This closed the case for the prosecution.

Lawyer Carscallen moved for a non-suit, on the ground that the act was intended to apply to wholesale dealers, and not to retailers, and for other cases.

Judge Muir took the notion into his consideration, and this morning decided against the defendant's council. No evidence was offered for the defence, and Lawyer Walker began his address to the jury, in the course of which he drew attention to a circular issued by H. H. Laing, who has been an interested spectator of the proceedings, and which he said looked very much like contempt of court.

In his address on defendant's behalf Lawyer Carscallen laid great stress on the fact that suit had not been brought in at the Police Court, where the cost would have been slight, instead of at the sessions where the expenses must necessarily be heavy. On other grounds he made a strong plea for his client.

Judge Muir's charge was rather unfavorable to the defendant, and the jury, after a brief consideration, returned a verdict for the minimum penalty of $5.

The question of costs was reserved.

SETTLING THAT LITTLE BILL.

The debt collector's life is not strewn with roses, and the comedies and tragedies in real in which he is cast develop phases of human nature not encountered in other pursuits. His services are essential when the harsher means of compelling debtors to respect their obligations are resorted to, and the experience through which he passes oftentimes possesses a peculiar interest.

When the bond investment and skyrocket endowment companies were in high feather, there was an immense increase in small debts. Grocery bills ran up to high figures; coalyard men were worked for credit, rent fell behind, and doctors had to whistle for their money. Hundreds of citizens, who otherwise scorned the idea of asking to be trusted, were willing to take time on their bills while meeting their assessments. It was a pure speculation, and the creditors themselves were confident that when the bountiful companies began their prestidigitation in turning out $100 for about a quarter of the amount, their tills would be immediately replenished.

But in the bulk of such cases the $100 never came—the rich endowment endowed somebody else. The creditors lost confidence with a snap and demanded payment. "It's an ill wind," etc., and the debt collector reaped quite a harvest from the victims of this swindle. It is safe to say that many bills allowed to run in the struggle to keep up with the demands of the investment and endowment sharks hang now like lead around the necks of the deluded members, and settlement is a matter of privation and petty sacrifice.

The trustee process, formerly so extensively employed as the legal lever to secure the collection of claims, has of late years been quite generally discarded.

"I have had many amusing, as well as pathetic incidents come under my observation," said a collector a few days since. "When I call for the first time upon a debtor with a claim I can tell almost immediately whether or not it is a just bill by the man's manner. If the bill is a just one, the debtor generally proceeds to narrate a cleverly conceived fabrication to establish the fact that he is not liable for its payment. He is either suave or indignant. Rarely does he maintain his equanimity or even attempt to preserve a calm exterior, for his manner is generally assumed. If the claim is presented through an error, misapprehension or mistake, the alleged debtor is in the majority of cases pliant, satisfactorily explaining the affair. The blusterer, the man who refuses point blank to pay a claim, is the easiest to subdue; and when the pressure is applied is as meek and submissive as a being as one cares to deal with.

"It is interesting to see how men will try to evade paying debts honestly contracted, and the disregard they manifest of the creditor's financial condition is magnificent. Their splendid assurance is also entitled to reverential respect, for it commands it. The debtor who quotes the law to you is one of the most interesting of men to meet. Blackstone and Coke are not in it with him, and as for the public statutes, they are of no more consequence in a consideration of the case than Dante's 'Inferno.' He knows the law, and has passed far beyond the point where he can learn anything. This specimen is also easy to conquer.

"The man who has a good case of defence rarely cares to argue the dispute with you. He places the matter in the hands of a lawyer, to whom you are referred. We encounter many strange experiences, and our duties are not always pleasant and agreeable. If I were to tell of the actual financial condition of many business men supposed to be conducting a safe business, it would cause no end of embarrassment, for I have peculiar opportunities of learning many things concerning men's business affairs that I could not in honor impart."

Debtors of Lynn retail merchants a few years ago frequently received demands for the settlement of accounts through collection agencies. The letters in circular form, were generally inclosed in large envelopes, with various prominent designs or inscriptions printed thereon, such as, "The Bad Debt Collection Agency," "Honesty is the best policy," "Pay as you go and then you won't owe," and similar suggestive lines, all intended to strike terror to the heart of the person by whom it was received. On one form of envelope the skull and crossbones was printed, and all kinds of designs calculated to inform the general public, or such a portion of it as might see the wrapper, of the nature of the missive, were conspicuously placed on the intimidating circular, which threatened the most disagreeable consequences if the alleged claim was not satisfied within a certain length of time.

"If this bill is not paid within 10 days," proceeded one circular, "we will post you as a dead beat from one end of the country to the other, and you will ever afterward be unable to obtain credit in any retail store not only in the city in which you live, but in every town and city in the United States."

The sending of these threatening epistles through the mail has been pronounced unlawful, and this had the effect of causing several collection agencies to give up business.—New England Grocer.

HOW RAISINS ARE PRODUCED.

The process of converting grapes into raisins is very simple. When the grapes are thoroughly ripened they are picked in bunches, with their stems, and laid upon boards with wooden frames, slanting at an elevation of forty-five degrees towards the west, or on sandy ground sloping so that the afternoon sun can be utilized. Coarse cloth is used to cover them at night to keep off any dew, if there should be any. It should be borne in mind that there is no rain here in summer, or the grapes could not thus be cured. They are then turned over from time to time, until, at the end of two or three weeks, they become raisins, some appearing on the stems just as the branches come from the original stock, while others are picked from the stems and packed singly by hand into boxes. The muscatel grape makes the largest raisin. They are very delicate, and will not bear transshipment. The vines are usually planted eight feet apart, and are never trailed, but are permitted to grow as bushes, not reaching ordinarily over four feet in height. They are cultivated by keeping the grass out from between the rows and the soil loose. The bunches are sometimes turned toward the sun while growing on the vine to ripen the fruit which hangs in clusters near the ground. The Denia grapes are dipped in hot lye, as already explained, and hence are cured much quicker than other grapes, but present a less attractive appearance than the Malaga variety. One Muscatel grape-vine, about 130 years old, grows in an annex to a coffee house here, and has not been attacked by disease. Its trunk is one foot in diameter, and its luscious fruit hangs in large bunches on trellis work over the heads of customers while they sip their wines and eat their ice creams in the cool of the evening.—Horticultural Times.

Maria Payette will do business in confectionery, sweets, tobacco, etc., under the name of M. Payette & Co.

Auguste Dionne and Thomas Dionne (Dionne & Cie), dealers in vegetables, poultry, etc., have dissolved partnership.

Ald. Wm. Farrell, wholesale wine merchant, has returned from a trip to New York, which was extended over two weeks.

While out boating on Saturday, last, L.

Dobbin had a narrow escape from being drowned. Mr. Dobbin is Canadian agent for Schepp's cocoa-nut, and several other lines.

Chas. Gyde, Montreal agent for Cleaver's Soap and Day and Martin's Blacking, is in the west. Mr. Gyde reports the sale of soap larger this year than ever before. This well known soap is in better demand with the trade every day.

T. J. Cooke & Co., Canadian agents for Hire's celebrated Root Beer has received the following post card from Christiania, Norway.

Saw your add in CANADIAN GROCER. Kindly send sample.

(S'gd) C. F. SONTUM & COY.

This goes to show that THE GROCER has a world wide reputation.

The following telegram has been sent to Hon. J. S. Hall, Provincial Treasurer, Quebec:—"Corn Exchange Association strenuously objects to tax of one hundred dollars on wholesale merchants, being fixed irrespective of amount of business, stock or rental, as thus the small wholesale dealer with stock of only five hundred dollars will be liable to the same extent as the largest and wealthiest."

DRY GOODS.

The trade during the past week has been quite satisfactory. The sorting up trade has continued quite active and the demand has been for sateens, embroideries, and Victoria lawns especially, but all classes of summer fabrics have received attention. Fabric gauntlets and gloves have been in very strong demand, and stocks are almost depleted. Novelties of various kinds have had a good sale, leather belts especially having a good market. Letter orders have been quite brisk and considerable in volume, consisting as usual of a variety which extends over almost every line in the trade, but more especially for that class of goods which do not need discrimination in regard to shade and pattern.

This week will probably finish the sorting-up trade, and travellers are returning and preparing their fall and winter samples. Fall orders continue encouraging, although the buying is by no means reckless.

Canadian Tweeds seem to be having a greater share of attention for fall and winter suitings, orders being quite good in comparison with those for the imported goods, although it is too early yet to predict the value of the orders in total.

Cotton half-hose is scarce in some of the houses, but others are well stocked.

NOTES.

W. R. Brock & Co. are having an extra demand for rough chevots for fall suitings. The demand has been so strong that, notwithstanding their heavy stock, some of the lines are already exhausted. Their range is extensive. They are also showing some very nice brown suitings of Canadian manufacture. These goods appear to be excellent value.

Just now John Macdonald & Co. are showing a splendid range of corsets from Canadian, American and British manufacturers. They are sole agents for Thompson & Co.'s celebrated glove fitting corsets, which are giving good satisfaction to the trade.

Caldecott, Burton and Spence have received their shipments of Victoria lawns and check muslins, from their cable repeats which were necessitated by the great sale experienced for these goods. Several cases of buttons, mainly jets and pearls, have also arrived. They have just received some beautiful Japanese merchandise in silk dress goods and silk handkerchiefs which are very attractive.

Wyld, Grasset & Darling have received a fresh shipment of a full range in ladies' and children's stainless hosiery. They are showing a low line of cotton ribbed vests in ladies' wear. In gloves, they have some special lines in silk and taffeta. Just now this firm is making a specialty of small wares and novelties, and their trade is showing a marked increase in these lines. They are quoting special prices in ladies' belts to clear. Their range of imported woollens is extensive and worthy of the consideration of the trade.

John Macdonald & Co. are showing three special ranges in tablings and towellings and two special drives in cretons. Boating serges, especially twills in black and navy blue, are an attractive thing and their range of ladies' cloth is good. In pongee silks they are showing a nice line, 22 inches wide and comprising all the colors. This house is offering special value in a job line of overalls and also in harvest mits, which are shown in 10, 12, 14 and 16 inch, and at prices no higher than last season. Several cases of chenille curtains have been opened, and also an extensive shipment of oil cloths.

Gordon, MacKay & Co. are showing several lines in Canadian tweeds in browns, tans, and grey mixtures, which are very attractive and of extra good value. In black worsted trouserings they are showing some very pretty stripes from the best English manufacturers. This house has an extra fine line of 45 inch black flouncings in black and colored embroidery. In kid gloves they are showing a very fine line of gauntlets on which they are quoting a special price, which the shrewd dealer should investigate. They are quoting special clearing prices in delaines, challies and tweed effects, in order to clear. In their linen department they are showing extra value in loom dice, loom damask and bleached damask tablings; also roller and glass towellings; rough browns; fronting and embroidery linens; and damask napkins. They have also an extra stock of cotton and cashmere half hose.

No young man can possibly have mistaken his calling who finds in it what the world wants done

(PATENTED JULY, 1891.)

These cuts represent our new Fruit and Preserve Jars which we are now introducing to the Canadian Trade, and in doing so, desire to draw your attention to the advantages they possess over those made of glass and other material.

The Jars are manufactured from a mixture of English and Pennsylvania clays, making a stronger and better article than can be produced from any other combination.

We use only a pure Bristol Stoneware Glaze, which is free from Lead or other Metallic substances readily attacked by all acids. We guarantee the body to be thoroughly vitrified and absolutely acid proof.

These Jars will be found superior to all other articles in use for the preservation of Fruits, etc. Being non-transparent, the action of light cannot fade the color or ferment fruits kept in them, as is the case where glass is used, and being a non-conductor of heat, preserves are kept at a more uniform temperature than in either glass or tin, and will be free from the unpleasant metallic taste so frequently noticed where tin is used.

They are made in various sizes and are for sale by all Crockery and Grocery Dealers in Canada.

HOT WEATHER HINTS.

Sudden hot spells warn us of the approach of dog days, when the muggy atmosphere and high temperature play havoc with everybody's comfort. The next ten weeks form a trying period with grocers, many of whom will throw the earnings of past months into the refuse heap. Carelessness and an indisposition to watch stock in hot weather are the reasons commonly given for an inexcusable waste of resources.

American Club House cheese is a dainty relish, but one requiring care in handling, viz., a cool, dry place. And yet we have seen it exposed to the direct rays of the sun and in a place where the jars catch dust and form a resting place for insects. Can anything be imagined better calculated to make the goods unsalable?

Olive oil, pickles in mustard, are exposed to the sun and kept in a room where a high temperature and a vitiated atmosphere make life a burden. The result, many dollars of damage and in case such heat-stricken goods have been sold, disgusted customers.

Meats are neglected, simply because they are not inspected twice every day and kept in a proper place.

The cheese is not cared for; the butter left to take care of itself, and its surroundings fetid and untidy.

The brine on the mackerel is not kept sweet and fresh, with the result that a mess of rusty fish is to be sold for a nickel. Codfish are exposed to damp and heat, soon to become unsalable.

Moisture and foul odors affect tea, coffee, salt, butter, dried fruits, crackers and other articles of a susceptible nature; hence, the greatest care must be exercised to keep the store cool, dry and well ventilated, particularly at night. No store should be without proper means of ventilation, the cellar as well as the main salesroom. Arrange the windows and transoms so as to afford a free circulation of air when the store is closed. The openings can be protected at small expense by screens.

Above all things, do not show fruits and vegetables in untidy packages or where exposed to the sun, dust and dirt. Keep them fresh, clean and inviting. Some of the out-of-door exhibits of perishable green goods, to be seen on the streets of our cities, would rob an Italian scavenger of an appetite.

Disregard of proper precaution to keep the summer stock fresh and in perfect condition works an injury to the manufacturers of proprietary articles. When such are injured by exposure or heat they are generally sold as sound goods, and being found imperfect, the consumer forms an unjustifiable prejudice against them, to the permanent injury of the retailer, jobber and manufacturer.

It is possible to keep the grocery clean, cool and inviting during the hot season. It may require neglect of ball match, trotting match, picnic, fishing excursion, but it means pleased customers, an enviable reputation for keeping the best store in town, and insurance against loss.—American Grocer.

THE INFLUENCE OF WOMEN.

The delegation of young men from a wholesale grocery house had been shown into the reception room at their employer's residence, and, when his wife entered, all rose awkwardly and seemed ill at ease.

"We are employed at your husband's store," explained one of them at length.

"Indeed!" she said, in some surprise. "I am very glad to see you, but to what am I indebted for this call?"

"Well," said the spokesman, plucking up a little courage, "you see it's just this way: We've been getting off at 3 o'clock Saturdays during the summer, and now we want to make it 12 or 1 o'clock if we can."

"The ball grounds are quite a distance away," put in one of the delegation.

"And we have to start early to get to the races," added another.

"Really, you must excuse me," said the mistress of the house courteously but firmly. "I never interfere in my husband's business affairs."

"Oh, we don't want you to," protested two or three together.

"You see," said the spokesman, getting down to business again, "it's just this way. We want you to be kind and nice and pleasant to him for a few days and then we'll go to him and ask him to—"

"Gentlemen!" she exclaimed haughtily.

"Might ask him to take you to the ball game," suggested one of the young men without noticing her manner.

"Or the races," added another.

"There is an inference, gentlemen—," she began, but the spokesman interrupted.

"Oh, I know all about it," he said. "I'm married myself. Things go wrong in the house and you're tired and cross at breakfast. Then we suffer at the office. You stay up late to chaperon your daughter at a ball, and we have more trouble at the office. You're a bit cross three mornings in succession, for one reason or another, and we have a— a terrible time at the store."

"I was discharged from an office once because my wife was cross the same morning that my boss's was," exclaimed one young man. "I suppose our wives would have chatted pleasantly if they had met, but there was an explosion when we met. He was ugly about something, and I fired back, and he 'fired' me. That's one way it goes now; if you'd make it a point to be particularly agreeable and pleasant to him for—say four days—"

"Yes, four days will do nicely," broke in the spokesman. "Then we'll go to him, and everything will be all right. The fourth day you give him the best breakfast you can—everything that he likes best—and we'll get what we want in three minutes. Talk about a woman having no influence in business! Why, the humor she's in has more effect than a bank failure or a boom in trade."

She thought she ought to be angry, but instead she laughed, agreed to the proposition, and four days later when they waited on the head of the firm he made the closing hour 12 o'clock, and said that never in the history of the firm had things run as satisfactorily as they had during the last four days.—Grocery World.

THE MAN AND THE RAISINS.

A story is told of a merchant in a neighboring town who had for a customer a "nibbler." All grocers have more or less experience with this class, but our hero being of an inquiring turn, wished to satisfy himself of the exact amount one man would nibble. Accordingly he opened one day an elegant box of raisins, and placed them on the counter just as the nibbler entered. Instructions were given to sell none from that box, but at the end of forty-one days the box was empty—all eaten by one man. He was called on to pay his bill, which at that time was $40, the profit on which was probably $3, while the raisins were worth $3.25. The grocer then plainly talked to his customer with the result of convincing him that his nibbling ought to cease. Since then he has paid spot cash and nibbled not a bit.—American Grocer.

The grape crop on Pelee Island will scarcely be up to the standard, but will be a good one. Grapes on the mainland will produce more abundantly than on the island this year.

Dr. R. S. Gibbs, well known to readers of The Detroit Herald of Commerce under the nom de plume of O. P. Deldoc—a pen-name by the way that is never subscribed to anything dull—dropped in to see us on Friday. Dr. Gibbs is a conscientious as well as clever writer, as his work on our progressive contemporary shows.

Pincombe & Sutherland, Strathroy, Ont., have just completed their new roller mill, and are turning out some good samples of flour, oat and corn meals. They manufacture the "White Eagle Brand" of rolled oatmeal, which will be their leader. The mill is built with the latest and best improved machinery and has a capacity of 150 barrels per day.

A very large canning factory will the Strathroy Canning and Preserving Co. have at Strathroy. A representative of THE GROCER had the pleasure of being shown through the place last week. The building is five story high, and in a good fruit section of the country. They expect to turn out a good many cases of goods this fall. Watch for their advertisement in THE GROCER later on.

Mr. Henry Swan, of Swan Bros., grocers, King street, Toronto, is taking an extended trip through Manitoba and the Northwest Territories. He writes Mr. Armstrong, of Armstrong & Cook, Toronto, and says that letters and books can give no adequate idea of the country, that you must see it to be fairly impressed with its greatness. Mr. Swan goes through to the Pacific Coast, returning about the middle of July.

The other day Mr. Johnston, a merchant at Lamlash, in the township of Bentinck, was driving with a man named Glave between Lamlash and Hanover, when the horse they were driving took fright and ran away. Johnston told his comrade to jump. 'ave jumped free of the rig and is unhurt, Johnston in jumping caught his foot in the sulkey and was dragged a considerable distance and killed. He leaves a widow and several children.

Notice is published in the Canada Gazette that application will be made on the 16th July for the grant of a charter of incorporation to a company to be called "The British America Starch Company" (Limited.) One of the objects set forth is to acquire the real estate, plant and factory of the British America Starch Works Company, George Foster & Co. (Limited.) The operations of the new company are to be carried on in Brantford, and the capital stock is to be $150,000. The following are the applicants: George Foster, Wynn Ellis, Alfred J. Wilkes, Frank M. Foster, and Joseph Ruddy.

THE GROCER was favored with a visit on Tuesday from two esteemed subscribers—Mr. McCormick, the senior partner in A. McCormick & Son, London, and Mr. Liddell, of Strathroy. To visits such as these THE GROCER owes not only a great deal of pleasure but also a great deal of trade knowledge, as it is impossible to talk with men of a good class of experience without benefit.

F. F. Dally & Co., Hamilton, have got out a novel advertising device intended for passing from hand to hand. It ensnares the attention through the medium of curiosity. It is about 5 inches by 2 inches in area, is headed "Instantaneous Photography," a circular orifice is cut through one fold of the paper of which it is made, a movable bit of paste board acts as a screen for a picture within this circle, and the recipient is asked to gaze on that blank and then suddenly pull the slip. "Use Spanish Blacking" is the legend he beholds surrounding like a halo the head of a gorilla.

Here is an example of what modern carrying facilities can do in bringing about startling economic changes: Four years ago a company purchased 35 square miles of land in Dines, Cuba. That piece of land was then dense forest. Half of it is now cleared and 9,000 acres of it is a banana plantation. Broad roads have been laid out, a town of 3,500 inhabitants has grown up, and nine steamers are kept running throughout the year to carry the banana product to New York.

Regarding a complaint made by a wholesale grocer that packers were selling canned goods direct to the retail trade, a member of the Canadian Packers' Association states in one of the daily newspapers that "on account of so many manufactories starting and the encouragement given them by certain wholesale grocers to have more competition. I expect it will be a go-as-you-please this season in selling. It is strange that the complaint should come from—, a firm who have fought the Guild so long."

Mr. Decker, of the Black & Clawson Co., of Watertown, N.Y., was at Hull last week. He had a long and close talk with Mr. E. B. Eddy, the President, and Mr. G. H. Miller, one of the directors, and the general mechanical superintendent of the E. B. Eddy Paper Co., the result of which is that another new machine will likely be added to the Eddy Co.'s already very large plant. Nothing succeeds like success, is an old saying that is daily being proved by the wonderful strides made in the paper industry within the past few months. It has not leaked out yet just what class of paper the newest machine will be turned on to, but as the output of the three large machines now running at the Eddy Paper Mills is being absorbed, and as there is a call for a better class of book papers, doubtless the company has in view the supplying of an A1. grade of extra print, book and such like papers.

SURPRISE SOAP ON WHEELS.

The Surprise Soap people are certainly hustling things in good shape to make every woman in Ontario know and use their Surprise Soap. The amount of money this concern has spent in the last two or three years in advertising their soap would make a good sized fortune for any man. It shows an abundance of faith in their soap. From all reports, too, it fully merits their expenditure, as the soap is selling in every part of Canada. The makers claim it is the merits of the soap that make it the popular article it is today. The advertising calls attention to the soap; the soap itself makes the sale. Their latest venture to push Surprise Soap is a grand sampling outfit. The main body of the wagon represents a cake of Surprise Soap—the same color as the soap, the same shape exactly. This cake stands out by itself and is very showy. It is attached to the front part of the wagon, a regular coach front, in which sit the driver and two young men in Surprise uniform, who deliver the samples from house to house. Our fine looking grey horses with fancy harnessing draw the rig. The whole effect is very striking. An adequate description can hardly be given, but people who have seen it say it is the finest thing ever seen in Canada or in fact anywhere. The turnout goes all over Ontario giving samples of "Surprise Soap" from time to time, giving everyone a chance to see exactly what the soap is. All of this sampling, the Surprise Soap people say, is for the purpose of getting people to actually try and test the soap. They have no doubt that when once its merits are known it will be practically the universal soap. If push and enterprise, combined with first-class quality, is anything, the St. Croix Soap Co. with their Surprise Soap are bound to get there, and what is more to the point they have got there, but evidently want to get "there still further."

TORONTO, June, 30 1892.
GROCERIES.

Trade is undoubtedly a matter of better volume, but it shows no improvement in the matter of profits. The demand for sugar would seem to be at the mercy of the wholesalers for the moment, as long as the fruit season lasts, but the price of sugar from wholesale hands weakens. Though Valencia raisins are very firm outside and likely to be scarce here before long, they are for the most part selling at prices that ruled when the market was in its flattest state. Canned goods though selling freely show no signs of advancing. Scarcity or the extremity of the demand, alike fail to work up prices in anything but canned salmon, which alone has made an upward movement in response to a strong call on a market that is almost bare. Wholesalers are not less desirous of selling goods, however, than they are when prices are better. They continue to push business, and apparently would like to have a good deal more of it to do. Wet weather, haying and the loss of one day in the week have tended to make trade rather lighter than it would otherwise be. Payments are up to the average but wholesalers complain that they are small, the invoices this season being for small quantities bought on the verge of need as a general rule. The local trade was considerably benefited by the visit of the Knights of St. John, as not only was there a large assemblage of delegates here for some days, but their presence was the cause of a large muster of visitors who were not members of the order but were interested in the proceedings.

COFFEE.

While the demand is not very urgent in any grade, trade would certainly be the better of a fuller stock of superior Rios, the want of which has for a long time acted as a restriction upon business. Common grades are in steady request at 17½ to 19c. There is no abatement of the firmness that was noted last week in Javas. For colory stock 24c. upwards must be paid, and for very choice varieties the price reaches up from 36 to 38c. Since no more stock can be had of this grade from the primary market, the situation is strong.

DRIED FRUITS.

Valencia raisins, which some time ago everybody was anxious to sell, promise not to be very bad property to holders in the next two months. In New York, where the quantity held was embarrassing importers, and where some wretchedly low prices were conceded to Canadian buyers some time ago, they are confronted by a prospect of absolute bareness in a little while, and inquiries have been sent abroad for additional supplies. Notwithstanding that the surplus held at Denia at the close of April was large, prices from there have been quoted too high for the New York importers, so that all the indications point to a general betterment in the situation that no one looked for two months ago. Now we could hardly get any raisins laid down here from New York at less than 4¼c. But our jobbers are still selling a half cent below this, and probably in exceptional cases would sell their poorest off-stalks still at 3½c. There is a pretty general support, under 3¼c., however, as the minimum price. Currants are heavy, not in very active demand and not in a very promising condition for prospective firmness. There is evidently a scarcity of prime stock in Patras, though nowhere is there any lack of common currants. In prunes there is a greatly diminished call, but it matters little, as there is a rapidly vanishing, almost exhausted stock. Lemon peel is very scarce and firm at 16 to 17c.

RICE AND SPICES.

Rice has not yet got well started into the summer trade. Orders come in from time to time, but they are dictated by needs that

TORONTO.

A review of the market that takes note of more than what is happening at the moment has little to go upon, as just now inferences that are drawn from one set of conditions are likely to be counteracted by inferences drawn from another. It is certain that there is now very good sale for canned vegetables, this week's business having a record of several transactions of 50 case lots. Of course stock has not been taken yet for this month, but when it is taken it is expected to show a bigger reduction as the effect of the June demand than any other month preceding it can show. The city trade has been especially good, the call on account of the Knights of St. John being a strong one. Though fresh peas are now on the market, and selling at low prices, there is no ebb to the demand for canned peas, and the price is steady at what all staple canned vegetables are going at, viz., $1.05. Canned beans and pumpkins, which have had a very quiet time of it this year, have been selling better recently. Packers hold the bulk of these vegetables that are on the market. In fruits there is no amendment, except in apples, the demand being generally quiet and prices easy. Salmon is much more firmly held and is also pretty well concentrated and in small compass. The price here is now $1.60 for Horse Shoe, and it is all in the hands of one house. Other brands are $1.50. An advance was made at the coast on Monday to $4.80 for Horse Shoe and $4.65 for other brands. Montreal has been making enquiry for quotations from this market. The market was never so bare of salmon at this time of year before. There will be quite a loss to trade in the want of sufficient stock to last out till stock of the new pack is on hand.

The British Columbia Commercial Journal says:—The situation is strong and in favor of the salmon canners. It is learned that large lines of the 1892 pack have been sold in England at high figures. The British Columbia canners have in the past taken the greatest care in packing their fish, and have earned a high reputation on the English market. Fraser River salmon continues to increase in favor with the best classes, who have discovered that the famous "Sockeye" is the richest salmon packed on the Pacific coast. Mr. Hughes, of San Francisco, was in this market last week, buying good brands of Fraser River fish for English account. It is stated that some of the canneries have sold their entire season's pack at 22s. 6d. C. I. F. Reports as to the run of fish are expected from the Skeena by the first mail. Fishing, it is believed, began on the 15th inst.

For making tomato pulp and preparing pumpkin and squash for canning is very well known to all the canners in the United States, and a few of them are in use in Canada. The high tariff has prevented their being used extensively heretofore.

We are now manufacturing these machines at Oakville, Ont., to enable our Canadian friends to obtain them without paying a heavy duty; but we shall make only a few of them unless ordered. Those who contemplate purchasing, should send their orders promptly to insure the saving of duty, as late orders will have to be filled from stock in the United States which will be subject to a 30 per cent duty.

Says the New York Commercial Bulletin:—From all lobster canning districts the reports are invariably of shortage in the pack this season, and a fair estimate, based upon the returns received thus far, is that the aggregate pack will not be over 50 per cent. of that of last year. Some of last year's packing has been carried over, but not enough to make up for the deficiency in the current season's operations.

MONTREAL.

The features of the canned goods market during the week is the sale of salmon, of which some 4,200 boxes were closed out at $1.35, which is a trifle under Combine prices. The indications are that holders of tomatoes are going to be left in the hole with their surplus stock. There is still a large stock here which is freely offered at 90c. to $1, but we have no doubt 85c. would be accepted for a round lot. Corn is considered good property, and is firmly held at $1.05 to $1.10.

would cause a trader to renew supplies at any season of the year. Prices continue from 3½c. up.

Spices are devoid of any special interest. Sales have been generally rather small, and prices still rule low.

SUGAR.

The only change that time appears to bring about in the sugar trade on this market is to make it worse. If it develops any farther upon the same line it would be good policy for the wholesale trade to abandon sugar altogether. They are certainly making no money now. Prices are made to suit the occasion, and there is less pretence of any standard in quotations. It has been said, and there seems to be little hyperbole in the statement, that it is cheaper to buy sugar of the wholesalers than of the refiners. Several of the former are on record as making sales at very low prices, prices that go below 4½c. for granulated in five barrel lots. That price is the one quoted for car lots at Montreal, but lower prices have been made for smaller lots sold from stock here. This steady declension in price has caused a falling off in quality of most refineries, but there is a steady upholding of quality on the part of some, though their prices have to yield. The consequence is that the bulk of the trade is going to inferior sugars. It is not always inferior sugar that is wanted by retailers when they submit low orders, and they think they are providing for the receipt of the best sugar when they define their order by the term "Extra Standard." This is on all barrels containing granulated, and therefore is not a distinguishing term. The only distinguishing term is the name of the refinery. There is no need to say that the scale of variations in granulated has some wide gaps in it, and there are nearly as many grades now as there are of yellow. The sugar trade must be miserably unsatisfactory now to wholesalers who contracted for their summer supply at 47-16c. Though there is some talk still heard that others are allowed to sell all the sugar that is wanted at the prices now going, there is no getting over the fact that all who have sugar are ready enough to sell it, the opinion being evidently quite strongly rooted that this is the only way to get general custom. Yellows are not so low priced, accordingly, as granulated, the difference of 1c. being not now maintained. The lowest price generally quoted is 340c. In yellows traders are able to save themselves a little if they happen to have a good bright sample at as low a price as somebody else offers a dark one. Sales of granulated have been larger this week, a considerable car movement having taken place. Retailers in some towns club their orders together so as to make up a car and get the benefit of delivery direct from refinery. Trinidads in bags are now in stock at 3½ to 3½c.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.

A few sales of West Indian molasses in barrels have been made since last report, the price being 32c. A light business in New Orleans molasses, calling mainly for stock at about 30c., is also reported.

In syrups there is the utmost stagnation. Brokers are doing no business and jobbers have little occasion for increasing stock. Prices continue quotable from 1¼c.

TEAS.

The market is in a healthy state, a very steady undertone being felt in all lines now in stock. Medium and low grade teas are still the leaders in the demand, Japans from about 16c. being very good sellers. The course of trade, however, continues to set toward Indian and Ceylon teas, which are growing in favor very rapidly owing to their full liquoring qualities. The better grades of teas of these growths are becoming more prominent in the demand. The call for new Japans is limited by the price. The first shipment of new Moning Congous is in. The price runs from 30 to 50c. These teas were purchased at lower prices than ruled at the opening last year, owing to the great decline in value that has occurred since then. The second direct shipment of Japan teas is due in about a week. It contains a quantity of mediums.

Messrs. George White & Co., in their Report, June 16, say:—The market for Indian tea opened after the Whitsun holidays on the 8th inst. with a small sale of 475 packages, including 230 packages of new Darjeeling. These being the first arrivals, there was eagerness to secure them, doubtless owing to the scarcity of tea with quality left over from last season. An invoice from the Goomtee Estate realised an average of 1s 5¼d per lb., also one from the Moodakotee Estate of the Land Mortgage Bank of India, 1s 3¼d per lb. This week only 8,600 packages were New Season's have been brought to the hammer. A choice shipment of the Mim Co.'s growth attracted considerable attention, and sold at 1s 10d per lb. A few Assams were represented, and a break of the Assam-Frontier Co.'s Orange Pekoe fetched 1s 5½d per lb., some Dooars, also of useful quality, met with fair competition. For Darjeelings, however, the biddings were occasionally slacker, and opening rates were not maintained, chiefly owing to the quality being considered rather inferior. Eighty-one packages from the Kodanad estate, Neilgherries, brought 10½d per lb. Old Season's passed flatly, especially common and fair descriptions, which are fully ½d per lb. lower. Telegrams from Calcutta state that a sale, comprising about 10,000 packages, was held there to-day. Quality showed an improvement, and good liquoring teas were firmer.

MARKET NOTES.

[Importers, wholesale merchants and manufacturers should send any items intended for this department so that they may reach the head office not later than Wednesday morning. The editor will always welcome such information.]

A carload of salmon on the way to Warren Bros. & Boomer is said to have exhausted the stock of salmon held at the coast.

There is a strong inquiry this week from Montreal for Valencia raisins. An offer of 3½c. was refused by a prominent house on this market.

H. N. Bate & Sons, Ottawa, advise the trade by circular that they have accepted the agency in that city for Lazenby's goods. They enumerate some thirty articles of this well-known English house's manufacture which they have already in stock, and announce their intention of further extending their list of Lazenby's goods if there should be any necessity for doing so.

Since the increase in the duty on tobacco the retailer's margin on McDonald's Ingots has been a very narrow one. This was recognized from the outset by the manufacturer, but no adjustment could be made until stocks on hand at the time of the change in duty were cleared off. They are now exhausted, and with them 7's disappear. Henceforth Ingots go 8 to the pound, so that the retailer can add 10c. per lb. to whatever his margin was before. Two more recent changes of importance are, that Prince of Wales is put up now in 40 lb. instead of 75 lb. butts, and the manufacture of Lovely is discontinued.

We have received from the Ceylon Tea Planters' Company, London and New York, a sample of their Bhud tea, which is finding wide sale wherever it is offered. The methods of the Company are sure to minister very largely to the object that Ceylon tea producers have set themselves, of obtaining a strong foothold in the United States. The little treatise on tea preparation, and the cautions that go with each package will certainly prove helpful in bringing about reform in domestic methods of extraction, and will bring about reform in consumption if they lead to a general demand for quality of the standard of Bhud tea.

An old name is that of John Burgess & Son, London, and old favorites with British consumers are the Burgess sauces. Their house was founded in 1760. Their anchovies have no superior. Two unfading tributes to their merit may be found in Sir Walter Scott's St. Ronan's Well, and are worth quoting: "What the devil did he care for Burgess's Sauce, he that had eat his kouscousou, spiced with nothing but the sand of the desert? only it was a shame for Mrs. Dods to be without what every decent house, above the rank of an alehouse, ought to be largely provided with." Chap. 16. "Never mind—never mind—I shall make no bad use of what I have learned," said Touchwood. "Were you to eat your words with the best Fish Sauce, (and that is Burgess's,) I have got all the information from them I wanted." (Ch. 30.)

PETROLEUM.

There is no change to take note of. Prices are steady at 14 to 15c., and the demand is limited.

The Petrolia Advertiser reports: Petrolia crude $1.27½ per barrel; Oil Springs crude $1.28 per barrel. In the speculative market for crude there have been few features of special interest, trading for the most part having been dull and the variations in prices having been within rather narrow limits, although the tendency has been towards a lower average. The requirements of refined also have been most exclusively confined to shipments in bulk, and prices range about last week's quotation.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

Though there is a liberal supply of butter, it comes upon a market that affords a very steady demand, so that there is little accumulation. Store tubs come forward freely, and an increasing delivery of white butter is to be noted. Prices are somewhat easier. A very fair grade of tub butter sells at 12c., and there is little going above 13c. What does bring a half cent more must be exceptionally good. For white butter 10c. is the ruling value. Sales in lots of about 25 tubs

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

A very noticeable improvement is the chief feature of this week's flour shipping trade, a very considerable movement on Newfoundland and Quebec account having taken place, but at prices not up to the hopes of shippers, who, however, have wearied of holding out for better offers. The local trade is about the usual proportion. In feed things are rather quiet, with a tendency towards weakness in present quotations. The price of hay is on the easy side, and the outside figure is hard to obtain. Bran is quiet and easy as also is shorts. There is no great call for supplies of feed from any quarter. There is a better feeling in the flour trade as a consequence of the week's shipments eastward. These show that consumption must now be dependent on current purchases, having pretty well exhausted stocks bought from United States flour shippers during the disagreement between Canada and Newfoundland.

FLOUR.—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitobapatents, $4.95 to $5; strong bakers', $4.50; white wheat patents, $4.80; straight roller, $4.40; low grades, per bag, $1.25 to $1.50.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.95 to $5.00; Manitoba strong bakers' $4.45 to $4.60; Ontario patents, $4.00 to $4.25; straight roller, $3.50; extra, $3.35 to $3.40; low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.50.

MEAL.—Oatmeal is $3.80. Cornmeal is $3.50.

FEED.—Bran is $11 50 to $12, shorts $13 $14.00, mixed feed $22, feeding corn 50 to 52, oats 32 to 34½c.

HAY.—Is fairly active at $12 to $12 50 for No. 1 timothy and $10.50 to $11 for mixed.

STRAW.—Is steady at $6.50 to $7.

MONTREAL.

A fair turnover is reported for local wants at prices within range of quotations. Export enquiry is rather quiet; a few sales quoted for Lower Provinces. Prices remain nominally the same. Quotations are as follows: Patent spring, $4.85 to $4.95; patent winter, $4.80 to $4.90; straight roller, $4.30 to $4.45; extra, $3.80 to $3.95; superfine, $3.25 to $3.50; fine, $3.10 to $3.35; strong bakers, $4.45 to $4.65.

Oatmeal, very little doing outside of demand for local wants. Prices are about steady. We quote:—Granulated, bbls., $3.90 to $4.00; Rolled, bbls., $3.80 to $3.90; Standard, bbls., $3.75 to $3.85; Granulated in bags, $1.90 to $2.00; Rolled in bags, $1.90 to $2.00; Standard, in bags, $1.75 to $1.80.

The demand for bran and shorts is fairly active. Mouillie is quiet. Quotations are unchanged, as follows: Bran, $14 to $14.50; shorts, $15 to $17; mouillie, $20 to $23.

Cheese is selling quite freely at 9½c. The demand is rather more active than it was.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—The price out of store is of wide range, owing to differences in quality and in the ideas of holders. This market shows a range of $1 to $1.25.

DRIED AND EVAPORATED APPLES—The price at which jobbers are offering is 6c. for evaporated apples and 4c. for dried. Very large lots of dried could be had at 3½c.

EGGS—A decline in receipts has been a general experience this week, but it has not made any material difference in the price, which is 11c. in some houses and 10½c. in others, for firsts, while seconds are held at 10c.

HONEY—There is no prospect of prices coming up or of business making any improvement. Extracted is quoted from 5 to 7c., and sections at 12 to 14c.

HOPS—Some snug-sized parcels have changed hands this week at 23c.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW.

HIDES—Are very dull, plentiful and inclined to be easy at 4½c. for No. 1 cows' and corresponding quotations for other grades of green. Cured are unchanged at 5c.

SKINS—Pelts are unchanged at 20c., lamb-skins at 35c.

TALLOW—A quiet demand is amply met by supplies of rendered at 5c., which are resold at 5½c. Rough is 2c.

WOOL—Merchantable coming fleeces are 17c., clothing fleeces are 20c., super is 22c., extra super 25c.

VEGETABLES.

Potatoes are very druggy at 20 to 25c. for old, and new are $3.—Cabbages are $2.—Cucumbers $1.75 to $2.—Onions $2 per crate for Bermudas and $2.75 per bag for Egyptian.—Melons are 35 to 40c.

PROVISIONS.

A better demand has caused a little more firmness in the prices of smoked meats, and some houses hold out for 11c. for hams, backs and bellies alike. The trade is in moderate sized lots as a rule.

BACON—Long clear is 7¾ to 8c., smoked backs are 10½ to 11c., bellies 10½ to 11c., rolls 8¾c.

HAMS—Are steady at 10½ to 11c.

LARD—Pure is unchanged at 9¾ to 10c. for tubs and pails. Compound is steady at 7 to 9c.

BARREL PORK—U. S. heavy mess is $13 to $14, Canadian $15. short cut $16.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef is 3½ to 5c. in fore and 8 to 9c. in hindquarters, yearling lamb is 10 to 11c., Spring lamb is 13 to 16c. per lb., yearling lamb 9 to 10c., mutton 7 to 8c., veal 7 to 8½c.

GREEN FRUIT.

The approach of the first of July gave activity to the trade of this week, and fair orders and a goodly number of them were taken since Saturday last. Shipping is consequently brisk. Stock is not plentiful in all lines, notably in oranges, lemons and pineapples. The only oranges to be had are Mediterranean sweets, and they are firm at $5 to $5.25. Lemons are as stiff as ever at $5 to $5.50. Pineapples are in lower supply at 8 to 10c. Bananas range from $1.25 to $1.75, are more plentiful and easier since strawberries have come in. California fruits have been hard to sell also and fewer have been handled this week. The following are the prices: Cherries are $1.50 to $1.75, apricots $2.25 to $2.50, peaches $2.25 to $2.50, plums $3.75, strawberries are 6 to 7c.

FISH.

A quiet trade in fish continues to be done. The rains have checked the demand to some extent, as in such a condition of the weather stock is not easily handled. Prices are steady, at 14c. for salmon, 6½c. for salmon trout and whitefish, and $1.50 to $1.75 for lake herring.

SALT.

The usual June demand, which is never of considerable volume, is now being heard from.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, June 30, 1892.

The tone of the grocery market is pretty much the same as last week with no important changes to note. The wholesale trade still report a good trade doing and outside of the heavies the market is strong and firm. Sugar is still quiet and the anticipated rush the refineries predicted has not shown itself as yet. There is likely to be quite a stir in molasses during the week as a cargo is to be auctioned off to-morrow.

SUGAR.

The sugar market is still quiet refineries are waiting patiently for the preserving season to start. The wholesale trade report business quiet with them, and the sales that are being made are small and at the low prices that rule in this market. The retail trade do not seem to give the consumer the benefit of the low prices for they are selling sugar at the old price which means about the right profit for them to make. We quote: Granulated 4½ to 4 9-16c.; yellows, low grade 3½ to 3¾c., and yellows bright 3¾ to 4¼c.

TEAS.

The same movement noted last week still prevails in teas, which are as dull as heretofore. Japan stock here is considered light, but taking the demand into consideration, it is thought large enough. The new stock that arrived some time ago finds a hard market, as dealers do not seem to take hold freely at the prices asked, and although brokers are pushing sales they meet with but little success. Blacks are quiet but steady, as stocks in London are light.

Messrs. Thomas Doherty & Co., Montreal, received the following from their agents, C. P. Low & Co., Yokohama, Japan, dated June 6, 1892: Our market is not yet in shape for the execution of your good orders, but we are watching carefully for a favorable opportunity, and hope soon to be able to advise that we can make shipment of satisfactory teas. Continuous buying prevents any decline in the price of teas, and the market is now fully two dollars per picul higher than last month, while compared with previous season, prices are six or seven dollars per picul over same time last year. The fact is now established that the first crop will show a shortage of about 20 per cent as compared with last season, but this is due almost entirely to the absence of low grades, which were very plentiful in last year's first crop. As the season progresses, the inferiority of the crop becomes more apparent, the leaf being of so different a character, that it is almost impossible to match any given sample of last year's tea in style, and color, though in cup' some of them are very attractive, and so make up for poor appearance. Second crop is expected here about the middle of the month, and promises to be of good quality, but there is still a large quantity of the first crop teas to come forward.

MOLASSES.

There will no doubt be some fun in the molasses market in the next few weeks that are to come. Two barks have arrived in port with some 2,000 puncheons, each one of which is controlled by a local broker, and the other by a large French wholesale grocery house. The latter cargo is divided between three of the large French wholesale houses, of which distributed as follows: 550, 400 and 150 puncheons. The other bark is to be sold by auction regardless of cost, and the broker to whom it is consigned says he will make some one sick before he is through. This will give all the outside grocers a chance to come into the cut. Prices are not changed now, but before the week is out the market is sure to drop. We quote: Barbadoes 29 to 31c., American 28c.; syrups are quoted at 25 to 28c. for medium bright, 40 to 45c. for choice, amber 40 to 45c.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

Maple product is still quiet and unchanged, and outside of a small jobbing trade there is not much doing on spot. Stocks, however, are light, and prices are held the same. We quote maple syrup in tins 60 to 64c. per gallon, and in wood at 5c. per pound. Maple sugar is quoted at 7 to 8c., and fancy cakes at 8½c.

RICE.

The demand for rice has not shown any increase, but the business that is being done is a nice one, and we have to note a steady demand from the west in fair lots. The local trade is also good, and millers are satisfied with the state of things. We quote standard $4 to $4.10, Japan $4.50 to $5, Patnas $4.50 to $5, and Carolinas $7 to $8 per hundred pounds.

COFFEES.

The coffee business is of a steady nature, both locally and from outside points, and although the trade that is done is only of a jobbing kind, dealers are satisfied. We quote: —Rios 18 to 20c.; Java, 23 to 25c.; Mocha, 24 to 25c.; Jamaica, 19 to 21c.; and Maracaibo, 22½ to 23c, Santos, 17½ to 19c.

DRIED FRUIT.

Stocks in dried fruit are now very low, and what stock that is here is held at firm prices. The trade doing is in small lots and under prices that allow of a fair margin for the dealer. We quote as follows: Valencias, ordinary, 3¾ to 4¼c.; No. 1 off stalk, 4¼c.; layers, 6c. to 6¼c.; Patras currants, 5 to 5¼c.; Vostizzas, in cases, 7½ to 8c.; provincial currants, 4½ to 5½c.; do. in half barrels, 5 to 6c. Prunes 5¼ to 5½c.

GREEN FRUIT.

The green fruit trade in all lines has been very good during the past week, and dealers at this point state trade so far has eclipsed the same period last year, and that the outlook for future good trade seems bright. Oranges are about out here, and what stock there is on hand are held at firm prices and meeting with good sales. Dealers say the season will be over in a few days. Lemons are having good sales, and we hear of quite a few lots of prime stock being shipped to the Western States. Locally trade is good, and stocks are large enough to allow of further business. In strawberries there has been a big local business done and prices now are purely nominal and liable to change any moment. Receipts of western berries are fair, and the stock is considered good as regards quality. Pineapples are a thing of the past, and what stock is held here is in the hands of one dealer and very light. The banana trade during the week has been confined to the selling of some car lots that arrived from New York, the quality of which was not very good and sold a little low in price—say $1 to $1.50. One feature of this trade is the arrival of a direct boat from the West Indies with 10,000 bunches. This is the first direct boat that ever landed stock in this port. In Californian fruit some very fine cherries, peaches and apricots have been received and are having good sales. We quote: Bloods in half boxes $3; Massinas $4 to $4.75; lemons $2.75 to $3.50; pineapples 7 to 15c. each, strawberries 10 to 12c. per box, bananas $1.50 to $2 per bunch, apricots $3 to $3.50 per half crate. Cherries $1.00 to $1.25 per 8 lb. baskets, peaches $3 per box.

NUTS.

Nuts are about the same as last week. The only thing of interest to note this week in the nut market is the drop in cocoanuts, this is owing to a direct boat arriving. We quote: Almonds Tarragona 14 to 15c.; almonds, Ivica, 14 to 15c.; almonds, common, 10 to 11c.; almonds, hardshell, 7 to 8c.; walnuts, Grenoble, new 12 to 14c.; walnuts, French 10 to 10½c.; cocoanuts per 100 $3.75 to $4.00; filberts 9 to 10c.; pecans 16 to 17c.; peanuts 7 to 10c.

APPLES.

The apple trade is about over and stocks here are so light that very little business is being done. Dried and evaporated apples are dull and quiet without change. We quote apples $5.50 to $6 per barrel; evaporated 6 to 7c.; dried 4 to 4½c., and evaporated peaches 12 to 13c. per tin.

HONEY.

The honey market is still featureless, and the business that is being done is very small and prices are unchanged. We quote strained 7 to 8½c. per lb., and comb 8½ to 10c. per lb.

FISH.

Gaspé salmon are selling very well, and a few sales have been made at 10 to 10½c. during the week. Lake trout and whitefish are selling at 6c. to 7c., and cod and haddock at 3½c. to 4c. The following are quotations: Smoked Yarmouth bloaters, per 60 box, $1.00 to $1.10; St. John's bloaters, per 100 box, 80c. to $1.00; boneless cod, large boxes, 6 to 7c.; do. small boxes 7 to 8c.; finnan haddies 7 to 8c.

We quote No. 1 herring, per brl., $4.50 to $4.60; lake trout, per half brl., $4.00 to $4.25; sea trout, per bbl., $8.25 to $8.75; codfish, green, No. 1, per bbl. $4.75 to $5.00; do. No. 2, per bbl., $4.25 to $4.50; codfish, dried, per bbl., $4.25 to $4.50; salmon, B.C., per bbl., $13 to $13.50; do. Nfld., No. 1, per tee, $22.50 to $23; do. No. 2, per tee, $21 to $21.50; do. do., No. 3, per tee, $20 to $20.50.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market is firm and fairly active, especially in Canadian short cut. Mess lard and smoked meats are also in fair demand, and few small orders are being filled. We quote as follows:—Canadian short cut, per brl. $16.50 to $16.75; mess pork, western, per brl. $14.50 to $15.00; short cut, western, per brl. $17.00 to $17.50; hams, city cured, per lb. 10c. to 10½c.; lard, Canadian, in pails 8½ to 9c.; bacon, per lb. 9 to 10c.; lard, com. refined, per lb. 7 to 7½c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

Cheese was unchanged to day, with little doing, as all the steamers have sailed.

Butter was dull, with no particular feeling. There is little to note in the way of export trade. Creamery, 19c.; Townships dairy, 16 to 17c.; Western dairy, 14 to 15c.

EXPORTS CHEESE AND BUTTER.

The present week has been the banner one for cheese exports of the season so far, and it is unlikely that it will be exceeded by any succeeding week. One steamer alone, the Rosarian, for London, took out 43,048 boxes and another boat 12,317, while the Bristol steamer also took out the “nice little” shipment of 22,000 odd. This brings the shipments to date up to 244,048 boxes, or 78,285 boxes in excess of those for the corresponding period in 1891. With these heavy shipments in mind, a remarkably consistent inclination shown by the factorymen to sell, and one of the largest June makes on record, prices do seem surprisingly high, and it looks as though the manipulators of recent deals in the country have a nice task in front of them to keep matters trimmed so that they will come out right.

Exports of butter and cheese for week ending, 25th of June, 1892, compiled by James O. Neville:—

EGGS.

The local egg market is quiet to-day, the demand being only fair. We quote 9½c. to 10c.

GRAIN.

The stocks of grain and flour in Montreal show an increase of 972 bush. of wheat, 5,093 bushels of peas, 47,070 bushels of oats, 1,450 bushels of rye, 53 barrels of flour, and a decrease of 13,266 bushels of barley, compared with a week ago; and an increase of 86,443 bushels of wheat, 218,909 bushels of peas, 583,598 bushels of oats, 65,084 bushels of barley, 22,185 bushels of rye, and a decrease of 10,481 barrels of flour, and 3,966 barrels of oatmeal, compared with a year ago.

The stocks of flour and grain in store in Montreal on the dates mentioned were as follows:

DRY GOODS.

There has been no change in the position of the dry goods market which is considered good. The whole trade here say the market has been more or less affected by this last wet snap, but not enough to notice. The retail trade here are all doing a nice trade, especially in light summer goods, which are being more or less used, now that the people are moving to their summer houses.

MONTREAL MOLASSES SALES.

There was a big attendance at the molasses auction held in Montreal on Tuesday afternoon. Twenty-two hundred puncheons were sold. Five hundred puncheons were withdrawn before the auction and sold privately at 29c. Among the purchases were 50 puncheons at 28½c., and 50 tierces at 32¼c. by Caverhill, Rose, Hughes & Co.; 50 puncheons at 28c. by C. D. N. Osgoode; 50 puncheons at 28c. by W. S. Goodhugh. James Stewart & Co. handled the sales satisfactorily to all concerned. Five hundred puncheons to arrive will be sold on July the fifth.

WHERE THE JOKE COMES IN.

Baldheaded customer in barber shop—“I want a hair cut.” “Yes, sir; which hair?”

The man arrested for stealing a ride got off because the policeman couldn't find it on him.

“I just think this new bonnet is the dearest little thing I ever saw,” gushed Mrs. Spendall. And Mr. Spendall, who had just paid the bill, quite agreed with her.

Earlin—“Why do you want to call that new collar ‘The Coney Island Surf’ Wilson—‘Because its high, and it has considerable roll, and it'll cost a quarter to get into it.’—Smith, Gray & Co.'s Monthly.

“Don't you know it is very wrong to smoke, my boy,” said an old lady to a youngster, who persisted in puffing a cheap cigar. “Oh, I smoke for my health,” answered the boy. “But you never heard of a cure by smoking?” she continued presently. “Oh, yes, I did,” persisted the boy, blowing a big cloud; “that's the way they cure pigs and fish.” “Smoke on, then,” quickly replied the old lady; “there's some hope for you yet.”—Scotch Paper.

TRUTH OR FALSEHOOD.

The question many times comes to the business man, can business, under the press of the competition of the times, be successfully transacted—successfully from a financial standpoint—when the truth is strictly adhered to; or in other words, is it not almost imperative that the merchant should lie?

Can the merchant, in all cases, consistent with the hope for success, against the existing class of competition, do to the customer just what he would wish done by him?

Upon this subject an exchange gives the following, which is worth reprinting:

In the noble desire to do business, to sell goods, very many business men stop at nothing, but carry their ideas of truth far away into the realm of fiction. In other words they say anything to sell goods, and represent them to be what they know they are not. The amount of lying in which a merchant can indulge, should he have a mind so to do, is without end. From solemnly asseverating that some old chestnut is the "latest out" to declaring that some new and taking article which they do not happen to have in stock, is a chestnut they have a wide field to cover. And it must be confessed that a good many of them cover it most successfully. Now the question that arises is, Is all this gratuitous flow of lies necessary? It is not the intention here to convey any idea of Puritanism or to think it possible for merchants to be exactly exact in all they say or do. It is simply the purpose to discuss the question as an open one. A merchant can feel that he has done fairly well if he avoids deliberate lies either on price, exact age or style of goods. But he can also feel himself a distinct fool—ninny would more exactly suit the case, if he is going to sit down and tell every one who comes into his store what he knows and what he doesn't, where and at what early period in the century he got those old—, mentioning certain chestnuts, or, how he happened to get left on certain goods through lack of business smartness. It is no use disclosing your weak points to the world—they can see them fast enough without your going to the trouble of disclosing unseen ones. It is man's duty, and the saving clause in living, to make the best of everything in life. It is his proof of strength and courage, that he bears himself well in the battle of life. To do this it is no use going out to meet his competitors who are armed with steel, being only armed with a straw himself. No. He has to brace up and use all his nerve and fight his opponents on equal terms. However, in dealing with his customers it is no use his going to the trouble of a deliberate or fatuous lie, for such a lie will invariably disclose itself sooner or later. If a customer ask a question deliberately out of a desire to get at the exact truth, a merchant, if it is possible, should be sure to give him that information. Both for his own sake and for the customer's.—Merchant Sentinel.

Question :--

Is there any question in your mind whether or not you are a first-class grocer, and handle A 1 goods?

If so look on your shelves, and if thereon you see the above Brand of Matches, also our Telephone and Eagle Parlor, and on examination of WOODENWARE, WASHBOARDS and INDURATED FIBRE WARE you find the following :—

The E. B. EDDY CO.,

HULL, CANADA,

Then decide emphatically in the affirmative, and consider yourself a LEADER.

THE OLD DRY GOODS CASE.

There's a spot on this footstool, this dizzy old earth,
That is dear to my heart, that is priceless
in worth,
That brings to my memory the days of my youth,
When troubles were easy and life went so smooth.

'Tis the old dry-goods case 'neath the porch of the store,
Where we boys used to gather in the good days of yore,
Where the joys and the sorrows that lived in each breast
Were laughed about, sorrowed and claimed by the rest.

Oh, that old dry-goods case with its hoops and its marks !
How we sat on its back, kicked its sides in our larks !
What tales it has heard ! What fun it has seen !
What mischief was hatched there, for each Hallow e'en !

Discussions political, social and martial
Were disposed of in style and truly impartial,

The dog fights and ball games, the crops and the weather
Come in for their share, alone or together.

That dear packing case, how it's memory now

Smooths the wrinkles away on my fur-rowing brow,

As I think of the days when I haunted it's side

And kicked away sorrows and troubles

CHEAPEST.

BARM YEAST CO.

PHELSTON, 22nd June, 1892.

SIRS,—I enclose you the names of 24 customers using "Barm" Yeast. I sell nothing else now.

S. HANEY, Merchant.

DEAR SIR:

I have just received another Box of Yeast from T. Kinnear & Co. In fact I have sold a number of boxes. Send me one of your Lithos to hang in my store. Also, have the 500 Grocers all reported yet? if not I will have my list of Customers on receipt of your reply, as I have sold the "Barm" Yeast to scores, and in most all cases it has proved satisfactory.

J. HILES,

Armow.

YOU

Have wished for something of this nature many a time, and we respectfully solicit your assistance in placing it before the public.
 It will pay you to push Hood's Delicious Castor Oil.

What we claim for the above:

- (1) As a cathartic for women and children it is absolutely safer and much preferable to any Patent Medicine or Soothing Syrup.
- (2) It is virtually pure Castor Oil, as it contains 99 PER CENT. of the FINEST OIL PROCURABLE.
- (3) No trouble to administer, particularly to the little folks, as it is just as the name implies, "Delicious."
- (4) Contains no Chloroform, Glycerine, or any injurious ingredient.
- (5) Recognized and appreciated by the Medical profession wherever known.

Demand Rapidly Increasing.
Big Profits to Pushing Retailers.
 Ask your Wholesale Grocer for it, or write direct to the Manufacturers for Samples and Quotations

THIS WEEK'S MOTTO:

Keep your place of business tidy. Customers have eyes and noses and they are easily disgusted.

Advertisers and Subscribers may have their correspondence addressed to the care of any of our offices and they are invited to use them at any time. At the Head office, Toronto, a place is set apart where they can see all the latest newspapers and the latest issues of trade papers from all parts of the world, where they can do their correspondence or obtain any information. Parcels may also be directed to the Head office.

Certain retail grocers of this city continue to wage relentless competition against their fellow merchants. Profits they are determined nobody shall have, but customers they pursue with an ardor that hardly seems rational. Their feverish eagerness to checkmate all rivals who aim to make business pay is difficult to understand because of its entire purposelessness. They care not who gets the people's money so long as they supply the people's goods. For that laudable ambition they are willing evidently to forfeit their commercial future. They appear to be transported, by the intensity of their opposition, from the sphere of trade to the arena of sport or war, where there is no glory except in the defeat of every rival, where no compromise is consistent with success. There is no room for indulgence, moderation, consideration for others—all is self, and the steadfast purpose to overthrow everybody that is not on the same side. Such feelings as these appear to have the upper hand among the grocers who are cutting prices out of all reason in this city to-day. They have a conception of business that is entirely wrong. It is the conception of war that they misapply to business, and with it goes that loose morality of which the most expressive motto is "Everything is fair in war."

* * *

That sport, not business, dominates some men's course in trade appears to be demonstrated by the risks they frequently take, of which none are more daring than those they run in cutting prices. They take their solvency in their hand, and not only occasionally venture, but continually hover, on the very brink of disaster, like some foolhardy coachmen whose conceit in their own driving leads them to hazard their lives that they may show how close to destruction they may run along the edge of a precipice. There are some people who appear to court danger and are mercifully spared from falling a prey to it. They make bad rivals in business. If conservative traders had to encounter an opposition that was strong by reason of its economy which made cheapness possible, they could hope to train down to conditions to cope with their antagonist, much in the same way as navvies in certain parts of the United States have been able to compete with Chinese labor, on account of their descending to a lower scale of comfort. This would be undesirable, but it would be preferable to putting capital in such peril as it put in by the competition the boastfully aggressive traders carry on. These professors of aggressive tactics are the men who make bad debts or depreciated accounts for the wholesalers.

It is a hard matter to keep up the standard of quality and at the same time arbitrarily force down the level of prices. Any attempt so to frustrate normal market tendencies may for awhile repress value that is determined by the cost of production, or that is the resultant of the comparative quantity of supply and demand, but it cannot long keep the market from righting itself by bringing about a change in quality. As between a given price and a given article, there may for a time be imperfect equivalence, but one or the other has to adjust itself in the end. If the cut price prevails, the quality has to come down to it. It is true that very often the descent to lower quality to accommodate the article to a certain cut price, is but a step towards securing both quality and economy, for the very persistence of low prices has sometimes so overruled ideas founded on value, that invention has been thereby stimulated to reduce the cost of production and so finally bring about the restoration of former quality for the favorite price. But too generally all there comes of it is loss. The quality of granulated sugar is now suffering in this country as the result of letting down the price unduly for the sake of business. In no country in the world was there a higher quality of granulated sugar produced than in Canada. Of course not all our refiners, nor a very large minority of them for that matter, had attained to this excellence in product, but we have refiners who made and still make the very finest granulated sugar. It would be a great pity that they should be deterred from steadily continuing to make that class of sugar. It is to the credit of those who refuse to make a poorer granulated sugar, that they resist a pressure which so many of their fellow-refiners are yielding to, the tendency of low prices to degrade quality. If we still have the best granulated sugar to be found anywhere, we probably also have the worst, and it is to the depressing competition among sellers to surpass each other in making low offers that this latter boast is due. There is poorer granulated and much more of it than there ever was before now going into trade in this country. The poor stuff is having the sale for awhile, but it is likely to work itself out of favor before it has levelled down all production. The people used to pay high prices for superior sugar; it is unlikely that they will deny themselves that luxury when they can get it at the low prices that normal quotations offer to-day.

One excrescence that Canadian society should have sloughed off before this is the tea-pedlar. Our farmers must be people of lowly simplicity, or they would no longer be dividing up their substance with men who get at the selling price of tea by multiplying the cost by two. The artful Europeans who used to despoil our aborigines by giving them worthless trinkets for their good furs, took advantage of a native innocence that was hardly more touching than that of our agriculturists who buy tea from pedlars. The gentle tiller of the soil rarely knows good tea from bad. With him tea and lye commonly differ only in degree; the latter excoriates the mucous membrane a little too much to be a favorite beverage, but the kind of tea he likes has something of the same rich liquoring quality and fulness of body. The boys who call at his house to sell tea know what tickles his palate, and they don't need a worm to distil the refined juice that is to captivate his taste. They brew it. They need a fire strong enough to exhaust the tea of every soluble constituent, and a vessel large enough to still retain some of the water after the long process of boiling and evaporating is finished. The resulting liquid will scrape the epithelium off the farmer's tonsils, and tan the coat of his stomach till it is tough enough for the material of a drum-head. The pedlar will then lasso an order for from five to twenty pounds of the gentle aromatic. The farmer does not know that good tea is to be drawn just long enough to get the theine extracted and that the process must stop before the herb begins to yield any considerable part of its tannin. This same tannin would embrown the rugged hide of the ox, and is the active principle in whatever agent is used for the conversion of raw hide into the leather of commerce. The less of it that is extracted the better, but there are some teas that cannot be made anything of without being subjected to boiling. The essence thus obtained is 'strong,' and that is what pleases and also what injures. The pedlars are doing a good business in various parts of the country. They presume upon the general inclination among the people to regard them as experts in judging, blending and preparing tea, and have usually a stock of lies that are very plausible and look like self-evident truths. The grocer cannot persuade the farmers to believe that they are paying twice what the tea is worth, though it is usually a matter of fact that they are. Still, every grocer who has a customer to whom he can sell no tea ought not to miss an opportunity to show the best value he can offer and to make a few remarks for his customer's benefit upon pedlars' tea.

That aggregation of trash, the seven cent store, has made a line of goods that was formerly a remunerative one to the grocer now almost worthless. This line includes certain classes of woodenware, tinware, combs, toilet soaps, small household articles, popular toys and other sundries. The competition of the seven cent store in its immediate results is a small matter compared with conditions which it has brought into existence. It has been a prolific cause of a low grade of production. Many of the keepers of these stores, and department storekeepers who have a seven cent counter, send their orders direct to the manufacturers, and in cases where there are standard brands, as in soaps, they endeavor to have these brands imitated as closely as possible in a much inferior article. In fact there are manufacturers not above making grades of their product very much lower in quality than certain standards of theirs and putting the well known brand upon them. The fact that seven cent goods and trashy goods to sell at other low prices are very popular has stimulated the production of trash, and now a grocer who asks a normal price for matches that one dare ignite without apologizing or raising a window, has often to point to the difference in quality to justify his quotation. Matches are working their own cure, but for toilet soaps and many other lines it is hard to get full prices from the people, and the seven cent stores have made it hard. Much of this class of stock the grocer finds no longer worth bothering with. The price of the inferior goods influences and generally rules the price of superior goods in this as in staple lines. It is always the case where the volume of low grade stuff is large.

COMMERCIAL BULLETIN NO 4.

"Trade With Great Britain" is the title of Commercial Bulletin No. 4, just issued by the Finance Department of the Dominion Government. The Canadian products of which the export trade with Great Britain is treated in this pamphlet are: Eggs, Poultry, Canned Goods and Dried and Evaporated Fruits. The little book contains a collection of statistics, facts and suggestions in relation to these that must be serviceable in putting upon the right lines the further development of an export trade in them with Great Britain. As a manual of market information the Bulletin is an important publication, and ought to be read carefully, not only by shippers, but also by all traders who have the handling in any stage of their movement of the commodities it deals with.

In tracing the rise of an English market for Canadian eggs the pamphlet shows that previous to October, 1890, we sent very few eggs across the Atlantic. The coming into effect of the McKinley Tariff Act at that date closed the United States market to us and diverted the attention of Canadian egg shippers to the open but distant market of Great Britain. The capacity of the British market is shown by a comparison of its imports with those of the United States for the years from and including 1885 to 1891. The figures submitted show that Great Britain imported during these years more than five times what the United States imported, which goes to demonstrate that there is a much more capable demand in Great Britain than in the United States. The particulars of the steps taken by the Canadian Government to furnish the trade with reliable information as to the feasibility of an egg-trade with Britain are recounted. So far as the issue of attempts made to carry on trade with Britain are concerned, the Bulletin's figures show that since the passing of the McKinley Act and up to the 30th of September, 1891, we have sold more eggs to the United States than to Great Britain. A comparison of the prices of Canadian eggs during the years 1889, 1890 and 1891 is in favor of the last year, though throughout that we had the extra tariff of the United States against us. A very interesting feature of the Bulletin and one calculated to enhance its usefulness to shippers is a collection of the answers that prominent English dealers returned to the set of questions in the following circular sent out last October by the High Commissioner for Canada:

"The High Commissioner for Canada will be glad if you can favour him with answers to the following questions:—

"1. Have you handled any Canadian eggs this season, and if so, how many?

"2. What reception have they met with on the London market, and what price have they brought compared with eggs imported from other countries?

"3. In what condition have the eggs arrived, and have you any suggestion to make as to any improvement in their packing?"

The replies are various, and all are clearly given from a business standpoint without any bias of political opinion. The Bulletin ought to be in the hands of all egg-dealers. What it has to say of poultry, canned goods, etc., will be touched on in another article.

THE SPIDER AND THE FLY.

SCENE I.

[Grocery Store. Proprietor standing behind counter. Enter city traveller.]

C. T.—Good morning, Mr. S., this is a lovely morning. Store Keeper—Yes, sir, it is.

C. T.—How do you like the idea of closing on Wednesday afternoons?

S. K.—Bully. Just the thing. Wouldn't wish for anything better.

C. T.—All right, sir. I am carrying an agreement in my pocket, signed by nearly all the grocers around here this side the river, and if you will be so kind as to add your signature you will confer a favor.

S. K.—Why certainly I will. Have J. & H. signed it? C. T.—Yes sir.

S. K.—All right. Give me the paper and I'll put my name to it. You know I didn't sign the sheet last year and kept open, and I was kicking myself all the time for not doing it, because I did not take in 25c. on a single Wednesday afternoon.

C. T.—I suppose not.

S. K.—No sir. [Signs the paper.]

C. T.—Thank you. Anything you are requiring to-day, Mr. S.?

S. K.—No, not a thing. To tell you the truth things are so infernally quiet that there is no encouragement to buy anything, and I have quite a lot of money out and it seems impossible to get it in.

C. T.—Well, sir, you are not the only one who is complaining. Nearly every one I call on has the same complaint, and most of them seem to think that both business and collections will remain in just the same state for at least two months yet. I cover the city once a week, and from east to west and north to south it is the same cry. Why, one of the oldest wholesale men we have in the grocery trade in this city said that for twenty years he had not experienced anything like it. So when a man like that makes such a statement you may depend upon it that things are in a critical state. I myself do not see what is going to make it any better. There is nothing going on in the way of work to alter the state of things. The only thing I can see for a man to do is to keep a stiff upper lip and go on hopefully. I often wonder what a man's life would be like if it were not for hope. Why, it's the sweetener of life. A man's life without hope would be like existence without light.

S. K.—Well, sir, you are right. If it was not for hope we would die of the blues many a time.

C. T.—Yes, if a man could die more than once. Well, you think there is nothing wanted, Mr. S.?

S. K.—No, sir, not a thing.

C. T.—Well, good day.

S. K.—Good day.

[Day of closing. All the stores are closed. Storekeeper makes his appearance at the door of his store all ready for a walk.]

S. K.—(To himself) I guess I'll call on the barber and get him to go out. [Walks into barber's] What are you keeping open for? They are all closed. Shut up and come on out.

Barber—All right where shall we go?

S. K.—Oh up into the city.

Barber—All right come on [Both go up into the city.]

[2 hours afterwards grocer returns, opens up and like the spider wants to catch the fly, but flies being scarce he takes a walk along the pavement and meets the cook of a customer of a neighbouring grocer, who had been knocking at the door of her grocer and could not get in.]

S. K.—Can't you get in?

Cook—No.

S. K.—Well, I'm open. If you want anything you can get it from me.

Cook Oh, no, thank you, I will wait until they come back.

[Spider returns to his web feeling rather mean at not catching the fly.]

C. T.—[Taking a walk with friend, sees all this.]

Here is a sample of how some supposed men of principle keep their promise. One man like that can spoil 50 good men. The only remedy for a man like that is to keep closed and spare no pains to make him feel his meanness.

DRIED FRUITS.

Complaints of damage to the growing crops of currants by the disease, which is reported to be the "Peronospera," continue to reach England, and have resulted in holders being able to establish an advance of about 1s. per cwt. That a certain amount of damage has been done there can be no reasonable doubt, but at the same time the experience of past seasons would go clearly to prove that reports despatched under the excitement of the moment are invariably greatly exaggerated. Even supposing that as much as 20,000 tons have been destroyed, it is not by any means impossible that it may result in benefit to all concerned. The crop of this season, which is estimated to amount to 165,000 tons, has proved to be unmanageably large, and it is likely that a new season will be started with a stock in England and Greece of from 20,000 to 25,000 tons. Had all gone well, the weight of the 1892 crop would probably have reached a total of at least 170,000 tons, and even if 30,000 or 40,000 tons were destroyed, there would remain an ample supply for the requirements of all the consuming countries, when the stock to be carried over is taken into account. The reports which have arrived vary considerably as to the damage which has up to this time been done; and after regarding them all with due consideration, the conclusion arrived at is that the entire crop has not been lessened by as much as 10 per cent., and that this deficiency can well be spared, and will probably be to the ultimate advantage of all concerned. The damage has been felt most in the particular districts of Pirgos, Campos, and Zante, and it is only reasonable to make allowance for the undue excitement which would doubtless prevail in these places; but it must be remembered that in others no appreciable mischief is evident, and, indeed, reports from them are more or less favourable.—Produce Markets Review.

THE CORNER GROCERY.

"Well, Mr. Harkless," inquired the drummer after the crowd had thinned out, "are you needing anything in my line?"

"Why yes, I'm needin' some goods," answered Joel, "but I reckon I kaint buy 'em uv you, I perpose bein' fore handed, an' buyin' frum first han's, an' not payin' all you fellers to run aroun' the country puttin' on style an' havin' good times, an' et all comin' out uv us."

"Yas," interrupted the Granger, "ther' is over $10,000,000 now paid out every year to these drummers, an' ef that was divided up et ud help us all mightily. I'll tell yer, thet's jist why ther farmers hes sich hard times, holdin' up all them classes et don't work, an' Joel's right to shut down on 'em an buy nothin' uv 'em.

"Gentlemen!" said the drummer, "please let me say a few words. You say there is $10,000,000 paid travelling men, and that divided up it would help you so. Divided up! Why that is just what it is, and these same travelling men do it most thoroughly, distribute it in a thousand different channels of trade, and the farmers get the benefit too, in lower freights, better markets and cheaper goods, and through this medium of salesmen it brings the market to your own door.

"You say we put on lots of style and that you pay for it, and that it costs you so much. Now, cannot you see as regards cost that as we visit fifteen to twenty merchants a day, the expense to each must be very light; and that if a merchant went to market it would cost him more; or that if he buys direct, that he takes so many blind chances—that he avoids through the traveling man.

"Do you not know that this has been verified time and again by men who thought as you now do?

"Cannot you recognize also that we middlemen that you think useless and a lot of parasites, are consumers and help make valuable your products?

"Let me ask, what would your stuff be worth without anybody to buy it? Now, you advise Mr. Harkless not to buy from a drummer, you simply urge him to cut his own throat financially, and time will show it.

"Gentlemen, the old story of the clock has a lesson for you, in that it would teach you that each one has his place to fill, and that we need each other, and that if you take away one piece the whole machine will stop. Gentlemen, good day," and out he went, leaving the crowd somewhat confused, until Zeke Hayseed restored confidence by remarking: "Thet's the way with all them doggone agents, they's eddicated an' can argify honest fellers out uv countenance every time."

WHY TEA IS CHEAP.

"The real causes," says the London Statist, "that have brought about the fall in the price of tea, some qualities having since a year ago declined as much as 30 to 40 per cent., are firstly, the keen competition between British-grown tea and China; secondly, the Baring crisis, which stopped speculation all over the world, and restricted credit facilities; thirdly, the fall in silver, enabling exporters from the far East to sell far more cheaply; and, fourthly, speculation for the fall encouraged by the foregoing reasons. In the twelve months there has been a fall in silver of about 5d. per ounce, or over 11 per cent. But the exporter of tea evidently could sell in London for 11 per cent. less than twelve months ago, and yet get precisely the same price in rupees or in dollars in India or China, as the case may be. From this it will be seen that the fall in silver only partially accounts for the state of the tea market, for the fall in tea to the extent mentioned has occurred at the same time that there has been a fall in silver from 44½d. to 39½d. per ounce, which is little more than 11 per cent. On the other hand, tea a year ago was considerably higher than twelve months previously, and the last few days there has been a decided turn for the better in the tea market."

THE BANANA FOOD COMPANY.

The American Vice-Consul at Colon says that a company has been formed in New York with a capital of 75,000 dollars, under the name of the Banana Food Company, for the purpose of drying and otherwise preparing bananas and plantains for food. A charter or certificate of incorporation has been obtained from the State of West Virginia, and as soon as the necessary preliminaries can be arranged it is proposed to begin operations. Experiments have already been made going to show that the fruit can be successfully evaporated and prepared for market, either as dried fruit, as flour or meal, or canned in pulp. In one and all of these forms the claim is made that the product can be put up so cheaply and in such attractive shapes as a food supply that it will be certain to come into immediate and general use in the United States and Europe. An analysis has been made by Professor Wynter Blythe, from which it appears that the constituents of the banana and wheat-flour compare as follows:—Banana: 8.05 per cent. water, 1.46 per cent. soluble albumen dextrine, 82.57 per cent. starch, 2.58 per cent. albuminoids, 0.77 per cent. fat, and 1.88 per cent. ash. Wheat flour: 15.08 per cent. water, 81.6 per cent. starch, 2.11 per cent. albuminoids, and 0.35 per cent. ash. Careful observations have also been made as to the comparative loss of weight by evaporation, and it has been found that while apples yield only 12 per cent, bananas with the skins removed will give within a small fraction of 25 per cent of thoroughly desiccated fruit. The supply of plantains and bananas in the region accessible to this port by land and sea is very large already, and might be made practically unlimited. The fruit grows to maturity all the year round, and may be obtained every day throughout the year, so that the manufacture of food therefrom can be continuous, in which there is an advantage over the prepared fruits of the temperate zones. It is therefore believed that, as the banana, so nutritious and wholesome, has come to be extensively used and highly valued in its raw or fresh state, there will certainly soon be a demand for the same in its prepared forms, and that banana food will become an important element in the future nourishment of the world's millions. In the collapsed industrial condition of the isthmus, due to the failure of the Panama Canal Company, the organization of the local enterprise under consideration is regarded with hopeful interest. Some even go so far as to predict that it may prove to be the beginning of great things.—Grocers' Review.

THE VICISSITUDES OF THE MOLASSES TRADE.

The columns of the Trade Bulletin for some weeks past have reflected the unsatisfactory condition of the molasses trade, showing the unprofitable nature of business in the new season's product; but if recent transactions have been put through at little or no profit, and in some instances at a loss, what may be said of the heavy losses sustained on stocks still held by those who purchased them about a year ago? There is at the present time a lot of about 1,500 puncheons of Trinidad molasses stored in this city and owned by a Toronto firm, which cost 35c. per gallon a year ago; but which to-day would not realize, it is said, over 20 or 21c. per gallon, showing an estimated loss of about $20,000, including carrying charges, etc. At the time the above lot of Trinidad was purchased the market was strong and excited, round lots of Barbadoes selling at 40c. per gallon, although the price to-day is 29c. This year a number of firms who formerly purchased from importers here, have bought direct at the Islands, and even at the low cost laid down here they do not stand to make much if any money. A party in the trade said a few days ago, that at the very reasonable prices Barbadoes molasses cost to bring in this season, a good profit might have been made had not the ruinous competition between houses here turned profits into losses. It is also said that there are syrups held in this city which show a much heavier loss than is sustained upon the above lot of Barbadoes molasses. In both instances, however, the purchases were speculative, and may be carried a long while yet, to take advantage of any rise that may take place in values, although it is said the probabilities are that any advance that is likely to occur in prices, will be offset by the increased carrying charges.—Trade Bulletin.

POINTS FOR CLERKS.

An intelligent foreigner who had traveled over much of the world was once asked if he found any characteristics which seemed common to all the race in all countries.

After a little thought he said in broken English, "Me think all men love lazy."

He had found people everywhere willing to enjoy the good things of life, but unwilling to put forth the labor needed to acquire them. Work, as a rule, may be from compulsion of some sort. "You will never do any more than you are obliged to," was a saying of a professor to the young men about stepping out into professional life. It does not sound flattering to human nature, but I think our observation will corroborate it if not our experience. Idleness and unprofitable industry are what seem most enchanting to the young. The latter is often pursued with an ardor that would make a man rich and wise if turned into a useful channel. The rigors and self-denial and long hours of toil the boys give to a drill for a regatta would crush them if it was in the line of their regular work.

But where mere pastime is made the business of life there is no fair development of many qualities. The mind is dwarfed and the activities frittered away on trifles of no earthly profit. It is of no consequence to the world that one horse can trot a mile in half a second less time than another. The Shah of Persia was quite sensible when he declined to attend the races in England on the ground that "it was known to him that one horse was faster than another."

It is the custom of the age to label everything at what it is worth; and we may with advantage learn to discriminate between true and false values in these matters.

Work which has something to show for it is the only kind worth doing. An impecunious Yankee was hired by a man, to whom he applied for work, to pound on a log by the hour. He gave it up after an hour, saying he "would not chop without seeing the chips fly." It is an encouragement to any industrious worker to see the chips fly.

However natural it may be to love laziness, there is a possibility of cultivating industry until it becomes second nature; and it is a fact about acquired tastes that they are by far the strongest we possess. Any man who uses tobacco can corroborate this. It is an easy thing to make one's self a worker. All you have to do is to throw all your might into your business, and the steady repetition will form the habit. The habit formed, and idleness will be more irksome than the hardest work. "Seest thou a man delight in his business, he shall stand before kings." But the gain in character to himself is the highest advantage. "The most sensible man I have ever known," said Hazlitt "were intelligent men of business, who argue from what they see and know, instead of spinning cobweb theories."—American Grocer.

THE CHRONIC GRUMBLER.

Are you acquainted with the grumbler? He is not numerous let us hope. But he is still on top of the earth all the same. He ought to be ostracized from the company of the average business man.

Who is the chronic grumbler? Why, he is the man who is always grumbling. He grumbles at this, he grumbles at that; he grumbles because the weather is too hot, he grumbles because it is too cold. He grumbles when it rains and when it does not rain he is just the same old grumbler. He grumbles because trade is dull and he grumbles when there is so much that he has to "hump himself" a little.

He grumbles because the roads are bad and it would be almost the same if they were good. He is sorry he went into business in the one-horse town where he is. It would have been all the same if he had gone into a large city. He grumbles because his neighbor merchant across the street is getting all his trade. But that is quite natural. People have been listening to his grumbling so long that they have become sick and tired of it and they have as a result changed their place of doing business.

The habit has so fixed itself on the grumbler that he is not able to tell when trade is good. He is always ready to find fault with existing conditions, no matter how good they may be. He can't keep a clerk any length of time, and no wonder. Clerks are but human and it gives them an attack of "that tired feeling" when they hear so much fault finding going on all the time.

We do not like dark and gloomy weather as a steady diet; neither do we enjoy doing business with a man who is always dark and gloomy. Why is it that a man can become so disagreeable? That is a question which is hard to answer.

It is just like other habits, it can be broken easily if a beginning is made when one first has the inclination to grumble. On the other hand, if no check is placed on the reins, it will be just as hard to break up a habit of grumbling as any other bad habit.

Who ever heard of a grumbler attaining success among his fellows? The man who succeeds is not built that way. He is always cheerful and finds some good in all things.

There is no earthly use for the grumbler and the sooner he fades from sight and hearing the better the public will be pleased. He is not of the slightest good to himself or to anybody else. If a man has contracted the habit, the sooner he breaks it up the sooner will he attain success, happiness, and the esteem of his fellowman. He needs to be born again and commence over in the right way. It is certainly to be hoped that he is becoming scarcer as every day goes by.—Ex.

DRY GOODS.

Trade during the past week has been quiet but satisfactory. The houses are summing up the month's business and it shows a strong increase over last June's total. In fact the last three months have each shown an increase in total business done by most of the houses. The continuance of damp weather has prevented a very great run during the past week on summer fabrics and dress goods have consequently been slow. But odd pieces and broken parcels have found a sale with the shrewd bargain seekers who have been in the market during the past few days. These have mostly been well repaid for their visits as some good drives have been offered.

Several of the houses, anticipating the advance in cottons and other Canadian goods had ordered early, and the stocks are now nearly all received. Buyers who were shrewd enough to do this are now enabled to keep their slower competitors wondering as to the cause of some shading in prices. But while the advantage to the wholesaler will be great, very little of it will benefit the retailer, as the former is too wise to cut prices to any extent.

Many of the travellers were in the houses during the past week getting their fall and winter samples in order. Already they are beginning to disperse again with their new attractions, and their sounds will soon be heard throughout the land. Dealers are buying very warily, as just now the crop prospects are not so bright as two weeks ago. From Quebec very discouraging reports have been received. But a few weeks nice weather would make a huge difference.

Letter-orders have been quite numerous during the week, but not so bulky as in previous weeks. The falling off in demand for dress goods has been quite marked.

The dress goods for fall will run strong in tweed effects, but some other very attractive lines will be shown.

NOTES.

Gordon MacKay & Co. are showing extra value in some new shipments, the chief being three hundred pieces of navy all wool serge and five hundred pieces gray shaker flannel. Just now they are clearing sateens and prints at very low prices and also quoting extra drives in black and colored cashmeres. Among the new goods received by this firm are: wide Windsors in all colors; hemi-stitched linen and lawn handkerchiefs; a full range of plain honey-comb and fancy knitted shawls; a large stock of Canadian tweeds with special value in blue and in digo serges in three and six-quarter goods.

Caldecott, Burton and Spence have received about the last of their shipments in Canadian shirtings, linings, flannelettes, and other cotton staples thus giving them a very full and varied stock of the latest productions of the Canadian mills. These goods were ordered early in order to avoid the later advances. Nine of their travellers have left with full samples of fall and winter goods.

John Macdonald & Co. have just received very heavy shipments of tapestries, Brussels and Wiltons, and especially varied is their stock in hems, which includes all qualities and widths. Their orders for fall delivery of carpets has been unusually large.

W. R. Brock & Co. have had such a continued strong demand for black worsted trousers that they have already been forced to send in repeats for some of these lines. In this line they are showing much variety and good value. They have just received a large shipment of men's derby and four-in-hand ties in pretty and varied patterns.

John Macdonald & Co are selling the Hygiene corset. This corset being fitted up with shoulder straps and straps for holding up the skirt, is designed to relieve the waist of the load of garments and place this load on the shoulders. This is the proper way according to dress reformers and physicians, and this corset is meritoriously popular.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are showing some beautiful ranges of linen goods. Their loom and bleached tablings are very clean made and serviceable goods, and their range is large. In towellings the variety they carry in all widths and makes is very large, and renders a selection easy. Very large ranges of flannelettes, shirtings, ticks and other Canadian goods are to be seen in the warehouse, and prime value in grey flannels. They make a great specialty of dress goods and a large variety of tweeds, henriettas and newest colorings in imported dress goods are represented in the samples, and will shortly be in the house.

John Macdonald & Co. are showing good value in a line of Merino half-hose, the Reliance, the special feature of which is a double foot and heel. They have also a large variety in light, flat neckwear for the summer trade. They have just added to their stock 15, 16, and 18-inch silk flusher for fancy work, and are showing these in all the newest art shades. A very pretty line of silk cord ruchings is also to be seen in this house.

THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER.

The commercial traveller is the advance guard, skirmisher, minute man, scout and soldier in the mighty array of commercial pursuits. He stands between the wholesaler and retailer as the wire of the telegraph between two electrical instruments, and communication would be impossible without him. His brisk air and cheerful face encourage and brighten the very atmosphere of business. His ideas and suggestions awake from his lethargy the slumbering retailer, and open new avenues of trade. The commercial traveller is the whisk broom of business, and his duty is to brush the cobwebs from the corners, and enliven the conversation of both his customers and employers. What city could stand in the front rank of business activity and civilization if it forbid the entrance of commercial travellers? The commercial traveller founds his right to exist on a rock which cannot be removed without shaking to its foundation the whole structure of business. Let us then bow to the inevitable and patiently check up his expense book.—Sample Case.

SOME PHILOSOPHICAL REMARKS ABOUT TYPE.

Like a porter-house steak, advertising can be both overdone and underdone. There is in the art as in all other arts a golden mean, to strike which is at once success and popularity. A famous orator of the day, a champion in the religious controversial arena, in one of those epigrams in which he so much delights, embodied an idea with which most liberal-minded people will sympathize, when he said that he would rather be a beggar and spend his money like a king, than be a king and spend it like a beggar. How many kings are there in the business world who spend their money in kingly fashion in everything but—advertising? When it comes to the question of making an investment in printers' ink their liberality vanishes and in its place the calculating, pinch-penny spirit becomes at once manifest. This, of course, is suicidal folly, for no investment—not excepting silver mines or industrial stocks—pays a better return, or pays it for a longer period of time, than that for which the investor receives, in lieu of a certificate of stock, an advertising contract in a first-class journal with a guaranteed circulation among the lines of business wherein he desires to find customers.

The amount of interest upon his investment, the dividends in the form of profits, which come in not at stated intervals, sometimes with a space between or even greater duration than seemed the long wait between certain convivial hospitalities in the instance of two famous Southern governors—is decided by two factors: First—Did the advertiser select the proper medium; second—were the goods offered saleable and worth the money asked for them? These questions answered satisfactorily, that is to say, honestly, in the affirmative, there is no telling whether the returns will be five or five hundred per cent. upon the investment. We believe the larger figures have been reached oftener than the smaller ones.

History repeats itself in the matter of advertising as well as in historical chronicles. Innumerable fortunes have been made by the judicious use of printers' ink. Nobody denies this. Fortunes have also been squandered in reckless advertising—equally true. But mark the chief cause of loss from this species of commercial enterprise. Almost every case of disaster caused by over-advertising can be traced to one cause which in itself proffers the very best indorsement of the value of publicity—a wild, unreasonable greed to still further realize the immense profits which have been proved to accrue to the patron of the preservative art. Throwing discretion to the winds the plungers in the advertising field have in many instances allowed their very eagerness to realize inordinate returns to run away with their judgment, and the result has been calamitous.

But overdoing are not the only faults which detract from the legitimate measure of success which is open to all who are willing to enter the lists and say their little say in printers' ink. There is much in their style—or to carry out the simile—in the tone of voice in which they tell their story. They may tell it in thunder tones and scare away the rats in the top attic and possible customers also; or they may drop into a whine which awakens pity and nothing more. Shakespeare in his oft-quoted "Advice to the Players" tells his hearers to "Speak the speech, I pray you,

As I pronounce to you,

Trippingly on the tongue," adding the caution, born perhaps of misery endured when listening to "a periwig-pated fellow tearing a passion to tatters," that "If they mouthed it," he would "as lief the town crier spoke his lines." This was hard upon the histrionic abilities of the town-crier, who was the chief advertising medium also of Shakespeare's time, but it might be repeated to the noble army of advertisers to-day, changing only the form so as to apply to written instead of oral addresses. The advertising jumbler and bore is the worst kind of bore. True, one is not obliged to read what he tries so ineffectually to say, but see the good space wasted and the seed he is carelessly sowing for a future crop of tares in the form of anathemas against that beneficial aid of the truly wise, printers' ink, when in deed and in truth, the only stumbling-block is his own incapacity.—American Artisan.

WHERE THE JOKE COMES IN.

The boy's fishing pole was fastened under the root of a tree on the river bank yesterday, and he was sitting in the sun playing with a dog.

"Fishing?" inquired a man passing along the road.

"Yep," answered the boy, briefly.

"Nice dog you've got there. What's his name?"

"Fish."

"Fish? That's a queer name for a dog. What did you call him that for?"

"Cause he won't bite."

Then the man proceeded on his way.

Diner (to restaurant waiter): "What have you got for dinner?"

Waiter: "Roast beef, riccas seed chicken stew, ed lamb baked, fried potatoes, Indian pudding, milktea and coffee."

Diner: "Give me the third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, and two last syllables."

Wife: "John, I wish you'd go into Coffee & Co.'s when you're in town, and see why they haven't sent the groceries I ordered by post-card two days ago. It's shameful to neglect my order so. Just give them a good scolding, will you John?"

John: "I shall go there and see Mr. Coffee, himself about it."

John (an hour later): "Mr. Coffee, here's an order on this post-card that I've carried in my pocket two days. I wish you'd get the goods up to the house early this morning will you please?"

"Fine morning," said the baker to the butcher; "been taking a walk?" "Yes just came from your shop with half a dozen loaves of bread." "Where are they, then?" "Under my hat. Plenty of room for them there."

The baker did not forget this insult, and when the butcher met him on the street and asked him where he had been, he promptly answered:

"Been to your slaughterhouse; bought a calf's head." "Where is it, then?" "Under my hat," he retorted, and he walked away triumphant, as he thought.—[Exchange.

"Do you use night caps?" asked his sweetheart. "Yes, love," he replied, "with a little sugar," and she couldn't think what he meant.—Texas Siftings.

[This department is made up largely of items from travellers and retailers throughout the Dominion. It contains much interesting information regarding the movements of those in the trade. The editor will thank contributors to mail copy to reach the head office Tuesday.]

A. Russell, grocer, London, has sold his grocery stock and gone out of business.

The Windsor merchants will close their stores at 6.30 each evening, except Saturdays, during July and August.

A. Davidson, of Durham, has secured a situation with an India tea firm. He is to have the sole control of their teas in Canada.

Jas. L. Grant & Co., of Ingersoll, slaughtered 600 hogs on Thursday forenoon. This is their best record for one-half day of five hours.

Mr. Robert Pickard, of Richard Pickard & Son, general merchants, Exeter, was married last week to Miss Lizzie Verity. The wedding trip is to Duluth, via Savina.

L. C. Hughes, Tottenham, Ont., general merchant and publisher, left on the 4th inst., for a trip to San Francisco, Cal. Our best wishes for a safe and pleasant journey go with him.

Andrew Murphy, of London, has been committed for trial by the police magistrate on a charge of stealing $10 and a lot of knives from Cowan's hardware store the other night.

Hon. Mr. Foster has given notice of a resolution to-night extending the period for granting a bounty on sugar made from Canadian-grown beets, which expires on July 1 next, until June 13, 1895.

Wm. H. Dunn, the Montreal representative of The Pure Gold Mfg. Co., of this city, favored us with a call the latter part of last week. He was in the city on a business trip to the firm, and has returned with a full line of fresh samples.

Mr. Cutter, representative of Stephen L. Bullett, Boston, Mass., importer of Bensdorp's Royal Dutch cocoa was in the city last week. He is making arrangements to exhibit the Cocoa at the Industrial Exhibition in Sept. next on a larger scale than last year.

John Henderson, foreman at the Canada Chemical Works, London, Ont., has been presented by Wm. Bowman, on behalf of the company, with a valuable gold watch in appreciation of 25 years' faithful service. Such acts are creditable alike to employer and employee.

Mr. W. M. Shobottom, for many years a grocer at Ailsa Craig, has sold out his stock of groceries to Mr. E. Hutchinson, and his stock of boots and shoes to Mr. Chapman.

It is understood Mr. Shobottom will remove to Lucknow, where he will establish a canning and fruit evaporating factory.

At the Sarnia Court of Revision the other day Edward Adams and A. M. Smith, wholesale grocers of London, have each a quantity of sugar in store in Sarnia, which was down in the assessment roll at $1,000 for each lot. Sugar is cheap now, and the valuations were appealed against, and reduced to $700 in each case.

A deputation consisting of Messrs. Miller, Hodgins, Pridham, Cochrane, Hutchins, and other members, waited upon members of the Government on Tuesday and urged that in the interests of Canadian farmers and fruit growers, the duties on pork, hops, and dried fruits be increased.

THE GROCER was favored with a call this week by T. W. Trotter and W. L. Trotter, of Sheguindah, Manitoulin Islands. A short time ago the latter bought out his brother's general store business, and they were in the city straightening up accounts and ordering more goods.

The wonted size of the Merchant Sentinel is generous enough, but that excellent journal looms up more than portly in its last number. Though "made up" properly to a shapely and bulky figure, there is not an ounce of padding about it. It is a handsome issue, and its matter is honest tissue. We are glad to see our contemporary thriving.

At the regular meeting of the Toronto Commercial Travellers' Circle, held on Saturday last, it was decided to hold the annual excursion on Saturday, July 16, to Victoria Park, Niagara Falls, by steamer Empress of India and Grand Trunk Railway. Special rates and arrangements are being made for meals, side trips on the steamer Maid of the Mist, the inclined railway under the falls, etc. The committee are determined to spare no pains to make the annual outing a complete success.

Newspapers of the maritime provinces are urging upon the Government the necessity of an improved Atlantic service, pointing out the great benefits that would accrue to Canada, especially to this part of the Dominion, if one equal or superior to the crack lines were established. A number of papers, irrespective of politics, favor negotiations with the C.P.R., which company, they assert, would give a service equal to requirements, and infuse into the east that same energy and enterprise which has been displayed in the west through its efforts, and re-enact there the marvellous development noticeable beyond lake Superior. Judging from their editorial utterances any fair and reasonable arrangement which would guarantee a service as efficient on the Atlantic as the C.P.R., possesses on the Pacific would meet with unbounded favor.

Mr. John Scandrett, the well-known grocer of London, died on the 23d, after a very short illness. A week ago last Monday, he was attending to his business as usual, and, in fact up to the day before his death had no ill-health. At that time he experienced some pain, and a doctor was summoned and remained with him constantly until his demise. Heart disease and stomach trouble were the causes of death. Deceased was born in County Down, Ireland, in 1829, and when but three years old his parents emigrated to Canada. His mother died during the trip across the ocean, and thus without her guidance they were obliged to begin life in their new home, lot 4 of concession 4, London township. Mr. Scandrett was reared on a farm, and followed the calling of a farmer successfully until 1860, when, in partnership with Mr. F. A. Fitzgerald, he engaged in the grocery business in London. This relationship existed until 1876, when deceased embarked in the same business on his own account. It is needless to say that he has been successful.

A FEW WORDS ON COMPROMISES.

In a letter to the Winnipeg Commercial, a correspondent signing himself "The Writer" has the following to say on compromises:

"It may be presumed that business failures ensue from either of two causes, misfortune or mismanagement.

The former should be and are met with sympathetic consideration; all the more because of their rarity.

In the latter, justice to all parties concerned should be the basis of action, tempered with such measures as individual cases may show warrant for.

Who are the "all parties" concerned in a business failure? There is of course the bankrupt, who suffers from the effects of his own mismanagement, which may imply incompetence in means, knowledge or qualities adapted to the business engaged in, carelessness, over-expenditure, personal misconduct, &c.

Then there are his creditors, who suffer from the bankrupt's inability to pay his indebtedness, but who nevertheless are to some considerable extent "particeps criminis" in the affair, since they must have supplied goods more or less recklessly, seeing that means of information as to business standing are readily to be had, with sufficient minuteness to guide careful houses in doing a safe business.

Then there are the bankrupt's debtors, who suffer by being pushed for immediate payment of their accounts—generally at most inauspicious times—and the local competitors in business of the bankrupt, who are apt to suffer severely when compromises are made, by having to contend against stock secured by unsafe or unworthy men at 50, 60 or 70 per cent. of value.

There is also the local public, interested mainly in buying goods at low prices, and rather benefiting by bankruptcies.

Now who of all these deserve and should receive consideration, and who should have a "say" in the settlement of a bankrupt's concerns? Certainly the bankrupt and his creditors—but should not also his debtors and his local competitors? These latter are deeply and directly interested and become sufferers through a business failure, then why should they not have a voice in the disposal of a bankrupt's affairs?

Leaving out of view the few failures through misfortune, both a bankrupt and his creditors deserve to suffer according to the measure of their unbusinesslike methods and actions. In most cases, with the bankrupt, the largest creditors are the most culpable. There is a recent case in point, in which, it is stated, by far the largest creditor supplied a certain line of goods for a general store, and when stock was taken there was not sufficient of that class of goods to represent value for one-third of his claim! Is such a creditor deserving of the chief control (such generally get it, being the largest creditors) of a bankrupt's affairs, or is there any fair play in such a bankrupt receiving a bonus of 30, 40 or 50 per cent. of the stock he holds at the time of such a failure? Should the claims of such people receive the highest consideration as against parties who suffer from the failure through no special result of their own?

The present method of dealing with bankrupts and their estates provides premiums for incompetence, recklessness and dishonesty; each unwarranted compromise is a blow at business honesty, an insult to business honor.

Both a bankrupt's debtors and his local competitors should have representation at meetings of creditors, if justice and fair play are to be dealt out as they should be in bankruptcy cases, and, with worthy exceptions, the method of disposal of bankrupt stocks should be by sale "en bloc" of each class of goods to the highest bidder, without compromises and extensions to unworthy bankrupts.

By adopting a system of representations of debtors as well as of creditors, of local business competitors as well as of the bankrupt at bankruptcy meetings, and an understood cessation of compromises and extensions except in unusually deserving cases, fair play to all would be better assured and cases of bankruptcy would be very sensibly diminished."

TIPS AND TOLLS IN BUSINESS.

The cost of business is by no means limited to legitimate expenses. Incidentals are generally numerous, seldom modest and never deficient in absorption or appetite. Their nibbling propensity never wearies, and like a family of mice, they secure both board and lodging in the business commissariat. This particular breed of financial parasites is incapable of giving up the ghost, or hanging out its gall bag to dry. It is ubiquitous and prolific, and grades upwards from a boot black to a congressman. The cause or causes are not beyond the reach of a ten-foot pole, and are mostly located in the craze for cash, that is now known as smartness, push and "getting there." It is of course a sign of the times, and one of the few truth-telling shingles hung over the doorway of modern character. In business it is mostly desirable in such departments of service as can more or less inconvenience the merchant or trader. In the shipping or delivery of goods for instance, some ten years of personal experience in railroad service, unfolded an invoice of tips and toll that was as big as a government blanket, and as innocent of modesty as a veteran mule. Under the ermine mantle of gratitude for "favours received," contributions were in a plurality, and combined everything from a ham to a nickle plated stove. These gifts were never strictly solicited. This would have been an outrage and an extortion, especially where a generous salary was drawn by the recipient for doing his duty, but by a tacit understanding the necessary lubricant was in form where a creak in the hinge invited the oil bottle. There is of course nothing criminal in a man of business acknowledging a special service. It is certainly something more than a day's walk from being right when it left the man in the cold who had no tips to give. In some instances, and perhaps more of these than was allowed by the law, cars when scarce were distributed by the rule of greenbacks rather than of justice. With one man there never was any stopping in the clock when he wanted a favor, but with others who failed to reciprocate, delay and inconvenience was by no means rare enough to be either a change or a luxury. This levying of tolls was endorsed or encouraged when known by managers, but for all that the leech on the body of business succeeded in extracting its allowance of red fluid. It will, perhaps, in some millenium yet to come be recognized as an evil, but its extinction will never be so long as business men encourage it. It may be a delicate matter to handle, but it is, nevertheless, a pretty big stone in the business boot, and will have to be shaken out of the calf skin before the tip and toll system ceases to facilitate the business of one man or firm at the inconvenience or loss of another. As we have before stated, this evil is by no means limited to any one branch of public service, but it is a big wart on the nose of them all —Ex.

THIS NEEDS NO HEADLINE.

Twenty years ago the buyer went to the seller, now the seller goes to the buyer. This is not to be taken literally, of course, as if the seller was required to hawk his wares from door to door, but the whole tendency of modern business methods is that the man who has something to sell seeks out the buyer, a complete reversal of former conditions, when he who was in want of something sought out the seller. The tradesman, who now-a-days contents himself with a dignified seclusion petrifies into a statute. The live man advertises, circularizes, thrusts his personality in a hundred ways on the notice of the public, presents his wares so that they speak for him, considers the taste of buyers, creates wants and desires, and studies the convenience of customers.—Iron Trade Review.

WHO OWNS A MAILED LETTER.

A letter once mailed no longer belongs to the sender, but is the property of the person to whom it is addressed. Such is the postal law, but it is a law often violated by postmasters in small places, where correspondents are likely to be personally known to the post-office authorities, and sometimes leads to curious complications in large ones where this is not the case.

Important business interests have been affected by the same law. A firm which had long been really insolvent had succeeded in keeping the knowledge from the public, and continued to receive money from investors, which the partners employed dishonestly for their own advantage. It was their intention to raise one more large sum of money, part of which was to be contributed by a business friend of one of them, and then to leave the country with their spoil, and let their creditors shift for themselves.

But the wife of the business friend and the wife of the man who meant to victimize him frequently corresponded with each other, and the latter wrote a gay, gossiping letter to the former in which she mentioned that her husband had been in poor health lately on account of business troubles, but that she trusted their approaching trip to Canada would restore him.

Remembering, too late, that her husband had asked her to mention neither of these facts, and fearing to vex him, she went to the post-office to recall her letter. The postmaster refused to give it up. She could give no good reason for demanding it, and became petulant and irritated when he continued to refuse. He remained firm and the letter was sent.

The recipient showed it to her husband, whose suspicions it aroused. He made an investigation, and as a consequence the dishonest firm was broken up, and both the partners arrested and punished.

Intercepted letters have long been a popular theme of drama and romance. A letter which could not be intercepted, but had to go in spite of the sender's express desire and entreaty, might offer an interesting variety.—Youth's Companion.

TORONTO, July 7, 1892.
GROCERIES.

The first week of July and the last week in June are usually very much alike, and do not differ greatly this year. July opens under no particularly hopeful auspices. The volume of the trade done is considerable, but it is done unselfishly, profits being still the last thing any wholesaler apparently concerns himself about. The freight account on the sales for June probably is as large as it usually is for that month, but the profits are much smaller in the aggregate, that is, the amount of business done was up to the June average, but the profits were not. Stock taking is now going on in some of the houses, and the usual drudgery of that work is not made more cheering by the returns from the books. The trade has been for a long time very unsatisfactory, and a not unnatural sign of such a condition is the reported decision of a Hamilton house to go out of the business on account of the meagreness of profits. It is to be wondered at that the continuance so long of business with prices so close to cost has not produced more such symptoms of its effects before this. The present week's sales have been fairly large in sugar, canned goods and Valencia raisins, but teas have not found much call, and other dried fruits have been neglected to a considerable extent. As to collections there is nothing to be said but that they might easily be better without being extraordinary. Payments are of course regulated, in the matter of amount, by previous business, which being from hand to mouth usually, determines remittances in small sums.

COFFEE.

The conditions ruling the buying of coffee by importers are of more interest than those ruling the sale of coffee to retailers, for it is the former that are supreme in the control of prices, as the supply here never to any appreciable extent overbalances the demand so as to produce a Canadian market different in any respect from the foreign market. Just now the outside influences are for steadiness, and prices are the same for Brazil coffees, both Rios and Santos, that is 17½ to 21c. Also, the grades in fullest stock are common coffees, choice being scarcely obtainable. Java coffees retain all their former strength, being now from 34c. upwards, with 2c. higher as the starting point for fine yellow stock. The demand for coffee is not above the usual moderate capacity that this market has to supply.

DRIED FRUITS.

There is no longer any controversy between sellers and buyers as to the value of Valencia raisins. They are admittedly good property at full prices. The demand has got into shape to take big stocks off now, July being one of the great consuming months and August another. Some retailers took time by the forelock and bought their summer supply just when the turn began, and before the wholesalers here had the courage to increase their prices by a little profit increment. Those who have the stock are satisfied. The lowest they could buy at now is 3¼c., and not every house would accommodate them at that figure. The New York market is virtually in a state of depletion, so far as ability to afford bargains is concerned. Layers are in better request as well at 7c. Currants need all the buoyancy that the demand can give them if they are to emerge from the despondent state in which they have lain for so long a time. No change is to be credited to this week that is beneficial to the price, which remains quotable from a basis of 4½c. Prunes have pretty well departed from current interest, with the assent both of the supply and the demand, both

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

Previous conditions have not been superseded by anything new, and those that were uppermost last week are still in the ascendant. The distributive sieve is on the whole rather fine, scattering stock over the country in generally small parcels, though a few exceptions of large sales are to be credited to this week as well as to most of its forerunners. A few hundred cases of vegetables have been sold to Montreal, which has some significance in the face of reports of abundance of stock on that market. There the demand appears not to be sated with goods of choice quality, or this business would not have been done. The supply of tomatoes on spot is generally supposed to be ample for all the demands the waning crop year can muster, and no attempt is being made by jobbers to excite business by putting any leverage under prices, which remain at $1.05 for assortments of staples. Corn of A 1 quality brings $1.10 in quantities smaller than carloads. Peas are slightly less active, the supply and cheapness of fresh green peas tending to detract from the demand. Business does not go on briskly in contracts for the new pack, a general disinclination to load up being observable. Beans and pumpkins are unchanged in price but somewhat better in demand. Salmon diminishes rapidly

To Canning Men.-OUR CYCLONE PULP MACHINE

For making tomato pulp and preparing pumpkin and squash for canning is very well known to all the canners in the United States, and a few of them are in use in Canada. The high tariff has prevented their being used extensively heretofore.

We are now manufacturing these machines at Oakville, Ont., to enable our Canadian friends to obtain them without paying a heavy duty; but we shall make only a few of them unless ordered. Those who contemplate purchasing, should send their orders promptly to insure the saving of duty, as late orders will have to be filled from stock in the United States which will be subject to a 30 per cent duty.

as a spot commodity, nothing but remnants of stock, held by the few, remaining to meet the demand, which has now the greater part of its capacity fully open, owing to the trades of the country being pretty thoroughly sold out and the season of consumption being at its height. Horse shoe talls are all but exhausted and are worth $1.60. Flats are firm at $1.70. The Nimkish brand is $1.55, and what is generally known as the Indian brand, which a short time ago was $1.25, is now $1.50. The position of the market is strong for future salmon at $4 80 at the coast. The English market is in a receptive state at that price. Here, the stiffness of values led to some speculation by city retailers, who may find however that buying on a rising market at the fag-end of a year is not good policy, as the new pack goods may come in before the wide margin aimed at is realized on all the purchase. A shipment of new lobsters is to hand, but the stock of old is still considerable from $1.90 up.

failing that fruit at about the same time. New evaporated apricots are now quoted at 9½ to 10c. at the Pacific coast, and a shipment has already been received at New York. There is likely to be a good season's trade in California evaporated fruits, as last year's business was satisfactory to all who ventured on that line of goods. There is no decline in the firm position for some time held by lemon peel, which still goes at 16 to 17c. and is scarce. Nuts call for no especial notice in this week's report, the state of the demand for them being unchanged.

RICE AND SPICES.

Rice is now in demand but the trade in it is confined almost entirely to common rice at 3½c. The reason for this restriction is the scarcity of foreign milled Japan and the strong price of Java. Japan is 5½ to 6c, and Java is 6½c. Japan, imported ready milled, is now exceedingly scarce and is wanted.

Spices have no very prominent features in relief this week. Tapioca is advancing in the primary market and at centres of distribution. Small brown sago is out of stock, and seed tapioca is being very generally used as a substitute. New sago will not be in for two months. Prices are unchanged for all descriptions.

SUGAR.

The movement of sugar acquires momentum slowly. Cars go forward as they did last week, but the majority moved are called for by the joint orders of neighboring grocers. Occasionally retailers do go in singly for carloads, but not frequently. The trade is not yet of the volume that it was last year at the opening of the preserving season, though prices are so favorable to the buyer and stock can be had upon the briefest possible notice. One reason for this is that there was a considerable quantity of sugar sold in March for delivery now. Raspberries have not begun to tell with their full force upon the demand, but they are expected to make business when their season is well under way. The prospect of raspberries is generally reported to promise a large yield. There is no abatement of the chronic unsatisfactory conditions. Prices are hard to quote, simply because the term "granulated" is no longer definite enough to place beside any particular figures. For the very finest, jobbers get not far from 4½c., but there are grades which by courtesy are comprehended under the same general name, that go as low as 4¼c. The wide diversity of quality embarrasses retailers, who seem slow to get into the way of specifying the name of the refinery in submitting orders. That nondescript sugar, Grocers' A, unpopular as it is, is a better sugar than some that are sold and branded as granulated. For this class of sugar wholesalers admit they would not pay within ½c. of what they would give for a first class granulated, say Peach Blossoms or Creams. It is said that the very low grade, which is generally spoken of as off-granulated, will not keep preserves. If that is the case, of course there will be, sooner or later, a reaction from the low point in quality to which some refiners are running. Yellows are steadier than granulated, because they are not in the centre of interest as granulated is, and there is very little quoting below 3½c. and what there is rarely goes below 3.40c.

Willett & Gray, New York, in their weekly "statistical": Total stock in all the principal countries at the latest uneven dates, 1,238,016 tons against 1,229,015 tons.

Raws—Until within the last two days the market has been steady and firm, with frequent transactions at last week's quotations, and at 3 3-16c for centrifugals c.i.f. for Boston. The market has developed weakness, however, and last sales are at 1-16 decline. There have been further purchases made in Cuba for August shipment, and a considerable portion of the Cardenas stock is now owned by American refiners. Many holders for speculative account in Cuba are, however, not sellers at present, following the lead of European speculators who expect better prices later on. European market has been somewhat unsettled, with a weakening tendency towards the close of the month caused possibly by the dropping out of some holders who have become tired of changing over from mouth to mouth while waiting for an advance. The beet quotations are now quite near the parity of Cuba centrifugals, and the question of competition for the American trade seems nearer at hand. The West India Muscovados find a ready prompt sale at 2.81c for 89° test, and will be wanted freely through the season. New crop Javas for August-September shipment have been engaged for America to a considerable extent, on importers, as well as refiners' account.

Refined—A change in methods of quotations to meet the wishes of the Grocers' Association is now being made, but does not change or affect the net values. Neither does it make any discrimination against any grocer who is not a member of an association. Any grocer in the United States can buy as cheaply of the American Sugar Refining Company, under the new arrangement, as any other grocer. Allowances and trade discounts equalize all transactions to the net basis of 4.22c for granulated. The Grocers' Associations make their prices and arrangements for a fair compensation in distributing the sugars. Independent grocers make prices independently as they please. There is no forcing, no compulsion, no discrimination, no conflict. Some grocers think it for their interest to join associations; others do not. That the local associations are spreading over the country is an indication of their advantages.

Meltings have further increased, and the active season is now in full progress. Prices are likely to vary but little, if any. A few Scotch yellows are arriving, but the quantity is limited, and the margin of profit small.

Beet crop—F. O. Licht's June report estimates acreage at about the same as last year. The size of the crop as compared with last year's now depends entirely on the weather, with the laws of probabilities against any smaller result. Remaining for export after June 1st in Germany and Austria-Hungary 300,000 tons against 301,345 tons same time last year, of which 235,855 tons were actually exported. The consumption of Europe for nine months to end of May shows 53,000 tons increase over preceding year.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrup has nothing for it but to wait its turn, come that when it may. Just now it looks as if giving away would be rather a forced process if freight had to be paid by the recipient. Prices are as low as ever, 1 3/4c. being the minimum.

Molasses has no movement of any account. New Orleans is quiet at from 30c. upwards, and West Indian at from 35c. upwards, quoted in barrels.

TEAS.

The second shipment of new season's Japan teas is just to hand. The prices at which the bulk of it is held range from 25c. upwards. The samples, which were received some time ago, compare favorably with those of the corresponding picking last year, the make of the leaf and the quality of the liquor being finer. The choicest tippy Darjeelings of the new season are very scarce now, being exhausted at the centre of production. Nearly everything of this class was grabbed up as soon as offered. None is likely to reach this market. The tea trade has been very light during the past week.

A private advice from Hiogo, dated 9th of June, reports that buying up to that date was very general, and that stocks were then reduced to about 2,000 piculs. Cold weather was expected to cause a shortage in the first crop. Up to the time of writing, the shortage, as compared with the yield of 1891 up to the same date, was 17,593 piculs. Sellers as a consequence showed an unwillingness to accept any reduction in price. The lower grades of the crop, which offered this season at a little over last year's opening prices, had advanced $1.50 to $2 per picul. Settlements to date were 47,755 piculs against 65,340 piculs last year.

MARKET NOTES.

[Importers, wholesale merchants and manufacturers should send any items intended for this department so that they may reach the head office not later than Wednesday morning. The editor will always welcome such information.]

R. S. McIndoe has been showing new pea, and strawberries, for the Delhi Canning Co. since Wednesday.

G. A. Lambe & Co. are now representing Carter, Macy & Co., Japan, young Hyson and black teas, New York.

A brand of lobster salad, put up in attractive flat tins by Hoegg & Co., Fredericton, N. B., is now on this market for the first time, a shipment having been received on Monday by Sloan & Crowther.

W. T. Harris, Chatham, N. B., dealer in general merchandise, offers 200 cases canned lobsters, also dried cod of finest quality.

Smith & Keighley are offering some special values in new season's Japan tea, at prices ranging from 25 to 35c. The second shipment is just now to hand and samples were received several days ago.

J. Cleghorn & Son, will be receiving during the next three weeks mixed carloads of Mississippi and Illinois tomatoes direct from the growers. They also handle large quantities of fancy packed California fruits put up especially for fancy trade.

In the Bordeaux market packers who were unable to fill their orders for new peas have paid more fortunate competitors the equivalent of $1.50 to 2.00 per case advance on original selling prices, to fill a part of their contracts. Evidently French peas will be high throughout the season.—N. Y. Commercial Bulletin.

Sloan & Crowther have just received a shipment of lobster of the Royal Crown brand. This is the first arrival of stock of this season's pack, and was packed at Richibucto, N. B. The quality proves to be very fine, judged by samples examined. In the contract the canning firm engages that the quality shall be equal to the best. The price to prompt buyers is $2 in talls and $2.50 in flats.

Perkins, Ince & Co. have received samples of fine Moning Congous. The prices open a little lower and the samples show a little better than last year. There is strong likelihood, however, that prices may advance before long. A significant feature, pointing to this probability, is that while last year over 180,000 half chests were settled for at 40 taels and over, this year only 15,000 half chests were sold so high. According to last advice (28th May) to Perkins, Ince & Co., every single chop of first Moning was bought up at that date.

Henderson & Liddell, 3 Eastcheap, London, England, announce in this issue their readiness to receive consignments of canned goods, green fruit, etc. This reliable house commands a connection that is likely to prove valuable to Canadian producers who are looking round for a suitable export channel to carry off their surplus product. Packers of canned fruits will be apt to find it to their advantage to consign a trial shipment to the firm. They issue a periodical called Price Current and Market Report which furnishes full information for the guidance of both buyers and sellers.

PETROLEUM.

There is nothing to add to the invariable fact that the price of Canadian refined is 14c. to outside buyers and 14 1/2 to 15c. distributed to the city trade.

The Petrolia Advertiser quotes $1.27 1/2 per barrel for Petrolia crude, and $1.28 1/2 for Oil (Continued on page 20.)

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

The week's flour sales have been inconsiderable for distant delivery and distribution for local needs has not been materially improved since a week ago, the only agency that could effect improvement being the exhaustion of supplies in the hands of dealers and that is a general thing. Prices are not over-firm, the influence of eastern offers and of eastern withholding of offers being weakening in tendency. Feed is not changed in any important respect. Hay is lower in consequence of a liberal crop being expected, and both bran and shorts are rather easy.

FLOUR.—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitobapats, $4.95 to $5; strong bakers', $4.50; white wheat patents, $4.80; straight roller, $4.40; low grades, per bag, $1.25 to $1.50.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.95 to $5.00; Manitoba strong bakers' $4.45 to $4.60; Ontario patents, $4.00 to $4.25; straight roller, $3.50; extra, $3.35 to $3.40; low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.50.

MEAL—Oatmeal is $3.80. Cornmeal is $3.50.

FEED—Bran is $11.50 to $12, shorts $13 $13.50, mixed feed $22, feeding corn 50 to 52, oats 31 1/2 to 32c.

HAY—Is fairly active at $11.50 to $12 for No. 1 timothy and $10.50 to $11 for mixed.

STRAW—Is steady at $6.50 to $7.

MONTREAL.

Local trade is fairly active at prices within range of quotations. Export business is quiet. Prices abroad do not show sufficient margin to induce buyers. We quote:—Patent spring, $4.85 to $4.95; patent winter, $4.80 to $4.90; straight roller, $4.20 to $4.35; extra, $3.80 to $3.95; superfine, $3.25 to $3.50; fine, $3.10 to $3.35; strong bakers, $4.45 to $4.65.

Oatmeal, very little doing outside of demand for local wants. Prices are about steady. We quote:—Granulated, bbls., $3.90 to $4.00; Rolled, bbls., $3.80 to $3.90; Standard, bbls., $3.75 to $3.85; Granulated in bags, $1.90 to $2.00; Rolled in bags, $1.90 to $2.00; Standard, in bags, $1.75 to $1.80.

Bran and shorts meet with a fair steady local demand. Mouillie is quiet. Quotations are unchanged, as follows: Bran, $14 to $14.50; shorts, $15 to $17; mouillie, $20 to $23.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

FLOUR—The demand is fair, and the market is well supplied with a tendency to lower prices. Manitoba is quoted at $5.50 to $5.60. High grade family $4.80 to $4.90. Medium Patent $4.60 to $4.75.

OATMEAL—There is a steady demand for oatmeal. Prices are unchanged at $4.15 to $4.20 for both Standard and Roller.

CORNMEAL—The market is very dull. Quotations given are $2.80 to $2.90.

MARKETS—Continued

Springs crude. It adds that there is no speculation, but that the feeling is one of confidence.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The receipts of butter, though fairly large, are well balanced by the demand, which is of a more organized character under the action of an export interest that is developing. Some shipments now in course of preparation are taking up the greater part of the stock that shows good value at prices ranging from 12½ to 14c. There is also a market for white butter at 10c. A Montreal buyer has been on this market the past few days and has taken a considerable quantity of low grade stuff, which is believed to be destined for New York. Buyers here will pay 13½ to 14c. for good dairy tub, and 12½ to 13c. for good store - packed butter. Large rolls are falling of every fast, and now are an insignificant element in the market, most of them going to the composition of tubs, and so shipped by country merchants. The market for all classes of butter is in a very fair condition. The position taken by the manufacturers of creamery butter betokens intrinsic strength. They are now storing butter in preference to accepting 19 to 19½c. In this they appear to be justified by large sales made a short time ago.

Cheese is worth 9½ to 10c. from dealers' hands, but this is fully one cent of advance upon prices asked for car lots. Septembers are not yet completely exhausted, and are held at 11½ to 12c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Firmness at prices quoted a week ago is a condition acquired this week. Four cars changed hands this week at something in the close neighborhood of $1.05 at point of shipment. Inquiry all the way from St. Louis has been heard from on this market, but no business has resulted. Out of store lots are $1.15 to $1.25.

DRIED AND EVAPORATED APPLES—The dulness has not yet lifted. Evaporated sell at from 6 to 6½c. according to quantity, and sun-dried at from 3½c.

EGGS—The price for good stock is 11c., and for seconds 10c. The latter are quite plentiful, owing to collections and selections being made for the English market.

HONEY—Extracted is 5 to 7c. Sections are scarce at 12 to 14c.

HOPS—The range is 21 to 24c. for '91 hops, and 16 to 18c. for '90's. There is little business going on. Prospects are so far favorable to a good yield this year, but the critical stage in the growth has not been reached and the present rains are harmless.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW.

HIDES—Are unchanged. No. 1 green cows' are 4½c. Cured are 5c. The market circulation is well kept up, the outlet for cured being capable of carrying off all the raw that come to hand, but prices show no signs of mending.

SKINS—An advance of 5c. in pelts and lambskins was made on Saturday. The former are now 25c., the latter 40c.

TALLOW—Rendered is 5c., rough is 2c.

WOOL—Combing fleeces are 17c., clothing fleeces 20c., super 22c., extra super 25c.

VEGETABLES.

Potatoes have taken a sudden turn for the better, and on Monday rose to about twice their value of a week ago. The price is 40 to 45c. per bag in cars. Out of store lots are 50 to 60c. New are worth $3 per barrel. Cabbage are $2 per crate. Cucumbers are $1.75 to $2 per crate.—Onions are $2 per crate for Bermudas and $2.75 per sack for Egyptians.—Melons are 30 to 40c.

PROVISIONS.

The demand is chiefly local. Little has been done in bulk lots, and little inquiry for such parcels is heard. Smoked meats have the main part of the demand. Prices are unchanged.

BACON—Long clear is 7¾ to 8c., smoked backs are 10½ to 11c., bellies 10½ to 11c., rolls 8¾c.

HAMS—Are steady at 10½ to 11c.

LARD—Pure is unchanged at 9¾ to 10c. for tubs and pails. Compound is steady at 7 to 9c.

BARREL PORK—U. S. heavy mess is $13 to $14, Canadian $15. short cut $16.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef is 4 to 4½c. in fore and 7 to 7½c. in hindquarters, mutton is 7 to 7½c. Spring lamb is 11 to 13c. per lb., yearling lamb 9 to 10c., mutton 7 to 8c., veal 7 to 8½c.

GREEN FRUIT.

The holidays,—the celebration of the First and the excursions of the Fourth,—gave a good impulse to trade in most fruits now in stock. Oranges are steady at $5 to $5.50 for Mediterranean sweets, the only description yet in stock. Lodi oranges are coming in now, as well as Maoris. Lemons are firm at $5 to $5.50. Bananas are scarce and high, $1.40 to $1.75 being now the range. Pineapples are out of the market for the season. Strawberries are variable from day to day, but the limits of fluctuation through the week have been 3 to 7c. New California pears are in at $4.50 per box. Apricots are $2, peaches $2.50, cherries $2, red currants $1.25 per basket.

FISH.

The stock distributed by pedlars is considerable, consumption being more general than it has been for some time previously. The prices remain as they were quoted last week, viz., 14c. for salmon, 6½c. for salmon trout and white fish and $1.50 to $1.75 for lake herring.

SALT.

Conditions are not subject to variation at this season. Prices are steady at quotations in Prices Current, and business is quiet.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, July 7, 1892.

GROCERIES.

There have been few if any important changes in groceries during the week, and the aggregate movement is of limited dimensions. Values generally rule steady with the exception of molasses, which is still a field for competition in the way of cutting. In view of the low range of prices on groceries generally, wholesalers are hoping for a better demand shortly, as retail dealers cannot be supplied very liberally, in consequence of the hand to mouth character of their operations in the immediate past.

SUGAR.

The sugar market still remains quiet, both with the refiners and the wholesale trade. The refiners anticipated a boom in sugar some weeks ago, but it failed to come. The only business doing on spot is a small jobbing one. One of the refiners here states that things have never been so dull with them for some time, and puts the dullness down to the cutting in the early spring, when no doubt the retailers stocked up heavily.

We quote: Granulated 4½ to 4 9/16c.; yellows, low grade 3½ to 3¾c., and yellows bright 3¾ to 4¼c.

TEAS.

The local tea market is about the same as noted last week; the business that is being done is only small. Blacks are quiet but firm under light stocks both here and in London. Advices from Japan report the market there for Japans very much firmer. Several brokers here have received cables from their Japan headquarters to hold the present stock of teas for higher prices, as the home market is advancing every day. It is also reported the quotations for 2nd crop stock are a good deal higher in comparison than for 1st crop teas.

MOLASSES.

The tone of the molasses market is pretty much the same as it was last week. There has been some cutting in price, but it does not seem to have the desired effect on buyers as they are not taking hold freely as yet. The sale last week went off all right and the prices were pretty steady. The cutting seems to be confined to one or two houses in the east, which are always trying to cut each other's throats. The stock that was to have been auctioned off this week has not come to hand yet, but is expected every day. We quote: Barbadoes 29 to 31c., American 28c.; syrups are quoted at 25 to 28c. for medium bright, 40 to 45c. for choice, amber 40 to 45c.

MAPLE SYRUP.

Maple products are the same as last week with no change in price. We quote maple syrup in tins 60 to 64c. per gallon, and in wood at 5c. per pound. Maple sugar is quoted at 7 to 8c., and fancy cakes at 8½c.

COFFEES.

The steady feeling of coffee is maintained, and a fair demand for small parcels is noted, which appears to satisfy holders as supplies here are not large. We quote as follows:—Rios 18 to 20c.; Java, 23 to 25c.; Mocha, 24 to 25c.; Jamaica, 19 to 21c.; and Maracaibo, 22½ to 23c., Santos, 17½ to 19c.

RICE.

Locally rice is about the same as we have noted from time to time. The business that is being done is a nice steady one at good prices. We have to note the sales of several car lots during the week. We quote standard $4 to $4.10, Japan $4.50 to $5, Patnas $4.50 to $5, and Carolinas $7 to $8 per hundred pounds.

NUTS.

There is no special feature to report in fruits, which rule with other lines of groceries, the movement being of a small jobbing character. We quote: Almonds Tarragona 14 to 15c.; almonds, Ivica, 14 to 15c.; almonds, common, 10 to 11c.; almonds, hard-shell, 7 to 8c.; walnuts, Grenoble, new 12 to 14c.; walnuts, French 10 to 10½c.; cocoanuts per 100 $3.75 to $4.00; filberts 9 to 10c.; pecans 16 to 17c.; peanuts 7 to 10c.

GREEN FRUIT.

There is a fair seasonable trade doing in green fruit with nothing special to note in any particular line. Oranges have a fair sale. We quote: Bloods in half boxes $3; Massinas $4 to $4.75; lemons $2.75 to $3.50; pineapples 7 to 15c. each, strawberries 5 to 7c. per box, bananas $1 to $1.50 per bunch, apricots $2 to $2.50 per box. Cherries $1.00 to $1.25 per 8 lb. baskets, peaches $2.50 to $3, blue plums $4.

APPLES.

It is not natural to expect any new development in apples now. Stocks are working gradually lower, and prices remain as before. We quote regular $5.50 to $6 per barrel; evaporated 6 to 7c.; dried 4 to 4½c., and evaporated peaches 12 to 13c. per tin.

HONEY.

Honey has a fair jobbing movement at unchanged prices. Receipts are small. We quote strained 7 to 8½c. and comb 8½ to 10c. per lb.

FISH.

There is a fair sort of trade doing in fresh fish, but nothing exceptional. Cod and haddock move at 3½ to 4c., while whitefish and lake trout have a pretty fair movement at 6 to 7c. Small lots of Gaspé salmon are offering at 10 to 10½c. The following are quotations: Smoked Yarmouth bloaters, per 60 box, $1.00 to $1.10; St. John's bloaters, per 100 box, 80c. to $1.00; boneless cod, large boxes, 6 to 7c.; do. small boxes 7 to 8c.; finnan haddies 7 to 8c.

We quote No. 1 herring, per brl., $4.50 to $4.60; lake trout, per half brl., $4.00 to $4.25; sea trout, per bbl., $8.25 to $8.75; codfish, green, No. 1, per bbl. $4.75 to $5.00; do. PROVISIONS.

The demand for pork and smoked meats continues very good for this season of the year and prices are unchanged. Canadian short cut, per brl. $16.50 to $16.75; mess pork, western, per brl. $14.50 to $15.00; short cut, western, per brl. $17.00 to $17.50; hams, city cured, per lb. 10c. to 11c.; lard, Canadian, in pails 8¼ to 8½c; bacon, per lb. 9½ to 10c; lard, com. refined, per lb. 7 to 7¼c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

Butter was quiet and dull. There have been few actual spot deals in creamery sufficient to make a quotation, so that it is hard to give a price in this connection, but 19½c. gives a pretty good idea of what buyers are willing to pay. In dairy stock the business is small at our figures. Creamery 19c., Townships dairy 16 to 17c., Western dairy 14 to 15c.

Cheese was irregular in tone but fairly active to-day. At the wharf the 3,000 French country cheese that were offered varied considerably, but although fancy prices were paid for some of these offerings the market in a regular way could be quoted on no such basis. In fact 8½ to 9c. is a fair range to cover the deals to-day, and aside from the boat purchases the outside figure was exceptional. There was no public cable to-day, but the tenor of private advices continues easy.

EGGS.

The egg market holds steady despite the falling off in the demand. The receipts are moderate and prices unchanged at 9½ to 10c.

GRAIN.

Wheat was quiet and dull. The tendency continues downward. There were offers of No. 2 hard at 86½ to 87c, and No. 3 ditto at 76 to 78c.

In the courser grains there was little to note except the sale of a cargo lot of 15,000 bushels oats at within our quotations. We quote No. 2 hard Manitoba 87 to 90c.; No.

3 hard Manitoba 78 to 80c.; peas per 66 lbs. afloat 75 to 76c.; oats per 34 lbs. 34 to 34½c.; corn, duty paid 65c.; barley, feed 35 to 40c.

SIGNS AS ADVERTISEMENTS.

Shops and store signs have two intents—to keep old customers and win new ones. In both these objects they conform to one of the basic principles of advertising.

Signs are very ancient; so ancient that the beginning of authentic history records their existence without disclosing their origin, says an exchange. Nor is this strange, for buying and selling are almost as old as the human race, and one of the earliest classifications of society is that which divides mankind into vendors and purchasers.

Before printers' ink had made a knowledge of letters well nigh universal, the ability to read alphabetical characters was a rare and technical art. Hence till times quite recent, merchants' signs consisted in natural objects or in artificial productions of the carver, the moulder or the painter. The change to verbal delineation has been in the direction of utility, but art has lost much with the disappearance of the figured and colored emblems of trade. As for the signmaker's old-time ingenuity, it has been rather converted or diverted to the new methods than discontinued, and in its survival, under changed conditions, is the promise that the sign-painter and the artist have not parted company forever. Indeed the last ten years have been graced by many visible proofs of a revival of artistic feeling in the matter of commercial signs, and in this rebirth of art in unity it is not difficult to trace the reflex action upon signboards of high class illustrations now so common in newspaper advertisements. Thus and again one is tempted to exclaim that, as in the Augustan age, all roads led to Rome, so in these later days many pleasant and profitable paths along which men pursue their way converge upon this modern practice of scientific, because calculated advertising.

A satisfactory proof of the usefulness and therefore value of signs is the tender care with which the law protects them. Law is a growth, not a fabrication; and when one sees the law stretching its long and strong arms over anything, one knows that the thing so guarded has already made its place in the social economy. You must not appropriate or imitate your competitor's signs. To do so is legally stigmatized as unfair trading, for his signs are a part of the "good will" of the business, and the public is not to be compelled to go about with microscope or telescope to distinguish his place of business from your own.

If you are in trade you must have signs upon your commercial premises. To say that those signs should be the best that human ingenuity can devise for the purpose of your business is but to state a truism.

Here are a few fundamental rules that will be found to hold good however various their application to particular cases:

1. The heart or core of every business sign should consist of an inscription of words, no matter how elaborate the background or other accessories.

2. The verbal inscription should be as verbal and graphic as circumstances will admit, and the baldness of statement of a visiting card should be avoided.

3. Display lettering should be used for more important words or phrases.

4. Ornamentation should be used and applied as not to interfere with the rapid and sure reading of the words on the signs.

5. The sign, as an entity, should have a distinctive character—a personality of its own as exclusive as that of its proprietor—and this distinctive character should not be eccentric but one possessing the qualities of true impressiveness and responsible permanence.

6. The essentials of the sign should be determined with regard to continuity in its use, so that they may survive changes of proprietorship or of firm name in the business methods, or change of location.

7. The sign, as an entire thing, should be designed with due respect to its visible surroundings, whether present or probable in the not too far distant future; and this consideration should include the capability of the sign to be making business for its owners during the days and hours of temporary cessation from business.

8. The sign should be capable of economical repair or renewal, without material change in its character. If the goods made or sold on the sign-marked premises will permit it—as for instance, if farm tools or vehicles are the stock in trade, a neatly painted illustration of those lines should have an important place on the sign of that establishment.

The foregoing rules will not be regarded as too recondite or fanciful when the pressure of competition and its relief by judicious advertising be taken into account, or when it is remembered that the difference between unskillful or heedless advertising and no advertising at all makes but little substantial difference in the result.

It may not be amiss to note that when the owner of a sign is simply a tenant of the premises upon which the sign appears, the rights and benefits of signs belong wholly to himself, and cannot be appropriated or retained by the landlord or a new tenant upon vacation of the premises.—Farm Tools.

BARM YEAST

IS THE BEST AND CHEAPEST.

BARM YEAST CO.

PHELPSSTON, 22nd June, 1892.

SIRS,—I enclose you the names of 24 customers using "Barm" Yeast. I sell nothing else now.

S. HANEY, Merchant.

DEAR SIRS:

I have just received another Box of Yeast from T. Kinnear & Co. In fact I have sold a number of boxes. Send me one of your Lithos to hang in my store. Also, have the 500 Grocers all reported yet? If not I will have my list of Customers on receipt of your reply, as I have sold the "Barm" Yeast to scores, and in most all cases it has proved satisfactory.

J. HILES,

Armow.

THIS WEEK'S MOTTO:

When you borrow money you borrow trouble.

Advertisers and Subscribers may have their correspondence addressed to the care of any of our offices and they are invited to use them at any time. At the Head office, Toronto, a place is set apart where they can see all the latest newspapers and the latest issues of trade papers from all parts of the world, where they can do their correspondence or obtain any information. Parcels may also be directed to the Head office.

The letter of R. Wetherill, printed on another page of this issue, is written in the true spirit of trade fraternity. It places at the service of his brethren in the trade the results of the practical working of an idea that is distinctly Mr. Wetherill's own. Readers will find the scheme a valuable and workable one. We have always held that the country merchants could be a powerful influence for educating farmers' wives into making good butter if they would but exercise their right as buyers to grade prices according to quality. This, we believed, would tend to make a standard to which all domestic makers would work up, and so the general quality of the butter made would be greatly improved. The indiscriminating method of buying, that which makes one price for all varieties, has always been the strongest factor in the causes that produced bad butter. This fact proves that the trade can determine the general character of the butter made in domestic dairies, for the trade does now to a large extent determine the character of the butter handled. If a maker can get as good a price for bad butter as she can for good, what motive has she for taking the trouble to make good butter? We are glad to be able to present for the consideration of our readers a plan so simple and so effective as we are sure Mr. Weatherill's is. It cannot but foster care and good methods in making butter, and is a means of getting a more homogeneous quality in each package than is possible in general store methods. It also introduces the one principle that was long needed in the domestic dairy, the principle of responsibility on the part of the maker. That is very important principle. It is the thing which has done more to bring up to their present excellence the majority of our manufactures. When canned goods and other products of factory work were obliged to bear a label naming the manufacturer, the standard rose fast. When the maker of an article cannot hide his identity among the multitude of unnamed fellow producers, he finds it to his interest to take some pains to produce quality. This has been brought home to the home-made butter industry in Mr. Weatherill's neighborhood, and it has done good. It would do good anywhere.

The issue of the action now pending between the Association of Salt Refiners and the Ontario Salt Co. at Kincardine will be watched with interest by traders generally. It is one of the few instances in which the combine is the plaintiff in the suit. Any litigation in which combines have so far figured has usually found them on the other side, with some individual trader or trading concern prosecuting them for being in existence. In this case the Association takes the legality of its existence for granted, and proceeds to obtain an injunction to prevent one of its members from doing business in violation of terms which the seceding concern undertook to be controlled by when it joined the Association. The defence is that the agreement is not valid, as the Association, being to limit production, sale, prices and competition, is illegal under the Combines Act. This defence is something of the boomerang description, as it must react upon the defendants if it should be successful, and make them partners with their former associates in any penalties for which the Association would be liable.

A museum would no doubt be a strong drawing card in a store, but it would be out of place. Both assertions apply equally to a menagerie or a circus. The incongruity of the combination is against it. But incongruity is an effect that some merchants seek entirely for its own sake. They aim to create impressions, not through the sense of harmony or beauty or other agreeable medium of perception, but through the sensation, that shocks produce. There does not seem to be anything very wide-awake in this theory of the best groundwork for attention. The majority of normally constituted people like to see the fitness of things respected. Contrasts are one thing and abnormal conditions another. Let the shopkeeper attend to his shop and the showman attend to his show. It is undignified to mix the two; it may elevate the showman, but it lowers the shopkeeper. The jibe of the soldier in Scott's Lady of the Lake,

Get thee an ape and trudge the land
The leader of a juggler band, might be flung at some merchants who have this morbid notion of advertising. The young fellow who palmed himself off in Toronto as a captive recently freed from a life of uninterrupted imprisonment from his birth, who represented that he had never seen any human beings but three men, proved himself to be a very notable liar and hoodwinked a very large section of the public. He was not long out of jail before he was in request for advertising purposes. His exceptional success as an impostor made a hero of him in the eyes of certain classes of persons, and to catch the trade of these his services as an advertising dummy were sought after. The young humbug seems to have had too much self-respect to lend or hire himself to any such business. Merchants made offers that would seem to be attractive to any one ready to pose as the centre-piece in a great sensation.

There is a pretty general report of shortage in the small fruit crops of European countries. The production of jellies and jams, an industry which in England has grown into wonderful proportions since the era of cheap sugar began in that country, is therefore expected to be very materially curtailed. If this is a fact it is one to which our packers can not afford to be indifferent. We want a market for our canned fruits, because our production far more than saturates the domestic demand. This year's crop of Canadian small fruits gives every promise of being a large one; sugar was never before so cheap as it is now; tinned plate is cheaper than it ever was; we pay no duty on it; our packers should consequently make something out of the English market, and should be able to sell goods in Germany. There is a field at all events, and it may prove to be worth exploring.

* * *

At the Farmers' Institute picnic, held at Grimsby last week, President Awrey said: In the past farmers had carried on their business without any proper system of book-keeping, but that slipshod way was being changed, owing to the people being educated by the Government to a proper appreciation of intelligent methods of farming. Canada was now selling eight or nine millions of dollars worth of cheese, because the make was the best in the world. On account of its superiority the Canadian article brought from a half to one cent more a pound than that paid for any other. There was a great market for butter in England, and Canada should wake up to the fact. The country did not export a million dollars' worth per year, but there was a limitless market for it in England.

The change in the duty on eggs is of moment to the country merchant, and is not entirely political in its bearings. Every spring there have been enough pickled eggs received at this and other points from St. Louis, Cincinnati and other collecting centres in the United States to cause a more than momentary disturbance in the market. This disturbance comes at a critical time, when a large quantity of our own eggs are held by country merchants, either in their own stores or in the hands of commission merchants to sell for them. They are bought at a time of year when fresh eggs are scarce and are obtainable only at high prices. Just then a dozen car loads of limed eggs may be launched upon the market by United States shippers, and their volume will influence price much more than the quality of our own fresh eggs will. That is, the country merchant will have to pay high prices to get fresh eggs, and will probably have to take low prices to get rid of them, if he happens to offer them when the pickled eggs from the south are flowing in. They, it must be said, do not come in so freely as they formerly did. The McKinley Tariff tends to check the exports of eggs from the United States about as much as it tends to check imports. United States holders of pickled eggs are not so anxious to hurry off their stock in the spring as they used to be, for there is not the same competition coming in from fresh eggs at that season as there used to be. When our eggs went duty-free to the United States, they, along with the fresh domestic production, made so sudden and considerable an accession to the supply that the market always went down several cents, and it was to escape or mitigate the effects of this drop that United States packers used to flood all the markets they could reach with their limed eggs. But now that our eggs do not go in, the supply of fresh eggs is not so suddenly and seriously felt. Eggs of any kind find sale, and the holders of limed can depend on the 5c. protection for their own markets to absorb the bulk of the stock they carry into the spring. But while we have fewer eggs from across the line, such as do come have a deranging effect just when they can do most mischief in cutting down the prices our merchants have to take. The 5 cent duty added, therefore, by the Canadian Government is calculated to make prices more stable in the season when the scarcity of fresh naturally makes them high. Before the McKinley Tariff, we brought in about 650,000 dozen every year.

Sweetness and loss is the article of faith that wholesale grocers practice, whether they profess it or not. They are giving to the general public, who do not particularly need it, a large part of the revenue that the most important staple they handle should yield. If all the money that wholesalers should have made this summer on the sale of sugar were lumped together and bestowed on the sufferers from the St. John's fire, it would assuage a great deal of misery. That way of parting with it would abstract just as much from the coffers of the wholesalers, but it would be incomparably more satisfactory. The capital so parted with would be doing something useful and creditable to the hearts of the donors, but now it is doing nothing creditable to either their hearts or their heads. The beneficiaries of the wholesalers are a free and independent people, supposed to be able to pay for what they consume, and to disdain any proffered assistance in buying the necessities of life. Then why do the wholesalers render that unasked assistance, which makes nobody appreciably richer and themselves materially poorer? They do it for the same reason that people rush pell mell to get out of a public hall because some one has shouted "Fire!" The rushers delay their own speed by their eagerness, and certainly hinder or injure others. The conduct is similar in both cases, and the cause is the same. Panic drives both. The panic of competition is making wholesale grocers forego profits this hot weather, and it is fomenting among refiners the same unsteadiness. In the United States just now things are different. A few weeks ago overtures were made by the wholesale grocers east of the Rocky Mountains for the forming of a national association, of which the immediate purpose and occasion was the making of an arrangement with the Trust to establish a system of rebates on all sugar sold at a standard price. The negotiations were unsuccessful at the time, but the Trust has since made a partial concession of the arrangement it was asked to concur in. It has extended the scope of the rebate system that it has sold under for some time in New York State and in New England. At the end of a fixed period, it restores a rebate of $\frac{1}{4}$ c. per lb. on all sugar bought at any of its refineries, provided that buyers take an oath that they have not sold below a standard price. This came into operation in all territory west of the Rockies on the first of the present month. This at any rate is an attempt to establish a profitable price. The means are open to criticism, as they are evidently resorted to to rivet a large combine, but they have an accidental effect that is in the interest of wholesalers.

The stone is evidently a variable standard of weight in this commercial city. In some skilled hands it goes for 12 to 13 lbs. That at all events is alleged by some members of the Retail Grocers' Association. And the traders who deal out that number of pounds to the stone do not live on exceedingly high mountains, or we might account for the loss in weight by the principle that the force of gravity decreases in direct proportion to the distance from the centre. It seems to be the case that some worthy men take advantage of the fact that the stone is not a unit of weight in Canada, that its constituent pounds are not defined by law as the ounces of a pound are, and that, therefore, irregularity in its weight is not punishable under the Weights and Measures Act. Though it is a fact that the stone is a borrowed unit, it is also true that some of our packages which are defined by law are a multiple of a certain number of stone. For example, the barrel of flour or oatmeal is 196 lbs., or 14 stone, and it is handy to sell oatmeal by the stone. The barrel of flour is $1\frac{3}{4}$ of the English long hundred-weights (112 lbs.) The stone is one-eighth of this long hundred-weight. One convenience of the old hundred-weight was its being resolvable into many factors, that number being divisible by 16, whereas the highest multiple of 2 that our Canadian hundred-weight or cental, will divide by is 4.

THE DUTY ON MOLASSES.

The changes made in the duty on molasses appear to be satisfactory to the wholesale grocery trade. They afford the specific that was needed to restore business in that commodity to its wonted health. How badly it was run down was shown by the demoralization reported in the Montreal market throughout last month, where traders were vying with each other to depress prices below a paying point. The price of low grade stuff was becoming the standard by which all prices were ruled, and to which all prices were approximating, and the low grade stuff abounded. There was not nearly so much of it at the time of the previous revision of the tariff, or it is probable the duty would have been adjusted to quality in the same way that it now is. The reason for the excessive supply of it that we now have is a consequence of the renewal of the duty on raw sugar by the United States. That change made sugar 2c. per lb. cheaper to United States consumers, but also deprived the producers of Louisiana of their chief protection. Hence owners of cane plantations had to make the most out of the bounty, and as the bounty was paid by the ton the crushers aimed naturally to put as much as they could of the saccharine product of the cane in the form of sugar. The residuum, which was so poor in saccharine quality that it was a misnomer to call it molasses, was nevertheless exported under that name, and too much of it reached this market as a very low-priced competitor of the genuine article, the proper uncrystallizable by-product of sugar-crushing. The very large crop in Louisiana made this a particularly vexatious factor in the reduction of prices. Good West India molasses or good New Orleans molasses could not be sold at fair prices. It was therefore right that something should be done to protect both traders and consumers. Some of the so-called molasses of this description sold as low in the wood as 10 and 11 cents in New Orleans. The barrel would cost nearly the half of what would be realized on itself and contents at that point. The Government was asked to put some check on the importation of this worthless stuff in the interests of consumers on the ground that it was unfit for food. Consequently the tariff has been so altered that the grades of molasses admissible at 1½c. per gallon must test at least 40 degrees by the polariscope. Grades lower than that are taxed one cent additional for every degree of inferiority. This makes the duty increase in direct proportion to the decrease in quality, and is an effectual means of checking the importation of inferior molasses.

THE BOUNTY ON BEET SUGAR.

The authority granted by Parliament to the Canadian Government last year to pay a bounty of about 2c. a pound on beet root sugar produced in this country expires at the end of next June. The interests dependent upon the production of that commodity were therefore naturally desirous of having the same protection extended, and petitioned for a renewal of the bounty over five or ten years. It was necessary to remove all uncertainty this session as to what the Government would do, as with the matter undecided the farmers would be unlikely to go into beet raising on the same scale as they did a year ago. The Government therefore brought in a measure providing for the extension of the bounty two years longer, from the first of July 1893, to the 30th June 1895. After some discussion, in which the resolution was opposed by both opponents and supporters of the Government, it was passed. It enacts that $1 per 100 lbs. shall be paid on all beet root sugar, and that 31½c. additional per 100 lbs. shall be paid for each degree over 70 degrees. This equals on an average 17-10c. per lb. In introducing the bill the Finance Minister said that the proposal to extend the bounty was with a view merely to continue an experiment, of which the purpose was to ascertain whether the maintenance of a beet sugar industry was feasible in this country or not. Last year was a bad one for the crop, though the previous year had been a good one, but it did not afford sufficient evidence to determine the Government to discontinue the bounty. He reported that $21,000 had been paid last year. Up to the present, $23,766 had been paid since the bounty was allowed, and 1,395,500 lbs. had been produced. The opponents of bounty had some strong arguments on their side. They pointed to the unsuccessful career of the Farnham and Berthier refineries, the only two for the refining of beet sugar that had been started in the country. In the former the Messrs. Gault were said to have dropped half a million dollars. It was represented that the inauguration of a bounty created the conditions which made its continuance obligatory, as farmers who went into the growth of beets, and refiners who went into the manufacture of sugar, upon the strength of the bounty, would not be easily reconciled to its withdrawal. It was also urged that if anybody should get a bounty it was the grower.

The small sum paid in bounties ($23,766) since this form of protection was conceded does look inauspicious for the beet sugar industry in this country. If the conditions were all favorable to the production of beets of full saccharine strength, it would seem that a larger quantity than 1,395,500 lbs. would be produced since the spring of 1891. In addition to the bounty on the sugar of nearly 2c. per lb. granted by the Dominion, it must be remembered that the Province of Quebec pays 50c. a ton for all the beets produced.

The bounty system has been very thoroughly tried on the Continent of Europe, and while it has stimulated the production of sugar immensely it has also been a heavy burden to the state. It is a matter of fact that the manufacturers of sugar in Germany look to the bounty for their profit. In the first place, it is a direct revenue to them; in the second, it, along with the tariff, is a protection to them against foreign manufacturers. They can, therefore, sell at very high prices to domestic consumers, and sell at extremely low prices to outsiders. The immense production forces them to sell low outside. British consumers get German sugar at prices far below what German consumers have to pay. Thus the bounty is levied on German consumers for the benefit of English and other foreign consumers. The only persons benefited are the manufacturers and foreigners. But the bounty system has got its roots struck into the economic soil and it is hard to expel.

TORONTO PEDLARS AT BAY.

At a meeting of the Toronto Pedlars' Association on Friday night it was resolved that recourse should be had to the law to decide whether the city has the power to impose and enforce the by-laws it has adopted to regulate the peddling trade. The occasion which called forth this determined resolution was the coming into force of a by-law to reserve the main streets from the ground covered by the licenses. This by-law came into effect upon the first of the present month. Under its chief provision, pedlars are debarred from carrying on their trade on Yonge street from Bay to the C. P. R. track; on Queen street, from Pape avenue, in St. Matthew's Ward, to Jameson avenue, in St. Alban's; on King street, from the Don to Niagara street; on College street, from Spadina avenue to Bathurst street; on Parliament street, from Queen street to Winchester street; on Dundas street, from Queen street to St. Clarendon avenue; on Wellington street, from Church street to York street. The second clause disqualifies the following from eligibility for license: Traders who carry on upon King street, Queen street, or Yonge street any business which pedlars are licensed to carry on. What the pedlars regard as another straw on their backs is a by-law proposed by Ald. Joliffe, of which the object is to prevent pedlars stopping at street corners. This measure is making its way through the committee stages and will probably be passed by the Council. The particular incident which roused the indignation of the pedlars was the interference by a policeman to prevent a pedlar delivering some goods on Parliament street, the said goods being alleged to have been purchased on Gerrard street by the householder to whom they were delivered.

The solicitor of the Pedlars' Association, E. A. DuVernet, claims that both the by-law fixing the license fees and the by-law restricting the peddling trade to certain streets are beyond the power of a City Council to enact, and undertakes to quash them.

TORONTO RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

The Retail Grocers' Association of Toronto held its July meeting on Tuesday evening in Richmond Hall. President Booth was in the chair. The following other members were present: Messrs. Mills, Williamson, Clark, White, Sykes, Roberts, Westren, Saunders, Eddy, Bond, Burns, T. Clark, and Secretary Corrie.

When the minutes of last meeting were read, Mr. Sykes moved that the clause reporting the last meeting to have decided against having any picnic be amended.

Mr. Williamson held that the minutes were correct.

In amendment to Mr. Sykes' motion, Mr. Clark, seconded by Mr. Westren, moved that the clause referred to be altered to read "The proposal to hold a joint excursion with the Travellers be struck out." Carried.

NEW MEMBERS.

The following candidates were proposed for membership and admitted:

Wm. Burgess, Terauley street; A. Stewart, Sumach street; A. D. Campbell, Carlton street; C. V. Woods, Gerrard street east; J. J. Davis, Davisville; W. C. Le-fraugh, Broadview avenue; C. S. Booth, Parkdale; Oliver Taylor, Gerrard street east; J. E. Forman, Monro street; J. L. Mowat, Dovercourt; John Anderson, Queen street west; A. W. Finkle, Queen street west; Geo. Cobby, Norway; E. M. Peacock, Yonge street.

THE PEDLARS' BY-LAW.

Mr. Mills reported that the special committee he was chairman of did not wait on the License Inspector. He had been informed that the pedlars were making a test case of the by-law restricting the jurisdiction of the licenses to particular streets.

Mr. Williamson said he had been called on by Ald. Joliffe, who advised that the Association take measures to represent its views before the Markets and License Committee or before the Council, as the pedlars would be on hand in full force to oppose the passing of the by-law against standing on the street corners.

Mr. White moved that the committee receive the thanks of the Association and be discharged.

ACCOUNTS.

A rent account of $8.73 was referred to chairman of Executive and ordered to be paid if found correct.

An account of R. Mills for $5.55 for stamps and papers for calling meetings was disposed of in the same way.

T. Hill & Sons presented an account of $5.50 for printing, which was also passed over to the chairman of the Executive.

An account of $28 from the secretary, for collection of dues from new members and commission on membership was similarly dealt with.

THE RETAIL PRICE OF SOAP.

The Secretary said he had learned that Surprise soap was being sold at 5c. a bar by a certain trader.

Mr. Bond said he was prepared to give the name of a dealer who was selling this soap at 5c., as he had sent a person out to buy a bar of Surprise soap, and that 5c. had bought a particular bar in that case.

Mr. Williamson knew a case where Surprise soap had been ticketed up "5 for 25c." He had called on the Company's agents, one of whom at once visited the trader complained of and informed him that this would not be allowed. Mr. Williamson had resolved that he would buy no more Surprise soap unless this were stopped, and could say that the utmost promptness was shown by the agents in acting upon his information. He thought the agents should be notified before any names were given in the meeting. The soap paid a good profit. He was aware, through information obtained from the agents, that the T. Eaton Co. had sought to buy soap from them but had been unable to get it, and that the said firm next wrote to headquarters and elicited thence a letter to the agents inquiring why they did not sell to the T. Eaton Co. Upon being informed that the T. Eaton Co. was a dry goods house, the manufacturers wired the agents not to sell to them. Consequently Mr. Williamson believed the Surprise Soap people sought to deal fairly by the trade.

Mr. Sykes said that bought in 25 box lots, it could be retailed with profit at 5c., and that the manufacturers did not object to the soap being retailed at 6c., but that they wished to keep this a profitable line to the trade.

Mr. Mills considered that it would be injudicious to mention the names before the whole meeting and in the presence of the press.

Mr. White could not see why the names connected with particular instances of objectionable price-cutting should be withheld from the Association, which was in a position to deal with the matter without loss of time, since the evidence was here to make a case out.

Mr. Mills, seconded by Mr. Williamson, moved that the names connected with charges of cutting the price of Surprise Soap be given to the Executive Committee to be dealt with.

In amendment, Mr. White, seconded by Mr. Bond, moved that the secretary write to the company informing them that their soap had been sold at 5c. by certain persons, whose names are known to the secretary and the chairman of the Executive.

Mr. Mills withdrew his motion, and Mr. White's was carried.

Mr. Williamson asked if Mr. Sykes was correct in stating that 6c. was a permitted price for Surprise soap, as he understood the price was virtually limited to 7c. and four for a quarter.

A great deal of discussion arose upon this point. Several members said they sold at 6c. and believed they did so with the approval of the manufacturers, as that price yielded them a liberal profit. Mr. Westren believed that two-thirds of the Association sold at 6c. This moved Mr. Williamson to say that he was astonished to hear such a statement. The Association should at least support manufacturers who aim to make their products profitable to the trade.

Mr. Bond said that he had been informed by the agents that the Company would not supply stock to traders who sold their soap below 7c.

Mr. White, seconded by Mr. Mills, moved that the Secretary inquire of the manufacturers what the general usage is as to the retail price.—Carried.

Mr. Westren wanted to know if Mr. Richards of Woodstock had been notified that his prices were being cut. It was explained, however, that in the case of this soap the price was rather an open matter, and not subject to regulation by the manufacturer.

THE STONE WEIGHT.

Mr. Roberts claimed that some traders were selling 13 lbs. of oatmeal for a stone. Some were selling even lighter weight.

Mr. Clark said this was owing to traders getting short weight, as 185 lbs. to the barrel.

Mr. Westren believed that nine out of ten grocers sold a 24½ lbs. bag of flour for 25 lbs.

Mr. Clark said that bad weight was a difficult thing to deal with, as the culprit could always fall back upon the plea that a mistake had been made, and would always make amends when caught.

SMALL EGGS.

Mr. Clark said that this year there were a great many small eggs, owing to the culling of large ones to sell by weight in the English market.

He moved that the Secretary write to the proper authorities asking that eggs be sold by weight. Mr. Williamson seconded this.

Objections to this mode of selling were made on different grounds, but chiefly for the reason that the difficulty of weighing and getting at tares would be hard to overcome. The difficulty at getting at exact weight in retailing was also adverted to. The motion was carried, however.

PEDLARS' LAWS.

Mr. White said that the question between the pedlars and the council did not affect the grocers. It was not in the interests of the grocers that the by-law closing certain streets to the pedlars was passed. Mr. Mills agreed with him.

NEXT MEETING.

Mr. Clark moved that when the meeting adjourn, it stand adjourned till the next Monday after the Fair. Mr. White seconded this motion. Carried.

NO EXCURSION.

Mr. Sykes moved that the Association have an excursion to the Falls.

He said that the Empress of India would carry them all at 80c. a head and allow the Association everything above that.

The question called forth a little discussion, which soon flickered out without result.

Mr. Roberts moved that the stores of Association members closed on the 27th inst., and that the proprietors turn out to attend the Travellers' picnic. This was not seconded, and the meeting adjourned.

THE RIGHT WAY TO BUY BUTTER.

EDITOR CANADIAN GROCER.

SIR,—As the plan which I have adopted in taking butter from farmers has been very successful, several merchants have asked me to explain it to them, which I gladly do for two reasons, namely: To try and raise the standard of butter in sections where there are no creameries, and to prevent the country merchants from losing every summer what is made the balance of the year.

I distribute among my customers one-gallon stone crocks, which cost 10c. each and hold from 8 to 9 lbs. of butter. This I consider the best size, as one churning will fill it, therefore there will be only one quality in each. Then it is clean, and will not taint the butter, is light and easy to handle, and in retailing a family would buy it where they would not think of taking a larger one. It also saves to a considerable extent the loss occasioned by weighing out in small quantities.

When these crocks are brought in filled I put a label on them and fill in the name of the maker, not forgetting to let the maker know that her name is on the butter. If she allows the name to be put on she gets the highest price, if not, a reduction of 2 or 3c. is made. In this way every woman judges her own butter. For example: One week last fall the weather was very hot, and it was hard to make good butter. One of my best customers, on coming in the following week, said: "I did not bring my butter last week; it was not as nice as I would like to have my name on. Therefore, I took it over to—and got sugar for it."

I know several farmers' wives, who, previous to adopting this plan, made very ordinary butter, but now they do their best to make a good article, as their reputation is at stake. If an inferior article is made it goes to my neighbor. I don't want it.

To force them to take the crocks I make a difference in price. If in tubs, pails, rolls, or in any shape where I would have to re-pack, they get 2c. less per lb.

Last August, to commence with, I bought 100 crocks, and in a short time 200 more. I have now 800 one-gallon crocks in circulation. Another advantage is, that it does away with the old plan of having butter brought to the store in tubs, pails, tins, or rolls, which was all thrown in a heap, regardless of color or quality, and packed when the clerk had time.

I can get 2c. per lb. more for this butter, as buyers can depend on getting a good article. Parties wishing further information or able to suggest an improvement I should be pleased to hear from.

CANADIAN TRADE WITH EUROPE.

CHRISTIANIA, June 25th, '92.

EDITOR CANADIAN GROCER.

SIR,—The cables from the United States have brought us the information that the Democratic convention in Chicago have chosen as their candidate for the Presidency Grover Cleveland, and their platform will be similar to the one in '88, including the tariff reduction; whereas the Republican convention has nominated Harrison, and endorsed the McKinley Bill. Since the passage of that bill European merchants have had their eyes open for new countries, and I think the one that has specially got their attention has been young and growing Canada. Also the inconveniences and obstacles that European emigrants have encountered in landing in the United States have been reported here and caused many to prefer to emigrate to Canada instead of the United States. Before, people here understood America to mean United States only, but that is rapidly disappearing. Canada will, in my opinion, in time be the greatest competitor the United States ever had in the European markets, and if the Republican party succeed at the election in November and The McKinley Bill be allowed to live, it will serve to increase the Canadian and European trade very much. Canada has exported more produce the last year than ever before, and firms here that have brought Canadian goods have been well satisfied. We consider, for instance, Johnston's Fluid Beef equal to any and superior to most of the Chicago brands of fluid beef. Hiram Walker & Son's whisky is, as far as quality is concerned, equal to any in the world. We have also received samples of flour from W. W. Ogilvie of Montreal, and he is fully able to compete with the Minneapolis mills. Some houses here have commenced to export to Canada, and among them we will mention Mustard & Son, manufacturers of fish hooks; H. Poulsen & Co.; Punsch, Ringness & Co., beer, etc. There is another article we want to mention, as it is something new. One of the most renowned professors at The Royal University in Christiania, Professor Waage, has discovered a way of making flour of fish, and in such a manner that the nourishing and invigorating substances contained in the fish are fully developed, and being manufactured under the supervision of the Professor himself, is a guarantee, that it contains nothing but pure and fresh fish dried and powdered by his process. One part of this fish flour is equal to twenty parts of fresh fish. We have mailed you a sample, and if you have tried it, we would like to have your valuable opinion about it. We are trying to make arrangements with a broker in Toronto, (A. Waddell & Co.) so it will probably soon be offered for sale there.

Yours respectfully,

C. E. SONTUM,

(of C. E. Sontum & Co., Christiania, Norway.)

THE TARIFF CHANGES.

The following is the text of the amendments made in the Tariff Act last week:

(A.) Resolved, that it is expedient to amend the Act, chapter 33, Revised Statutes, entitled, "An Act respecting the duties of Customs," by repealing item numbered 610 in schedule C to the said Act; and to amend the Act 53 Victoria, chapter 30, entitled "An Act to amend the Act respecting the duties of Customs," by repealing the items numbered 95 and 122 under section 10 of the said Act; and to amend the Act 54, 55 Victoria, chapter 45, entitled "An Act to amend the Acts respecting the duties of Customs," by repealing the item numbered 1, under section 1 of the said Act, and to provide otherwise by enacting that the following rates of duty be substituted in lieu thereof:

(B.) Eggs, 5 cents per dozen.

2. All molasses n. o. p., all syrups n. o. p., all tank bottoms, all tank washings, all cane juice, all concentrated cane juice, all beet root juice and all concentrated beet root juice, when imported direct without transshipment from the country of growth and production; (a) testing by polariscope forty degrees or over and not over fifty-six degrees, a specific duty of one and one-half cents per gallon (1½c. per gallon); (b) when testing less than forty degrees, a specific duty of one and one-half cents per gallon, and in addition thereto one cent per gallon for each degree or fraction of a degree less than forty degrees (1½c. per gallon and 1c. per degree additional); (c) and in addition to the foregoing rates a further specific duty in all cases of 2½ cents per gallon when not so imported direct without transshipment (2½ cents per gallon additional); the packages (when of wood) in which imported to be in all cases exempt from duty.

3. Paraffine wax, stearic acid, and stearine of all kinds, n. e. s., three cents per pound (3 cents per lb.)

4. Glove leathers when imported by glove manufacturers for use in their factories for the manufacture of gloves, viz., kid, lamb, buck, deer, antelope, and water hog; tanned or dressed, colored or uncolored, 10 per cent. (10 p. c.)

(C.) Resolved, that it is expedient to provide that the duties of Customs, if any, imposed by the said Acts on the articles named

The only PURE Cream Tartar Baking Powder in this Market is

The duties of Customs, if any, imposed by the said Acts on the articles mentioned as follows, are hereby repealed, and the said articles may be imported into Canada or taken out of warehouse for consumption free of duty, that is to say: All cane sugar not above No. 14 Dutch standard in color, all beet root sugar not above No. 14 Dutch standard in color, all sugar sweepings, all sugar drainings or pumpings drained in transit, all melado, all concentrated melado, all molasses, n. o. p., all cane juice n. o. p., all concentrated cane juice, n. o. p., all beet root juice n. o. p., all concentrated beet root juice n. o. p., all tank bottoms n. o. p., and all concrete n. o. p.

The English Inspector of Weights and Measures is making a further example of grocers who weigh the enclosing paper with the goods they sell. The Wolverhampton case has not been pronounced upon yet by the court that it was appealed to. The weights and measures officials appear to have very exact ideas over there.

THE TENDENCY TOWARDS CASH.

Horace Greeley was considered the best analytical editor of his time, and there certainly never has been a newspaper man who had a better and more thorough knowledge of business conditions. It was Horace Greeley who said that the poor man who has encountered some sudden and severe calamity, such as the burning of his house or the destruction of his crops by hurricane or flood, may very properly be offered credit for a season at cash prices; so may the poor widow, whose children, this year at school, will be earning wages and able to help her next season. But in all ordinary cases the merchant, if only from a patriotic regard for the general well being, should inflexibly refuse to sell on credit, since such selling is, and must ever be to the uncircumspect majority, a temptation and facility for general improvidence and overtrading.

It has been questioned that the tendency of the times is toward cash transactions. That the growth of building associations, and the rapid increase of time payment systems, is evidence that the people are more attached now to the credit business than they ever were before, nevertheless, the drift of feeling throughout the country is in favor of a cash business, and the best proof of it is the fact that collections are urged, and made more imperative than was ever before known. The time was when a merchant sold his goods with the understanding that the purchaser was to pay at the end of ninety days. Now the time is more limited, and the buyer is expected to meet his obligations at the period agreed upon. The mere fact that time payment systems thrive in the city has nothing to do with the situation as regards the great majority of merchants who do business in the towns and villages.—St. Louis Grocer.

TINNED SALMON EXONERATED.

The London Grocer says: "With reference to a report to the effect that in consequence of the deaths alleged to have been caused by the eating of canned salmon a considerable diminution has taken place in the consumption of that fish in this country, an enquiry among the chief dealers and distributors of canned goods in Liverpool dissipates the rumor entirely. It appears that during the two and a half years ending April last, the monthly consumption of salmon has been close upon 52,000 cases, and that for some months during the latter portion of that period the consumption has gone up to 52,600 cases. There have lately, as is well known, been several cases of poisoning erroneously attributed to tinned salmon, and these doubtless have some effect on the public mind, especially as the general newspaper press is so eager for sensations that it treats the salmon trade unfairly in admitting untruthful alarmist paragraphs, and inserting injurious headings without sufficient foundation. No trade could go on for years at the rate of consumption of 32,000,000 lbs. per annum in which poisonings, as alleged occurred."

THE CLERK SUPPLY.

To be an efficient clerk of a retail grocery store does not require any great amount of skill, though it is a position that every man is not competent to fill. To be a good clerk one must be something more than an automatic machine, fit only to hand down and tie up packages and to lift boxes, roll barrels, etc. These are part of the duties of a grocer's clerk, but if he would amount to anything and hope to get ahead, he must be very much more than a lifter of boxes and roller of barrels. The grocery store is the Mecca of all classes of people. Every phase of human nature is here to be found, and it is only those who make it their business to study this queer lot of humanity who will make a success in the grocery business. While it is most necessary to treat all customers with unvarying courtesy and politeness, all people are not alike, and some must be "handled" differently. Therefore it behooves the clerk to study to please, for it is only by so doing that he will make friends and so add profit to his employer's bank account and render his own services invaluable. The supply of retail grocery clerks is limited. The life is such a hard one, and has so many discouraging features, that it has a tendency to drive away a great many after they have had a taste of the business. We hope to see all this changed, when the lot of the grocer's clerk will be improved far beyond what it now is. Not until then will the supply of efficient clerks be equal to the demand.—Grocers' Monthly Review.

To the Helvetia Milk Condensing Co. of Highland, Ill., belongs the credit of having first perfected a process for the preparation of pure, unsweetened, concentrated milk, which is so favorably known as their Highland brand "Evaporated Cream." The name of "Evaporated Cream" was adopted in order to distinguish the article from the condensed milks which are preserved with sugar, and further, because the name is quite appropriate, as it is suggestive of the appearance and consistency of the preparation. Established since 1885, the Company has reached such scientific precision in the preparation of the article, that their entire productions are absolutely uniform and excelling in rich consistence yet perfect fluidity. The texture of the product is smooth and glossy, and no fatty separation or gritty coagulations are perceptible therein, such as will occur in imitations. In fact, Highland Evaporated Cream is simply perfect in every respect and well deserves its flattering reputation. adv.

The new enterprise recently patented by T. S. Whitman, of drying fish by steam, is proving very successful and is being patronized extensively. The other day he received from New York 980 drums of fish to be put through his dryer at Annapolis, N. S.

Our first direct cargo of fruit from Jamaica, with which island we have been making efforts to establish satisfactory trade connections, reached Montreal last week on the S.S. "America". Cocoanuts and bananas formed the bulk of the vessel's load, and sugar the rest. The return voyage of the America carries back lumber, fish, flour, and butter to the island.

The other day a deputation of members, consisting of Messrs. Sproule, Taylor, Ryder, Reid, Smith, (Ontario), Hughes, J. E. Wood and Fairbairn waited upon the Minister of Agriculture and Prof. Robertson, dairy commissioner, and it was arranged that Prof. Robertson and Mr. Miall, commissioner of Inland Revenue, shall visit Brockville to meet the cheese men in order to arrive at a satisfactory method of inspection.

Later advices from Cuba according to the Commercial Bulletin of New York, estimate the losses on sugar by the late inundation at Matanzas at 10 per cent of the stock, valued at $600,000. The question as to where the loss will fall is under discussion, as part of the sugar, though sold, had not been weighed, and accordingly the buyer had neither taken possession nor settled account for the produce when the catastrophe occurred.

All the salt companies round Goderich district entered into a combine by which only a limited quantity of salt was to be produced and sold at a uniform price. The Ontario Salt Company became tired of the combine and withdrew. The different committees in connection with the London Retail Grocers' second annual picnic, to be held in Queen's Park on the 27th, are getting down to work. The programme committee have met and arranged a first-class programme of sports, which will be ready for distribution in a few days. Secretary E. In our Business Changes of the 17th ult. J. G. Wegenast & Co., Plattsville, were represented to be seeking a compromise with their creditors. We are pleased to be able to correct this statement by informing our readers that this is not the case, but is the form in which an erroneous report reached us. These are the facts: J. G. Wegenast & Co. sold out to R. G. Lambert of Harrison, and as they were retiring from business they wished to liquidate now all their liabilities, some of which would not be due until next autumn. They accordingly asked a cash discount of their creditors and of course got it. Instead of being forced to a compromise J. G. Wegenast & Co. have a surplus of $4,500.

The excursion party of the Dominion Travellers' Association met with a royal reception in Portland. On their arrival they were met by a deputation of the Maine Travellers' Association and marched in procession headed by Chandler's band, to the City hall, where an address of welcome was read and a number of congratulatory speeches were made. In the evening an At Home was held at the handsome club rooms of Maine association. On Saturday an excursion to Little Chebeague Island and a clam bake took place at which a number of loyal and patriotic speeches were made. The party then divided; part going to Boston and others to Cushing's Island, Old Orchard Beach, etc. On Monday Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Dow held an At Home at their cottage on Peek's Island which wound up the festivities, and the excursionists left for home thoroughly pleased with their trip.

"Don't judge a book by its cover," is an old adage, yet many a grocery store can be judged by its general outlook. The display of goods, the appearance of the proprietor and his clerks and the manner in which patrons are treated, speak for or against such an establishment. A store which has an accumulation of shop-worn goods, where clerks are untidy, where goods are not shown up to their best advantage, where cross and ill-mannered boys wait upon customers; such a place may eke out a living, and do damage to better regulated stores in the neighborhood, but can not claim success.—Retail Grocers' Advocate.

It is a well recognized fact that no business establishment is complete without some cash carrier system. Attention is called to the Whiting Cash and Parcel Carrier. It seems in it impossible for anything to get out of order, as there are no cords or springs. OUR NEW Fruit and Preserve Jar

(PATENTED JULY, 1891.)

These cuts represent our new Fruit and Preserve Jars which we are now introducing to the Canadian Trade, and in doing so, desire to draw your attention to the advantages they possess over those made of glass and other material.

The Jars are manufactured from a mixture of English and Pennsylvania clays, making a stronger and better article than can be produced from any other combination.

We use only a pure Bristol Stoneware Glaze, which is free from Lead or other Metallic substances readily attacked by all acids. We guarantee the body to be thoroughly vitrified and absolutely acid proof.

These Jars will be found superior to all other articles in use for the preservation of Fruits, etc. Being non-transparent, the action of light cannot fade the color or ferment fruits kept in them, as is the case where glass is used, and being a non-conductor of heat, preserves are kept at a more uniform temperature than in either glass or tin, and will be free from the unpleasant metallic taste so frequently noticed where tin is used.

They are made in various sizes and are for sale by all Crockery and Grocery Dealers in Canada.

DRY GOODS.

The dry goods houses have been busy during the past week, partly owing to goods arriving and partly in filling very fair orders. Quite a number of buyers have visited the city during the week, and Victoria lawns, muslins, silk dress laces, ornamental and fancy ladies' handkerchiefs, and buttons have had a strong demand. Staples also have had considerable attention. The notes received from travellers during the past week indicate that the feeling of the retail trade is very good. Orders for fall and winter goods are very fair, but it cannot be expected that they are enormous, as it is harder to get orders in the summer for fall goods than in the winter for spring goods. "Spring" has a more encouraging sound than "fall" or "winter." Nevertheless the orders compare favorably with those of last year.

Letter orders have been slightly smaller in volume than in previous weeks, but are still brisk. The volume will undoubtedly remain small for several weeks, that is until the first heated season is gone.

Decoration flags have been in strong demand for the past two weeks, due no doubt to Dominion day celebrations and Orange decorations.

Collections for the past week have been better than for this period last year, and this gives the trade a very firm and confident feeling.

NOTES.

W. R. Brock & Co. have a job line of lenos in all colors, which are having a strong demand, to protect goods from the black flies. Their honey-comb shawl, which is sold to retail at a dollar, is a genuine bargain. They are showing a nice line of silk umbrellas. One kind of umbrella has quite a novelty handle: the bone handle is fashioned at one end into a dog's head and at the other end into a street car whistle; by a simple twist of the wrist the handle is disengaged and shows a handy corkscrew. Among other lines just received are: English figured Derbys and four-in-hands, Windsor ties, silk handkerchiefs, and dress buttons in pearl and metal effects.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence report a continued strong demand for tweed dress goods for fall wear. The orders received are large, and many of the retailers are desiring immediate delivery. They have just to hand a nice variety of German boating shawls, which are worthy of attention. Their travellers are all out, and orders are coming in very well and are quite encouraging.

Gordon, MacKay & Co. are showing a very fine range of blankets which are being sold at close prices. These are, undoubtedly, exceptionally fine goods. The fault of a too heavy nap is avoided in their manufacture. They are showing greys in unions and wools, and whites in unions, wools, supers, and extra-supers. This house is also showing a large range of comforters in choice patterns and in all sizes; a nice line of initial lawn handkerchiefs; some extra-value men's black cashmere half hose; a new shipment of colored watered ribbons in all shades; several shipments of Scotch and English tweeds in blue mixes, browns and drabs.

Wyld, Grasset & Darling are showing a large range of Canadian and imported underwear in fall and winter weights. The natural color so popular in the past two seasons is increasing in favor. They are opening some large shipments of neckwear. In derbys, knots and four-in-hands, the leading things are sprig and floral designs on plain grounds; the only stripes being the vertical. English collars are shown in various heights and suitable shapes. The houses is making a specialty of medium priced umbrellas with novelty handles; its stock of all kinds of umbrellas is quite extensive. They are having a continued strong demand for cheap cotton vests, and ladies' and children's black cotton hose.

John Macdonald & Co. have a very large stock of well-assorted dress goods for fall wear in all lines. They are offering special drives in linen glass cloths, crash towellings, and some lines of tablings. Another drive is offered in a special line of fancy worsted trouserings. They have just opened up some new and nobby lines in black worsteds and black Italians. They are showing bargains in braces, having bought the over-make of an American manufacturer at much below regular prices, and consequently are showing special value in farmers' braces overshot silk, and fancy Jackardt. They have received several large shipments of curtains, and are showing some excellent patterns in their lines of lace curtains.

NEWS FOR TOMATO GROWERS.

There is no reason why an exceptionally large quantity of tomatoes, canned or otherwise, should not be exported from this country to Great Britain during the coming season. For some years many hundreds of tons have been annually exported from the Canary Islands to Great Britain, but we now learn that for several months the tomato plants in the islands have been attacked with disease, the result being that the produce has proved in many instances quite unfit for transportation. "Every endeavor," we are told, "has been made to localize the mischief, but without success," and it is reported that crops in all parts of the islands are seriously affected and that growers view the prospect of the approaching season with considerable apprehension.

Roche foucauld says that there is something in the misfortunes of our best friends which gives us pleasure, and, though we cannot say that we are pleased at the ill luck which has befallen the Canary Islands, we candidly admit that we are pleased whenever anything occurs whereby we Americans may be benefited. This may not be philanthropy, but, after all, it is human nature,—National Provisioner.

Increasing sales testify to the merits of our goods.

Retailers who buy them once, ask for them again. No one can afford to overlook these facts.

GROCERIES.

Trade is now quite one-sided, sugar being the main thing that there is any sale for. The demand for teas and Valencia raisins has fallen off very materially. It is of about the same strength in canned goods as it was a week ago. Letter orders are more numerous than they were. This is usually the case at this time of year, when needs, as for sugar, are likely to develop suddenly, and orders cannot be held until travellers come round. The feature of the week is greater intensity of competition in the sugar trade, some leading houses having brought down their quotations for first-class grades of granulated to the prices that off grades were selling at. All prices continue low, and it is probable that few houses are making more than expenses. The change on the duty on molasses was satisfactory to the importing trade, and, in fact, to all merchants who handle that commodity, as it will bar out low, worthless grades that depressed the prices of good quality stock. Payments are fairly good.

COFFEE.

The quantity of stock handled these days is on the small side. The call for common grades is not up to that which was operative a short time ago, medium quality being the most in favor this week. Fine coffees are scarce and firm. The prices are 17½ to 21c. for Rios, 32c. upwards for fine Javas, and 30c. upwards for Mochas.

The director of the botanical gardens of Jamaica makes the following report on the cultivation of coffee on that island: "Coffee—The area under cultivation is increasing, being higher than in any year since 1882. The high price given for coffee has induced planters in other West Indian islands to recommence the cultivation, and our Blue Mountain coffee has obtained such a name that applications for seed have been received not only from the West Indies, but from Fiji, West and South Africa and the East Indies."

The Rio News coffee report says: "Receipts continue about on the same average, and shipments have been satisfactory. Stock shows a smart reduction during the week, and the delay in receiving new coffees must be ascribed to unfavorable weather, for prices current here should certainly be satisfactory to the planters and at this time last year our supply was considerably larger than at present. The latest published advices from abroad lead to a belief that the position is considered sound, and here some resumption of business is confidently expected."

DRIED FRUITS.

A lull in the trade in Valencia raisins is very generally experienced, but does not affect the value of that fruit on account of holders realizing that the demand has an active spell before it during the remainder of the summer. It is a very poor grade of fruit that is now saleable at 3¼c., and there is little of it in stock. The descriptions that are going or that seem to be wanted are quoted from 4½ to 5c. There are no selected of any consequence. Layers are worth 6½ to 6¾c. There is no diminution of strength in New York, where the stock appears to be not more than equal to the calls that will be made upon it in the interval between now and crop renewal. Currants run from 4½c. upwards, but the lowest price marks a very poor quality of stock. Prunes are getting near the line of depletion. D's are quoted at 5¾c. in cases, and D's are the chief grade in stock. The scarcity of lemon peel continues to be a drawback to business, though less than it was, as the demand is now much lower than it was. The price is 16 to 17c. For nuts there is no demand of any moment and prices are steady at former quotations.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

Corn is now in the forefront of the demand, and is now receiving attention not only from retailers but also from jobbers both in the east and west. Ordinarily the demand is not simultaneously from both quarters, so that the present is rather a lively period in the market for canned corn. Tomatoes and peas are selling fairly well. The prices of the three staple vegetables are $1 to $1.05, the latter for goods of first-class quality. As to the condition of the supply in any line there is no likelihood of a shortage. Stocks in the hands of the retail trade are not large at any one time and the necessity of keeping assortments up are made somewhat more urgent by the demand that summer brings for portable foods, such as camping supplies call for. Some jobbers are quoting vegetables to arrive, but prices are yet indefinite. The stock of salmon is about depleted. Tails are nearly done, and what are left quote at $1.60. Flats quote as high as $1.80, and are in rather better request. The lowest price quoted from the coast is $4.75, and that is made upon a brand that little is known about. The late advance in spot salmon has undoubtedly checked business. Retailers are beginning to feel that they do not need to pay such high prices for old salmon when they are within a short time of

HAMILTON, - ONT.To Canning Men.-OUR CYCLONE PULP MACHINE

For making tomato pulp and preparing pumpkin and squash for canning is very well known to all the canners in the United States, and a few of them are in use in Canada. The high tariff has prevented their being used extensively heretofore.

We are now manufacturing these machines at Oakville, Ont., to enable our Canadian friends to obtain them without paying a heavy duty; but we shall make only a few of them unless ordered. Those who contemplate purchasing, should send their orders promptly to insure the saving of duty, as late orders will have to be filled from stock in the United States which will be subject to a 30 per cent duty.

MARKETS—Continued.

new. The price that has been asked here for new salmon the past few days is equal to $1.37 per dozen delivered. It is reported that some of the canneries have already sold all their pack. The last reports quote Horse shoe salmon at the coast at $4.90. The lobster market is firm outside. Leading packers are said to have sold all their output.

MONTREAL.

A good jobbing trade is doing in canned goods. Salmon is becoming rather scarce and is being held at $1.40. The stock will be well cleaned up before the new pack arrives. Tomatoes are quiet and dull. Buyers reluctant about stocking up in the face of the new season. Other lines are moving out fairly well in a jobbing way, values being unchanged.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

In canned vegetables, peas, corn, and pumpkins are in good demand. While in fruit, apples are the only kind that sells readily, and prices have advanced some $2.25 per doz is the present quotation. The demand for lobsters has only started, and as the pack was not nearly as large as was expected, the prices will likely be firmer. $1.75 per doz. is the present jobbing price. Salmon are selling readily. The new pack has not yet reached this market, but understand prices will be higher than last season. Haddies sell slow here as the fresh smoked can be bought every day.

RICE AND SPICES.

There is a firmer tone to the price of common rice, the quotation 3½c. being stronger than it was, and 4c. being the price of moderate sized quantities. The finer classes of rice are selling quite freely.

Sago is pretty well cleared up. Tapioca is firm at 4½ to 5½c. Spices generally are easy, and occasion little interest.

SUGAR.

There is no amendment in the conditions portrayed last week. The most prominent feature then observable was the cutting of prices, and that is now more pronounced than ever. The quotations made for off grades are having a bad influence on the prices of the finest sugars, which jobbers here and there are depressing a little further every week in order to get on a basis to cope with the poor sugars. At present one firm is quoting the very best class of granulated at 4¼c. in carloads, and 4.35c. in smaller quantities. For yellows the same firm are quoting 3¼c. in cars and 3.35c. in smaller lots. The refinery that produced the very low grade granulated sugar is reported to have ceased putting that quality on the market. The retail trade from some quarters furnish aggravating orders occasionally. After offering a price about equal to cost, or after having been made an equally low offer, they frequently stipulate in their letters that the difference in the freight between Toronto and the point to which the sugar is to be shipped shall be allowed. They appear not to believe that it is possible for wholesalers to be so liberal as to quote a price off which all profit has been thrown. Some houses are meeting the latest cut, others are not and quote 4¾ to 4½c. for granulated. The call for sugar is not at its height, as raspberries are not yet being delivered on a scale of any magnitude. In about another week there will be a more active demand for sugar. A very fine grade of Louisiana raw is selling at 4.30c.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The trade in syrup continues to be of small proportions. The call for medium grades is light, but that is about all the demand there is. The change in the duty on molasses and syrups that yield less than 40 degrees of saccharine strength is expected to debar some inferior stuff that has been imported the last year as syrups.

Molasses has little sale. Fine New Orleans or West India stock is always wanted in a small way and goes out at about the usual rate. Cheap stock is also in some slight request. The raising of the duty on the cheap, worthless grades is very satisfactory to the trade. The Island crops of molasses are over. The market there is 12c., which equals about 29c. in Montreal.

TEAS.

Importers find the distribution of new Japan teas easy work so far, as there is a strong demand from all points for stock at from 18 to 23c. A good deal of shipping has been done this week, some importers having already sold completely out. Advices from Montreal report a capacious demand here for high grade Japans. Good mediums are picked up cheaply on spot. This activity of the jobbing demand is due to the bare market of old crop medium and choice Japans upon which the new stock comes. The interest of buyers is sharpened by the report of shortage in the crop, the pickings up to date of last advices being reported 4,000,000 lbs. less than they were up to the same dates last year. An unusual feature of the market so early in its course is inquiry from United States points for good Japans. This and other evidences adduced show that the market is in excellent condition. The Empress of China has further supplies, which are now due at Vancouver. Indian and Ceylon teas are firm in the position that the advance last noted placed them in. Congous are steady, and low grade Young Hysons, though no cheaper, are less active. Retailers are not doing much buying at the moment.

Gow, Wilson & Stanton, of London England, in their fortnightly circular say; "During the last few weeks the tea market generally has been in a quiescent condition. With the General Election so close upon us, and at a time like the end of the half year, it is natural that buyers should be inclined to minimise their stock of tea. It is therefore not surprising that bidding during the last week or two should have been slack, and that the disposition generally manifested should have been towards extreme caution. It is, however, worthy of note that the value to be obtained in many kinds of tea at present prices is exceptional, and when the attention can be brought to bear on the subject, there is little doubt that this fact will be fully recognised, and that more extensive buyers will be the natural outcome. At present low prices, the export trade continues fairly active and the favourable opportunity afforded for the development of external markets has not been lost. There is little doubt but that the result of recent operations will be to encourage the use of Indian and Ceylon Tea in partially developed markets, in the not far distant future.

Indians.—There is not much to notice except the continuance of last week's depressed prices. Wherever special quality could be discerned bidding became more spirited and good quotations were obtained, but for poor liquoring teas buyers were still inclined to bid with little or no animation."

Mail advices from London, Eng., under date of the 2nd inst., report: "In view of the arrival of the steamship Moyune with new season's Moning teas on Wednesday next, this market for China tea has been quiet with very little inquiry. Clearing house quotations for good common China Congou are 5 5-16d. Owing to small auctions the market for Ceylons has been fairly steady without quotable alteration. Young Hysons scarce and dear."

MARKET NOTES.

[Importers, wholesale merchants and manufacturers should send any items intended for this department so that they may reach the head office not later than Wednesday morning. The editor will always welcome such information.]

New star lobsters are offering in flat tins a $2.50 and in tall at $2.25.

Early June canned peas are offering by one packer for immediate shipment.

New canned peas are selling to arrive next week or early the following at $1.

W. T. Harris, Chatham, N. B., dealer in general merchandise, offers 200 cases canned lobsters, also dried cod of finest quality.

Perkins, Ince & Co. received a cable from Japan confirming the advance reported last week.

Mr. McGovern, of Delafield, McGovern & Co., New York, is in the city selling future canned salmon.

Musson & Co. are doing an active trade in new Japan teas. They have made large shipments to Montreal.

Davidson & Hay are quoting new pack salmon of the "Express" brand at $1.40 to $1.45 to arrive in about ten days.

One of the refineries wired a wholesale house here on Tuesday that they could not fill orders booked July 2 for some days yet.

In last week's sugar market report, Blossoms and Creams were spoken of as grades of granulated sugars, whereas yellow was meant.

Sloan & Crowther find ready sale for the Royal brand of lobster, as the quality proves excellent and the package has a taking shelf appearance.

Perkins, Ince & Co. expect the first shipment of their celebrated "Sailor Boy" brand of Japan tea by the Empress of China, due last week at Vancouver.

In view of the off-grades of granulated which have appeared on the market, the St. Lawrence Sugar Refining Co. distinctly state that they have made only one grade of "Extra Standard Granulated," and will continue to make only this grade, with their name on every barrel.

Mail advices from Denia received report that the native farmers entertain ideas of higher rates which exporters fear will not materialize. The Valencia crop progresses favorably.

Mr. Hughes, of San Francisco, was in Victoria, last week, and purchased from the canners in that city 40,000 cases of this season's pack. The price was not given out, but it is supposed to be a fair one.

The following interesting remarks upon English market for canned salmon appear in a Liverpool report bearing date of July 2nd: "The demand for salmon during the week has been brisk, and the quotations are still at their full figures. Of the quantities purchased about 30,000 cases went to London. The consequence of this is that values have not only been maintained, but that the Alaska brands have hardened to 19s. and 20s. and it is now evident that the stock on hand will not last long over the current season. Columbia river is well inquired for at full rates."

PETROLEUM.

The state of trade varies very slightly from week to week. A small stock suffices to satisfy most needs that now make themselves felt at wholesale warehouses. Prices continue to quote from 14c. to outside buyers.

The Petrolia Advertiser reports:—Petrolia crude $1.27 per barrel: Oil Springs crude $1.27½ per barrel. There is little change in the crude market this week and business remains quiet on 'change. Drilling operations are going ahead with varied success. A few good paying wells have been struck in the Northwest. Refined remains unchanged and may be quoted at 10½ to 11 cents, according to quality, f. o. b. here. Everything is very quiet and the refiners are not doing much at this season of the year, but most of them are repairing up and getting ready for the fall trade.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The butter market improves, not materially in price, but very notably in the capacity of the demand. The price of white butter is an exception to the tendency of prices to remain unaltered. There is a very strong demand for white, and the prices holding are 11 to 12c. As was the case last week, Montreal furnishes the call for this class of butter, of which the visible supply becomes greater under the developing influence of fuller prices, while prices seem to gain rather than lose by the more liberal receipts. The delivery of store-packed tubs and pails of all grades is much ampler than it was a week ago, and is now sufficient to enable the market to furnish lots of the size that buyers think it worth their while to bother with. Good store-packed butter brings 13 to 14½c. Some snug parcels have changed hands for shipment to Montreal the last few days. A lot that was close upon three tons was sold on Monday at a price that approximated to 14c. The active export market for creamery causes a scantiness in the supply to this point, which is good for prices. Tubs are wanted at 20 to 22c. The butter market is in a good healthy condition.

The price at which jobbing is done is 9 to

FLOUR AND FEED.

Business in flour furnishes little matter for report or comment. The shipping trade is not brisk and prices are far from being at sellers' dictation, the pertinacity of buyers being the main factor in determining prices. The trade with Newfoundland is of about the same volume this week as it was last. Quebec purchases do not make a big total for the week. Several cars have been distributed from this centre, the last being straight roller at $3.70, Toronto freights. Feed is quite easy. Hay is lower.

FLOUR.—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.95 to $5; strong bakers', $4.50; white wheat patents, $4.80; straight roller, $4.40; low grades, per bag, $1.25 to $1.50.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.90 to $5.00; Manitoba strong bakers' $4.45 to $4.60; Ontario patents, $3.90 to $4.20; straight roller, $3.50; to $3.75; extra, $3.10 to $3.25; low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.50.

MEAL—Oatmeal is $3.80. Cornmeal is $3.50.

FEED—Bran is $11.50 to $12, shorts $13 $14, mixed feed $22, feeding corn 50 to 52, oats 31 to 32c.

HAY—Is fairly active at $11 for No. 1 timothy and $10 for mixed.

STRAW—Is steady at $6.50 to $7.

MONTREAL.

There is no change in the flour business, ruling dull and prices unchanged. The stocks in store compared with a year ago shows an increase of 2,872 barrels, and a decrease of 18,672 barrels compared with a year ago. We quote: Winter patent, $4.80 to $4.90; spring patent, $4.85 to $4.95; straight roller, $4.20 to $4.40; extra, $3.90 $4.00; superfine, $3.25 to $3.50; city strong bakers' $4.60 to 0.00; strong bakers, $4.50 to $4.60; oatmeal $1.90 to $2.00; bran $13.00 to $14.00; shorts $15.00 to $16.00; mouillie $24.

Grain rules quiet, the only business doing being in peas and oats, which are steady while wheat is dull. The stocks in store show an increase of 5,423 bushels of wheat, 34,879 bushels of oats, and a decrease of 26,268 bushels of peas, 1,813 bushels of barley, 8,731 bushels of rye compared with a week ago. Compared with a year ago there is an increase of 227,723 bushels of wheat, 199,518 bushels of peas, 705,274 bushels of oats, 94,007 bushels of barley, 6,785 bushels of rye, and a decrease of 5,406 bushels of corn.

MARKETS.—Continued

9½c. Round lots are offered at 8¾c. The autumn makes are nearly exhausted, such stock as is held being quoted at 11 to 11½c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—No business of any magnitude is doing. Jobbing is continued at from $1.10 to $1.20 according to quality.

DRIED AND ENAPORATED APPLES—No improvement in business or prices is to be reported. Dried quote from 3½c. upwards, according to quality, and evaporated from 6c.

EGGS—Lots are selling at 10 to 10½c. according to size. Seconds are 9 to 9½c.

HONEY—The price is easy at 5 to 7c. for extracted. Sections are scarce at 14c.

HOPS—The range for last crop is 21 to 24c. Choice hops of the 1890 crop are 16 to 18c. The demand is now of small proportions.

PROVISIONS.

The week's business has been an aggregate of rather small orders, all of which were filled at fairly firm prices. Long clear is stiffer. The demand for it is good and stocks are not over full. For smoked meats there is a steady market. Other hog products are quiet.

BACON—Long clear is 7¾ to 8c., smoked backs are 10½ to 11c., bellies 10½ to 11c., rolls 8¾c.

HAMS—Are steady at 10½ to 11c.

LARD—Pure is unchanged at 9¾ to 10c. for tubs and pails. Compound is steady at 7 to 9c.

BARREL PORK—U. S. heavy mess is $13 to $14, Canadian $15, short cut $16.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef is 4 to 4½c. in fore and 7 to 7½c. in hindquarters, mutton is 7 to 7½c. Spring lamb is 11 to 13c. per lb., yearling lamb 9 to 10c., mutton 7 to 8c., veal 7 to 8½c.

VEGETABLES.

Potatoes have weakened under the action of an increased supply invited by high prices. Cars are now obtainable at 35c.

" Tees & Persse, Winnipeg.

Out of store lots are 40 to 50c., though at the beginning of the week they were 60 to 70c. New United States potatoes are $2.50 to $3 per barrel.—Onions are $2.50 for Egyptian, Bermudas $2.—Cucumbers are 40c. per doz.—Tomatoes are 65c. in baskets and $1.25 in crates.—Cabbages are $2 to $3 per barrel.—Watermelons are scarce at 25 to 30c. each.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW.

HIDES—The market is apparently in a better condition, owing to the output of cured, which has been rather extensive this week. Prices are unchanged, No. 1 green cows' quoting at 4½c., cured at 5c.

SKINS—Lamb skins are plentiful at 40c., and pelts at 25c. Calf skins are quiet at 5 to 7c.

WOOL—There is a good supply for fleeces, which quote at 17c. for combing and 20c. for clothing. Pulled quotes as follows: Super 21½ to 22½c., extra 25 to 26c.,

TALLOW—Rough is easy at 2c.; rendered at 5 to 5½c.

GREEN FRUIT.

Oranges are very scarce and in continuous demand. The hot weather and the big assemblages of people on the 12th increased consumption very appreciably. Mediterranean Sweets are firm at $5.50 to $6. There are a few Valentias now in, but the price is out of sight, jobbers now quoting $12 a case. The fruit suffers loss by waste in the long transit, and that enhances the price of re-packed stock. Lemons are $4.75 to $5.25 and are in good request. Bananas are $1.75 to $2.25. Of California small fruits, pears are $6.25, peaches $3.25, apricots $3, plums $4.50. Canadian cherries are now ousting California cherries, and sell at $1.25 to $1.50 per basket. Other Canadian fruits are gooseberries at 50 to 75c., red currants 75c. to $1, black currants $1 to $1.25, raspberries 15 to 16c., strawberries 6 to 10c. There are a few imported apples in. They are very small, but they sell at $6 per barrel.

FISH.

There is a lack of life in the demand for fish, and a moderate sized stock lasts a good while. Prices are unchanged at 6½c. for salmon trout and white fish, $1.50 to $1.75 per hundred (count) for lake herring, 14c. for salmon.

SALT.

The market is in one of its quiet spells. The demand is for the most part confined to small sized lots. Prices are unchanged.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, July 14, 1892.
GROCERIES.

Groceries have shown more animation lately under the inspiration of the spell of fine weather we have been having, which has materialized in quite a lot of activity in several lines, notably teas, coffees, and dried fruits. In sugars the difference is not so marked, as buyers have been supplying themselves steadily all along at advantageous terms, owing to the favorable terms offered by competing sellers. The tone of value, with the exception of sugar and molasses, is steady, this being notably so in the case of coffee and dried fruits. On the whole the aspect is more cheerful than it was.

SUGAR.

The sugar market has been fairly active during the week and a fair movement is to note. Low grade yellows are slightly easier, and, of course, as this is the preserving season they meet with an active demand at 3¼ to 3¾c. Competition among sellers has created easiness in granulated also, and they are freely offered at 4¼ to 4 5-16c., but the enquiry is not brisk and other lines are unchanged. We quote granulated at 4¼ to 4 5-16c., yellows, low grades, 3¼ to 3¾c.; bright yellows, 3¾ to 4c.

SYRUPS.

There is little doing in syrups, which rule quiet and neglected, but there is a fair movement in molasses, and the feeling on it is a good deal better, although there is no change in prices as yet. Cables from the Islands state that the crops are finished and that the market is steady at 12c, which means laid down here at least 29c. The duty will no doubt put up the price of the better grades of molasses and syrups when its effect commences to be actually felt. The change in the tariff has been hailed with delight here by all the grocers who wish to do a legitimate business. The market was flooded with common trash from New Orleans last fall which the importers could sell very low, and which had a very depressing effect on the position of good molasses. Under the new order of things this cheap inferior molasses and syrup will be shut out and better prices will be secured for a good article.

TEAS.

Teas have been very active of late especially high grade Japans which fact taken with the former advices from primary centres has created a very much firmer market. Reports from Japan confirm the reports previously mentioned in these columns about a short May crop and the June crop is stated to be very inferior as well. All this puts holders in a more independent temper. New season Japans have been selling at 19 to 20c. for mediums and about 28c. for fine grades.

COFFEES.

Coffee is firm on spot and shows an advancing tendency. The demand has been good notwithstanding and several round lots of stock have been turned over from first hands at 16 to 17c. for Rios while a good demand has been experienced for the milder grades as well but orders cannot be filled as the supply is extremely light here. We quote:—Rios 18 to 20c.; Java, 23 to 25c.; Mocha, 24 to 25c.; Jamaica, 19 to 21c.; and Maracaibo, 22½ to 23c., Santos, 17½ to 19c.

RICE.

Rice has had a steady movement at firmer prices nothing specially noteworthy transpiring. We quote standard $4 to $4.10, Japan $4.50 to $5, Patnas $4.50 to $5, and Carolinas $7 to $8 per hundred pounds.

NUTS.

Nuts are quiet and steady under a moderate jobbing demand. We quote: Almonds Tarragona 14 to 15c.; almonds, Ivica, 14 to 15c.; almonds, common, 10 to 11c.; almonds, hard-shell, 7 to 8c.; walnuts, Grenoble, new 12 to 14c.; walnuts, French 10 to 10½c.; cocoanuts per 100 $3.75 to $4.00; filberts 9 to 10c. pecans 16 to 17c.; peanuts 7 to 10c.

DRIED FRUIT.

The business in dried fruit has been considerable, and stocks in first hands here are reduced almost to a minimum. Valencia raisins are quite firm at 4¼c. for round quantities. Jobbing prices a fraction or so more, and the same can be said of currants, which have been moved at 4½c. from first hands.

GREEN FRUIT.

There has been a fair seasonable trade doing in green fruit and values are unchanged. Bloods in half boxes $3; Massinas $4 to $4.75; lemons $2.75 to $3.50; pineapples

7 to 15c. each, strawberries 5 to 7c. per box, bananas $1 to $1.50 per bunch, apricots $2 to $2.50 per box. Cherries $1.00 to $1.25 per 8 lb. baskets, peaches $2.50 to $3, blue plums $4.

APPLES.

There is nothing new to say about apples, which rule the same. We quote regular $5.50 to $6 per barrel, evaporated 6 to 6c., dried 4 to 4½c. per lb., and evaporated peaches 12 to 13c. per tin.

HONEY.

There is a small trade doing in honey. We quote strained 7 to 8½c. and comb 8½ to 10c. per lb.

FISH.

There is nothing new to say about fish, which furnish a small business, prices remaining the same. The following are the quotations: Smoked Yarmouth bloaters, per 60 box, $1.00 to $1.10; St. John's bloaters, per 100 box, 80c. to $1.00; boneless cod, large boxes, 6 to 7c.; do. small boxes 7 to 8c.; finnan haddies 7 to 8c.

We quote No. 1 herring, per brl., $4.50 to $4.60; lake trout, per half brl., $4.00 to $4.25; sea trout, per bbl., $8.25 to $8.75; codfish, green, No. 1, per bbl. $4.75 to $5.00; do. No. 2, per bbl., $4.25 to $4.50; codfish, dried, per bbl., $4.25 to $4.50; salmon, B.C., per bbl., $13 to $13.50; do., Nfld., No. 1, per tee, $22.50 to $23; do. do., No. 2, per tee, $21 to $21.50; do. do., No. 3, per tee, $20 to $20.50.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was quiet to-day, business being confined to a small jobbing trade at unchanged prices. Canadian short cut, per brl. $16.50 to $16.75; mess pork, western, per brl. $14.50 to $15.00; short cut, western, per brl. $17.00 to $17.50; hams, city cured, per lb. 10½c. to 11c.; lard, Canadian, in pails 8½ to 8½c.; bacon, per lb. 9½ to 10c.; lard, com. refined, per lb. 7 to 7½c.

PRODUCE.

Cheese was quiet and easy to-day, buyers showing a more indifferent spirit than for some time. At the boat about 3,000 were offered, values ranging from 8½c to 8½c with 8½c for special cases. We lower our quotations a trifle as the decline has been established unmistakably. Butter is without special feature. High prices are being paid for creamery in the country, but no such figures are made here. Creamery, 19½ to 19¾c. Townships dairy, 16 to 17c. Western dairy 14 to 15c.

The egg market is unchanged. The demand is fair and prices steady at 10c to 10½c.

The egg dealers here are well pleased to-day to hear that the Dominion Government had decided to place a duty of 5c per dozen on American eggs. They have good reasons to be satisfied, as the packers will have no opposition during the months of January and February. New laid eggs are very hard to get during these months, and it has been the custom to import American to fill the gap. Mr. D. Meldrum, of Hislop & Meldrum; John Taylor, of Geo. Wait & Co., and Chas. Langlois were all interviewed, and all expressed themselves as being extremely well pleased with the action of the Government. They all thought that the Canadian hen could produce all the eggs needed in Canada and enough more to make a good trade with Great Britain.

ST. JOHN, N. B., MARKETS.

ST. JOHN, N.B., July 11, 1892.

GROCERIES.

There is very little change to note in any line of groceries. Business is fair, but seems to want something to get more money in circulation, as the scarceness of that commodity makes collections very slow. There is a demand for canned peas, which seem scarce. Salmon also sells readily. In other lines the market is very well supplied.

SUGARS.

Though we hear rumors of an advance in prices of sugars there is no change, as wholesalers seem to be trying to undersell each other, and profits, which at best are small, in some cases are wiped out entirely. The quotations given are 4.15 to 4¾c. for granulated, extra C 3½ to 3¾c., yellows 3¼ to 3½c.

DRIED FRUITS.

Off-stalk raisins are in fair demand. Prices rule low at 5c. Valencia layers are quoted at 6 to 6½c. Prunes sell readily at 6 to 7c. per lb. Dates move slowly. Quotations given are 4½ to 5c.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

BUTTER.—The market is well supplied. Roll butter sells more readily at 19 to 21c. Packed in tubs or crocks sells at 15 to 19c., as per quality.

CHEESE.—A better demand is noticed, and quality is also better than what has been offering. Prices are unchanged at 10 to 11c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS.—Are scarce and likewise in good demand. Prices have advanced somewhat, 12c. being the general quotation.

POTATOES.—Choice stock is scarce and prices are firm, while poor qualities are very plentiful and low priced. The former sell at $1.75 to $2.25, the latter 75c. to $1.

A HAMILTON HOUSE DISSOLVING.

It is understood that the firm of Stuart, Harvey & Co. is to be dissolved, the Stuarts going out of the business, and Alex. Harvey and R. N. Sterling remaining, but moving back to the old stand on King street east. Confirmation of this rumor, which has been in circulation for some time, was sought at the firm's warehouse this morning, but members of the firm declined to discuss the matter. From their guarded statements, however, it was gathered that the dissolution has been decided on, to take effect very soon.

The firm of Stuart, Harvey & Co. has seen many changes. Originally established by John Stuart and the father of the present Alex. Harvey, it was enlarged by the addition of T. H. Macpherson. Later it was dissolved, Messrs. Stuart and Macpherson forming a separate firm, and Mr. Harvey also engaging in business, with R. N. Sterling as his partner. When T. H. Macpherson separated from John Stuart, the old firm of Stuart, Harvey & Co. was reconstituted, the younger members of the clans Harvey and Stuart being taken in. Now, it seems, it is to be dissolved once more.—Hamilton Herald.

HE'D LIKE TO KNOW.

Say, Mister Printer, once again

I take my pen in hand,
To ask a leadin' thing or two
Which I don't understand.

I'm not quite up to modern times,
Though I read most the news,
But there are some things in our trade
Which trouble and confuse.

I don't quite understand why men,
Who go to church and pray,
Should six days in each blessed week
Not give each man his "weigh."

I don't see how it's possible
For men who sell for cash
To hold their heads above the trade
And then bust up-ker-smash.

I also fail to understand
(But maybe I'm not smart)
How men can fail with no assets
Then make a better start.

I really must admit, I am
Somewhat surprised to see
How men can tell such whoppin' lies
About their blends of tea.

These Indian (?) teas with soundin' names,
From Jawbreakin' Estates,
I kinder think are "packed with care"
In London or the States.

And spices "Pure" are sold I see
At less than grocers' price,
How this is done has made me think
Not only once but twice.

Mind, I don't know how these things be,
And don't wish to infer
That things ain't done straight, honest, sir,
And that my neighbors err.

I merely wish to learn a bit
Of things that now are dark,
And if you'll drop a line to me
I'll note each kind remark.

I may become through your advice
A prosp'rous grocery man,
But should I not succeed, I'll bust
And work the other plan.

DOMESTIC GREEN FRUITS.

A few weeks ago we published an article on the peculiarities of domestic dried fruits, and promised to continue the subject later. We have the pleasure of offering now a few points on domestic green fruits which may be of interest and value to our readers.

Just at the present time the market is well supplied with delicious California apricots. These are produced by grafting a peach on a plum tree. The result is a fruit partaking very much of the peculiar characteristics of its parents. The skin resembles the peach in color and in being "fuzzy," while the pit retains the distinguishing feature of its other parent—the plum. The flesh is more like the peach, while the flavor is peculiar to the apricot and resembles neither of its progenitors. Usually the flesh of this fruit is dry and not relished by those who are fond of juicy fruits. Most of those sent to this market are moderate in size, although the fruit when permitted to fully develop will compare very favorably with the peach. It is picked before it is quite ripe, and shipped to the East in refrigerator cars. Large quantities are dried and also canned. There has been a wonderful increase in the production of this fruit, that in the past three years more than equalling all that had been previously, grown, and it is claimed that the crop this year will be fully two-thirds of that of 1891, which was abnormally large.

In buying apricots, dealers should see to it that they are regular in size, hard and firm, which indicates good keeping qualities. They should be kept in a cool, dry atmosphere, and not handled any more than is absolutely necessary.

California peaches have a national reputation for size and handsome appearance, although they do not bear close comparison in the matter of flavor with those brought from the Delaware Peninsula. There is no fruit from California which comes East in such large quantities as the peach, not even excepting the Bartlett pear. They are more generally used for table purposes than any other variety, the Delaware peach being preferred for canning and preserving, but coming early in the year they do not interfere much with the Delaware peach. The same rules in buying apply to them as to the apricots.

There is probably no better known California fruit than the Bartlett pear. It has an individuality entirely its own, and as one dealer expressed it, has the "call." Its great size, handsome appearance, delicate flavor and juiciness, commend it to all. Its appearance is more attractive than that of the Bartletts grown in this part of the country, yet there are many who consider a New York State Bartlett pear much more delicate in flavor than the California. Both have good points, and the preference is simply a matter of personal taste. They come after the peaches, and have the market practically to themselves, as is evidenced by the numberless pedlars' wagons to be seen on the street loaded with the luscious fruit. The increased and improved transportation facilities enable them to be landed there in such quantities and in such a condition that they can be sold for a very low price, large, handsome fruit, weighing, perhaps, a pound apiece, being easily obtainable on fruit stands in this city last year for a nickel.

California also sends us another very valuable pear known as the Winter Nellis. It is especially adapted for cold weather, and its season here is along towards the holidays. Its keeping quality is excellent. In appearance it is of a russet color, resembling very much our russet apples. They are not very large, and seem to be a compromise between the Seckel and Bartlett pear. Coming at a season when other fruit is somewhat scarce, the Winter Nellis is a very acceptable fruit.

The nectarine, a very important California fruit, but not so well known on this coast, is, as we said in a previous article, a graft of the apricot on the plum. It has probably the most peculiar appearance of any of our common fruits. Its skin is perfectly smooth like the plum, but of a bright emerald hue. On one side is a brilliant carmine spot, making a decided and artistic contrast to the brilliant green on the other. The skin is very glossy like the plum, but the pit shows a corrugated surface like that of the peach. They are almost as perishable as green figs, and are therefore not brought to this market except in very small quantities, not enough to make them familiar to the general public.

The California plum occupies an important position in the fruit world. They are abnormally large, fine in appearance, and of excellent flavor and color, and said by experts to be ahead of any other fruit in the shape of a plum. There are three varieties known as the "prune," the "green," and the "purple," all attaining great size. The prune plum is larger than the others, and sometimes two will grow together, and form a fruit equal in size to a large apple. They are not adapted to this climate, being poor keepers and not bearing transportation well. No doubt, however, with the improvements which Pacific horticulturists are constantly seeking and making, these delicate fruits such as the nectarine and plum will soon be a familiar sight in our markets.—American Grocer.

W. M. Berry, of Port Stanley, on renewing his subscription to THE CANADIAN GROCER says: "I think your paper just the thing for grocers and general storekeepers." This is one of hundreds of such letters that we get with renewals.

The far-famed house of Cross & Blackwell, London, has been turned into a limited liability company, with a capital of £568,700, divided into 2,000 £5 per cent. cumulative preference shares of £100 each, 3,607 ordinary "A" shares of £100 each, and 80 ordinary "B" shares of £100 each.

WHERE THE JOKE COMES IN.

"See here, waiter, this pie hasn't any apples in it." Waiter—"I know it, sah, it am made ob ewapowated apples."

Clock Dealer—What makes the gongs sound so loud this morning?

Cashier—I think, sir, it is sympathy with the city salesman's new spring suit.

Old Lady—"I see you advertise wired hose twelve cents a foot."

Shopman—"Yes, ma'am; best in the market."

Old Lady—"I want to get some for these boys. They're dreadful hard on their socks."

The following three puns are from O. P. Deldoc, the humorous editor of the Detroit Herald of Commerce:

Good tea should always command a steep price and it is sure to draw.

The foreign nuts you purchase of your grocer are not generally what they are cracked up to be.

Young deer are so numerous around East Tawas that they stand in roes, and deer meat is cheap in that region.

"And will you be mine?" he asked with the warm impulsiveness of anticipated affirmation.

"No, I won't," she said in a practical business way.

"Why not?" he implored. "You know I love you."

"Yes."

"Then why will you not be mine?"

"Because, Harry, this is to be a joint stock concern, with equal representation and equal liabilities, and I don't propose to surrender my rights at the very beginning."—Detroit Free Press.

The following is a literal account of what took place in an office on the street just this week:

The invoice clerk was hunting for an order sheet for Cain Bros., Bobcaygeon, and in his search for the same considerably bothered the profit and loss clerk. Coming around to the latter's desk for the third time he was gruffly asked "What the deuce are you looking for now?"

"Trying to raise Cain, but I don't seem to be Abel. Have you seen it?"

"No ah, and I don't care A-dam if you don't find it till Eve."

"You see, Mrs. Oilriz," said the suave young man, "they called them 'Canaanites' because they came from Canaan." "Oh, I understand," said the old lady, affably. "There's something that Mr. Oilriz knowed and I didn't." "Indeed?" "Yes. He had heard that you spent several years in Paris, and he spoke of you yesterday as 'a Parisite.'"

T. S. Simms & Co., brush and broom manufacturers, St. John, N.B., are compelled by increasing business to take large premises. Their new office and show rooms on Dock street are very attractive, and all orders entrusted to them will secure prompt attention.

TWO HARVEST EXCURSIONS

Via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul R'y, on Tuesday, August 30th, and September 27th, '92.

Where the grasses are kissed by the wand'ring breeze,

And the fields are rich with the golden grain;
Where the schooner ploughs through the prairie seas.

To its destined port on the western plain;

Where homes may never be sought in vain,
And hope is the thriftiest plant that grows;

Where man may ever his rights maintain,
And land is as free as the wind that blows.

The main thoroughfares of this city still resound with the din of business—the throng of feet moving in all directions, the clatter on the pavement of horse shoes and wagon wheels, the rushing to and fro of delivery carts and the jangling of street car bells. But this uproarious medley is like a holy calm to the citizens who dwell and do business on these streets, and is a mere concord of sweet sounds to the frequenters of the same highways. They remember how the sense of hearing used to be dismayed and the medium of sound-transmission used to be troubled, when Bedlam was let loose for all day, and the pedlars led the riotous chorus. The pedlars are now relegated to the back streets, and discord has lost its fullest throats and strongest notes. The quiet retreats of the city now re-echo yells that formerly drowned the clamor of the reel and hose wagon on the main street and silenced the organ grinder three blocks away. But they don't shout so distractingly on the back streets, as there they have a wide field of unbroken stillness to vociferate in, and people can be stirred up by mere loudness.

In old times when the pedlars had the run of the main streets, trade in the interior parts of the city afforded them a rest. When they came out on the business streets they would pull themselves together to assert the supremacy of their lungs over the common pell-mell. It was then the observer could study the resources of the pedlar's gamut. Mere volume of noise would be poured forth unsparingly, the burden of the call would be horribly monotonous, but both these ways of assaulting the auditory nerves could be forgiven if the pedlar would not begin to play upon the chords or rather discords of human feeling. Some of them had command of the widest range of vocal torture. Voice-culture they had made a specialty of and had learned to imitate the most savage sounds in nature. Their yells were truly blood-curdling at times. Their yelling was more objectionable than their trade.

The restriction of the pedlars to the back streets, while it is a relief to the grocers of the main streets is an aggravation of the grievances of interior grocers, whose custom is now besieged by the whole peddling fraternity. The pedlars call this class-legislation and do not inaptly name it, as it discriminates between the grocers on main streets and the grocers on back streets, as well as between stationary traders and itinerant traders. It is desirable that the pedlars should have limited privilege in the matters of noise-making and street-obstruction, but it is probably not within the power of a city council to except certain streets from the scope of a pedlar's license. The pedlars are now making a test to see whether the Municipal Act gives that authority to a town or city council. That is a large power over a citizen's rights, and one that might be used against grocers themselves sometimes if it were vested in the city council. Suppose that some time the city should greatly lower the pedlars' license fee. The grocers would probably feel that the best way to face the lightly-taxed and increased pedlars' trade would be to take out license themselves, and send out a wagon with cheap fruit and vegetables to cope with the regular pedlars. Would the grocers, in such circumstances, like to have their ground so circumscribed that they could not get at the best of the trade? Of course they and the pedlars would be on an equal footing so far as streets went. The by-law limiting peddling to certain streets also contains a clause prohibiting storekeepers on two of the main streets from doing a peddling business. That appears to be a step beyond the farthest limits a council is competent to go.

It is not so long ago since the wholesale grocery trade was deemed a good one to stay in. Few retired from it in disappointment with its returns. It was considered a satisfactory trade to the majority of merchants engaged in it. The number of failures in it during the last ten years have been few and in most instances unimportant. Circumstances favored it as a remunerative business. The number of competitors was not excessive, and mutual interest was for a considerable time strong enough to bring competition under some control. Profits were protected on granulated sugar, tobacco and many manufacturers' lines by the adoption of a common price; loss through bad debts was minimized by the establishing of a uniform limit in the time given for credit, and uniform rate of discounts for cash payments; immunity from further competition was pretty well secured by the inflexible tendency of these discounts to check buying on a large scale by retailers. There seemed to be no other trade which had its own prosperity so much in its own hands as the wholesale grocery trade. But now we hear of men wanting to get out of it. In the west, one change has already been announced and certain others are said to be imminent. These withdrawals are not on account of the improving opportunities for money-making that the wholesale grocery trade offers. On the contrary, it may well be supposed that the diminishing returns from capital invested in that trade are the cause of any retirements now made or contemplated. The course of prices during the last twelvemonths afford every reason for believing this. The decline in values has been most marked in that time. The reduction varies from five to fifty per cent. and takes in a long list of articles. Among them may be named sugar, syrups, tea, Valencia raisins, currants, spices, canned vegetables, canned fruits, canned salmon (until the last few weeks) and other articles. In several of these—sugar, Valencia raisins, salmon, and canned goods—the wholesale grocer's margin has had to part with nearly the whole difference between last year's prices and this year's. The freight tonnage handled by the wholesale grocers this year does not represent much below the same cost, exception being made for sugar alone. The shrinkage in prices has been very general in most foods, wheat being something above a dollar at this time last year, and now selling at about 75c., while potatoes have rarely sold for a third of last crop-year's prices. The year from the 30th of June, 1891, to the 30th of June, 1892, was a bad one for prices in most lines of production, so that if the wholesale grocers did not make their usual profits they were not alone in this experience.

The Halifax Morning Chronicle understands that the Nova Scotia sugar refinery has been shipping yellow sugars to New York, and that it has realized better prices on them in that city than it can get in Canada. If this is the case, the fact furnishes the strongest comment on the lowness of prices in this country. It scarcely seems credible that a Canadian refinery can pay a duty of $\frac{1}{2}$ c. per lb. and the freight to New York, and yet undersell domestic refiners in that city. Of course it is easier to make sales of Canadian yellow in that market than it is to make sales of Canadian granulated. The number of grades of the former enables a seller to make a very good showing in favor of his price if his sample compares well in brightness with a sugar of much greater saccharine strength. The better sugar is not always the better seller, in all cases of two given competing samples of yellow. A low price and a good appearance are the main selling conditions, and against this combination a good appearance alone or a low price alone is handicapped. The lowest price going for yellow in New York is slightly over 3.3c. per lb. To compete with that grade it would be necessary for Canadian refiners to sell at about 2 $\frac{3}{4}$ c., but it is unlikely that it was the lowest grade that was sold. Yellow sugar is now getting so little attention that it is not surprising that efforts are made to make sales outside, though it is surprising that sales are made in New York.

* * *

The strict enforcement of the Weights and Measures Act in England appears to call for the prosecution of all traders who include the wrapping paper in the weights they give. Inspectors have for some time acted upon this literal and rigid interpretation of the Act, and have not only prosecuted traders charged with selling paper in the weight paid for but have set informers to work to catch grocers in a breach of the Act. Some cases are at present pending against certain grocers at Wolverhampton. The ground taken is, that in the case of sales where the weight is made up of the commodity and the enclosing paper, the customer gets only the gross weight he asked for, while the net weight of his purchase should be the number of pounds or the fraction of a pound he asked for. It would seem that the tare in a paper package of tea whose gross weight is one pound is too small a matter for any one to make a row about. If it were a chest of tea or a barrel of sugar, the case would be different, but in a hand package of tea or sugar it is the mere shadow of a trifle. The grocer must get something for his paper, and that is a convenient way of getting it, while it defrauds nobody, the parcel being weighed out under the customer's eye.

On another page "A Retailer" asks what stand the Wholesale Grocers' Guild takes on the matter of direct trade between wholesalers and consumers. We answer, that such trade is opposed to a cardinal principle, perhaps not expressed in any of its resolutions, but adopted in an agreement between it and the retail grocers of this city, and regarded in the best practice of its members by the Guild. There is usually exception made and allowed for the cases of buyers on a wholesale scale, such as restaurant keepers or hotel keepers or lumber men whose orders are very large. But trade with consumers, such as the employes of a concern like that our correspondent speaks of is not done by the best houses. "A Retailer" would probably find that the practice would be stopped if he made complaint to Edgar Wills the Secretary of the Guild. It is a discreditable method of doing business, a small way of extending trade, and should be exposed. A house cuts a poor figure among its wholesale confreres when it descends to the pettiness of competing against the individual customers of its rivals. The Canadian wholesale grocery trade is old enough and ranks sufficiently high to have acquired some of the dignity that attaches to established and honorable bodies, and which is supposed to restrain individual members from courses that are not honorable or dignified. Its influence ought to be strong enough to be independent of formal articles or resolutions for the purpose of keeping down inclinations towards unbecoming business conduct. But it appears that the only standard of business virtue is that of each individual house, and it is gratifying that that is sometimes a sufficient guarantee for the protection of retail customers. But not in all cases. The other day a merchant in the wholesale grocery trade handed the writer a letter in which a customer, a retail grocer, made a specific charge of direct competition against himself by a wholesale grocery house. He was approached by a traveller of this house but did not purchase any goods from him. This traveller then went to several hotels in that place and sold each of them a bill of goods. These hotels had formerly been supplied by the trader first approached, but the traveller did not compensate him by any percentage on these sales. On the contrary, he went to the competitor of this trader and gave him 10 per cent. on the sales, though the buyers were not former customers of that trader. That way of doing business does not need to be characterized. Its recital suffices to condemn it and to make people who do such business ashamed of it.

* * *

On second thoughts some of the people who were preparing to start new canning factories this year have decided not to make the venture. They have yielded to the suggestions of the situation, and have acted wisely, both in their own interests and the interests of the canned goods industry. Others have concluded to begin their first year by putting up but a small pack.

SHALL THE TERMS GO NEXT ?

THE GROCER has it on the best of authority that the terms agreement of the Wholesale Grocers' Guild is being violated by members of that body. It is not an occasional isolated case that is the basis of this statement, but the rather frequent practice of certain houses. Few houses charge interest after an account is due, if the debtor is a good customer, so that to this class of buyers the time is extended. But customers who do not rank high in wholesale consideration are charged interest for every day their overdue account stands unpaid. Thus, not only is it true that the Guild terms are frequently disregarded by certain houses, but it is also true that where they are kept by the same houses it is for the purpose of discriminating against struggling traders. There are two evils in this. The terms were purposely made equal for all traders, that the wealthy retailer would not be enabled by greater discount concessions to drive out of the business his poorer rival across the street. The uniform terms adjusted the conditions of competition so as to give the struggling trader a chance. If the wealthy trader paid cash, it was intended that he should be benefited no more thereby than the poor trader who paid cash, and if he bought on time it was intended that his bills should mature as early and that post-mature bills should pay the same rate of interest. Those who are making terms of their own are frustrating those intentions. They should consider the matter before they go too far, and ask themselves if they want to see the terms abandoned. The wholesalers can have no object in seeing the agreement to uphold these terms dissolved, and the retail trade are not signifying any disapproval of that agreement. Among the circular questions sent out by the delegates who met here last fall from various retail grocers' associations, were two or three asking the opinion of each local association upon the two time limits and the terms of discount. The numerous answers sent back, though differing in details, agreed in approving the terms. Wholesalers who are tampering with the terms of agreement should draw a moral from the effects which followed the suspension of the sugar clause. If they are satisfied with the consequences of that step they may favor the return of a demoralized state of credit. This along with the action of demoralized prices should bring about chaos enough to suit the most rabid trade anarchists. The wholesale grocery trade owes it largely to the uniform and limited terms it adopted that it has attained a foremost place in our commerce.

The wretched state of prices this summer sheds a little backward light on conduct that the self-interest of buyers as well of sellers kept covered up in the times when the sugar clause held. Favored traders are now letting out some of the secrets that were formerly shared only by themselves and the men who sold them goods in breach of some article of the Guild. The retailers who call up these reminiscences can do so now without endangering their own special advantage, for the sugar clause is gone and prices are in the very slough of despond in nearly everything, so there are few favors left to be got by intrigue, or through principals' connivance at broken pledges on the part of travellers.

FARMERS' BESETTING WEAKNESS.

A couple of men who claimed to represent a large wholesale concern in Toronto similar to the Patrons of Industry stores, successfully swindled a number of farmers in Nelson township yesterday. The strange men carried samples of groceries, dry goods, etc., and said they were taking orders for goods which would be delivered to the buyers at wholesale prices. They succeeded in selling many of the farmers job lots of dry goods, suitable for making suits of clothes, dresses etc., and persuaded the farmers to give them notes, ranging in value from $48 to $65, at four months in payment, and the farmers were to be allowed the privilege of dealing with the alleged wholesale concern in Toronto, who would also send along tailors to make up the clothes. Several of the farmers came to the city to-day to inquire about the alleged firm, only to discover that the concern had no existence and they had been duped into buying goods worth less than half the value of their notes. The man secured several hundred dollars worth of notes in the township of Nelson alone, and were doing a rushing trade. —Daily Paper.

The above item of news throws no new light on swindling methods, for the same scheme has often enough been worked and has been more than once exposed in these columns. A correspondent about two years ago forwarded circulars that were given to farmers by the agents of a supposed house in this city, and the GROCER was able to inform its readers that no such concern had an office at the given address.

The fact that farmers can still be fleeced by these sharks is not flattering to the agricultural capacity for business. Business is altogether too vague a notion in the minds of some people to be of any use to them. They look upon it as a matter of buying and selling, apart apparently from any precautionary considerations to secure the best value, to obtain assurance of delivery or to exact full execution of contract by the other party to the contract. Responsibility as a whole they appear not to think about, and the unreasonableness of a swindler's pretensions or representations is the last thing they criticise. A short distance from their own homes, on every trading day in the year is a man with a stake in the community, who lives by selling goods and who expects to thrive only as he deals fairly by his customers. There is no urgent need to buy to-day simply because the seductive itinerant calls to-day. What security has the farmer in the promises or representations of the wanderer anyway? The fellow can counterfeit all the manners of honesty and worth; he is frank and engaging; his knowledge of a world entirely different from what the farmers' family have been brought up in is full of interest to the young people; he aims to please and succeeds. He makes a visit, perhaps takes a meal, he goes away leaving everybody sorry, and leaves behind him an impression that promises to be an enduring one. But when the note he took—somewhat unwittingly to the farmer—has duly matured, and notice comes from the note-shaver of the neighboring town who bought it at 50c. on the dollar, another and more abiding impression succeeds the one the fascinating stranger left behind him.

Traders throughout the country should never weary of preaching to farmers the folly of buying from men who take contracts for goods either delivered or to be delivered. It is their experience with such men as these that makes farmers begrudge profits and confidence to fixed traders. If the farmers were business men they would have nothing to do with them, but if farmers were business men they would not be taken in by the representations of Patrons of Industry organizers.

UNIFORM CUSTOMS APPRAISING.

A deputation of wholesale merchants waited upon the Hon. J. A. Chapleau, minister of customs, at his office in Montreal on Friday morning. Their purpose in doing so was to ascertain if greater uniformity could not be secured in the interpretation of the tariff. The deputation was headed by the Hon. Ed. Murphy, and upon it were C. P. Hebert, vice-president of the Board of Trade and J. B. Learmont, H. Newman, Henry Miles, J. P. Cleghorn, J. Kerry, A. Ramsay, A. Masson, J. A. Cantlie, G. Macpherson, R. Angers and others. Hon. Mr. Murphy presented the deputation, and was followed by J. P. Cleghorn and J. A. Cantlie for the dry goods trade; J. B. Learmont, Real Angers, T. H. Newman and Gordon Macpherson for the hardware; A. Ramsay for paints and oils, and Henry Miles and John Kerry for the drug trade. Each gave instances where appraisers at different points classed certain articles under different heads. In some cases the difference in the duty amounted to 20 per cent. This is particularly the case with brass goods and cutlery, which were sometimes classed under two or three different headings. By some appraisers palette knives, tailors' shears, oyster openers etc., were called cutlery and a duty of 25 per cent. imposed, and by others as tools and 30 per cent. charge. The members of the hardware trade also seized upon the occasion to protest against item 52 of the Customs act which discriminate against them, as by its terms the duty upon damaged iron and steel goods is not refunded.

Hon. Mr. Chapleau listened to the deputation and acquainted himself with the details of the case. He expressed his willingness to do all he could to meet with wishes of the deputation, and suggested that, perhaps, the most feasible method of getting around the difficulty would be for each firm to send a list of their goods to the department, so that a complete catalogue might be prepared and the duty placed opposite each article. The deputation thanked the minister for the interest he had manifested and withdrew.

THE GUILD AND CONSUMERS' CUSTOM.

SOUTH RIVER, July 16th, 1892.

EDITOR CANADIAN GROCER.

DEAR SIR,—I would like to ask you for a little information in regard to the Wholesale Grocers' Guild of Ontario. Does the Guild allow or sanction the practice of some of its most influential members in selling direct to consumers and to those who do not make the least pretensions to being in the trade?

My reason for asking this is that one of Toronto's largest wholesale firms has come down to the practice of shipping groceries in small quantities to mill employees, in this district, at or about wholesale prices. By answering this in your next issue you will confer a favor on

A RETAILER.

THE PRICE OF SOAP CONTROLLED.

The following is a copy of a letter sent through THE GROCER to the Secretary of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association, with an accompanying request that it be published in our issue of this week.

WOODSTOCK, July 15th. 1892.

SEC. RETAIL GROCERS' ASS'N, Toronto.

DEAR SIRs,—I notice in this week's GROCER under the head of "Toronto Retail Grocers' Association" a question asked by Mr. Westren if I had been notified that the prices of my soap were being cut by the retail trade in Toronto, but was explained that in the case of my soap it was an open matter whether the price was cut or not and not subject to any regulation by me.

In answer to the above permit me to say that for upwards of 30 years my goods have been more or less handled by grocers from Halifax to Vancouver, and in all cases have I endeavored to sell my brands of soap, so as to pay a fair and legitimate profit to both wholesale and retail dealers, and as far as it has been in my power to control I have always endeavored to protect the trade from any unscrupulous cutting to customers, and am and have been at all times ready, willing and pleased to do my utmost or anything that lies in my power to regulate selling prices and see the same is carried out. Trusting in justice to myself you will read this letter before your next meeting, I have the honor to be Sir, Your obt. Servant,

D. Richards.

The next crop of Louisiana sugar promises to be larger than the last. The extra duty on low grade molasses was therefore not imposed any too soon.

A GROCER'S BOY.

One or two slight circumstances may bend the twig and thus incline the tree. A Christmas gift bent Doctor Schliemann, the discoverer of buried Troy, to his life work. He was eight years old when his father, a poor man, pinched himself to give him a "Universal History," with an engraving of Troy in flames. "If the walls," said the boy to his father, "were as thick as those in the picture, there must be some remains of them, and I shall excavate them some day." Another trivial event gave the boy an impulse toward his life work. He was working as a grocer's boy from early in the morning until late at night, sweeping the shop, selling herrings and candles. One day a drunken miller entered the shop and recited a hundred lines of Homer in the original Greek. The boy did not understand a word of it, but he was so affected by the rhythmic cadence that he wept, and paid the man to repeat the lines three times. From that moment he prayed to God that he might learn Greek. He was next helped to the realisation of his boyish ideal by two apparent accidents. In lifting a cask too heavy for him he strained himself and could work no more in the grocer's shop. He went to sea as a cabin boy. He was so poor that he sold his coat to buy a blanket. The vessel was wrecked on the coast of Holland. A friend secured him a situation in a counting room, at a salary of one hundred and sixty-two dollars a year. He spent half the small salary on his studies, lived in a garret on ryemeal porridge, and mastered English in six months. Then he learned French, Dutch, Spanish, Italian, and Portuguese. His knowledge of languages got him a situation as correspondent and bookkeeper in the office of an Amsterdam banker. A Spaniard brought in a bill which no one could read; young Schliemann translated it, and the banker promoted him. He began the study of Russian; subsequently he became a Russian merchant, and amassed a fortune. Then he engaged a Greek teacher. His method of study was original. He began by studying modern Greek. He procured a modern Greek translation of "Paul and Virginia," and read it through, comparing every word with its equivalent in the French original. When he had finished his task, he knew at least one-half the Greek words the book contained. He repeated the task, and then knew all the words, and thus acquired a modern Greek vocabulary without using a dictionary. In six weeks he had mastered the difficulties of modern Greek; then he applied himself to the ancient Greek. Within three months he had learned sufficient to understand some of the classical Greek authors, and especially Homer, whom he read and re-read with enthusiasm. Before beginning the work of his life he made a journey round the world, and studied archæology in Paris. Then, with a well-stored mind, he began those investigations round Troy which had been the dream of his life. His success made him the great excavator of modern days.—Exchange.

C. T.—Good morning, Mrs. G. This is a fine morning.

Mrs. G.—Yes, sir, it is a fine morning, but it looks like rain.

C. T.—Yes, it does look a little cloudy. Well, how is the Wednesday afternoon closing getting along?

Mrs. G.—Oh, not so bad, though that fellow over there at the other corner closed his door, but left it open so that any one could get in, and that is not right. I don't think my man will close next Wednesday. Our competitor just tries to catch our customers when we are closed, and I don't see the sense of closing just to let S. take our trade away. I saw customers go in myself.

C. T.—Well, that's too bad. Here I have been working for three or four weeks on this thing day and night, sometimes at half-past 9 to half-past 10 at night after my other work was done, and get nothing for it, my only object being to get you all a half holiday, so that you might have a little rest and recreation instead of working like slaves all the time, and now that I have got it into shape such mean people as that must break it all up. It is really too bad. I would not mind the work I have spent on it if it was only a success, but to see it broken through in disregard of a pledged and signed promise is very discouraging, to say the least of it.

Mrs. G.—Yes, it is discouraging. I have no use for that man any way. However, you have done your share all right anyway! You have worked hard enough.

C. T.—Yes I have, and its myself that knows it. I would not work like that again for two dollars a day. If they don't like to take it now they can do the other thing. I'm sick and tired of it.

Mrs. G.—Well, I don't wonder at it. It makes me sick.

C. T.—Well, good morning, Mrs. G., I will just run over and see Mr. S. and see what he has to say.

Mrs. G.—Good morning, sir.

[Traveller crosses to Mr. S. on the opposite side of the street. Enters store.]

C. T.—Good morning Mr. S.

Mr. S.—Good morning. Well how is the Wednesday afternoon closing getting along?

C. T.—All right, I think. Why?

Mr. S.—Well I don't think I'll close next Wednesday.

C. T.—Why, how is that?

Mr. S.—Well, I believe in closing and not keeping open, but there are some people round here who keep the front door closed and send the customers from the side door. That's no way to close. Why, I saw her across the road there come out of the side door and take one of my customers in and give her goods. I don't call that closing.

C. T.—Why you surprise me. I'm astonished. I thought that Mrs. G. kept tightly closed all day.

Mr. S.—Well what I'm telling you is a fact. Of course when I saw that, I let the customers come through the front door and waited on them. Now I suppose they will blame me. I won't close up next Wednesday, I don't think.

[C. T.—Leaves, confused and puzzled as to which of them told the truth.]

THE M'KAY MILLING COMPANY (LIMITED.)

The formation of this large and prosperous business was laid over 60 years ago by the late Hon. Thos. McKay. The business then passed to the late Thos. McKay who organised the firm of Thos. McKay & Co., whose name has been a familiar one to the flour and oatmeal trade for the past twenty years.

Following the example of other large concerns in Europe and the United States, this firm have turned their business into a limited joint stock company. The surviving partners of the late firm hold the bulk of the stock and continue in the management of the business, Mr. William Hutchison being general manager, William Scott, president, and T. M. McKay, vice-president, Mr. Archer Bayley filling the position of secretary-treasurer.

The McKay Milling Company's property consists of the flour, oatmeal, corn and feed mills situated at the Chaudiere, and the flour, oatmeal and feed mills of New Edinburgh, all driven by the never-failing water-power of the Ottawa and Rideau Rivers.

Starting at a time when the ring of the pioneer's axe might have been heard clearing the present site of the city of Ottawa, the business has steadily grown, until now it has the largest output of flour in eastern Ontario, and the largest output of oatmeal

HOW TO TELL A GOOD CHEESE.

An American expert gives the following suggestions in regard to the selection of cheese:—A good cheese, or rather a cheese with an indication of goodness, will stand up square on the shelf and will have an even when the hand is withdrawn, you have struck a soft article, caused by a slack cooling of the curd, a want of acid—or both. At best it will have an insipid flavour, which will become "off" as it grows in age. A cheese which feels so hard that you cannot press it on the rind is either sour, salted too heavily, cooked too much, skimmed, or suffering with a touch of all these complaints combined. There is nothing more satisfactory to a dairy enthusiast than to examine a good cheese: to the touch it will be mellow, yet firm; its rind will be of even hue, elastic, and free from puffs, and the sample will reveal firm, close-grained, meaty cheese, buttery, and of a nutty flavour. In testing quality of cheese many experts do not employ the sense of taste, but simply that of smell. In most cases I prefer both smell and taste. In my case, the taste will often reveal characteristics of flavour which cannot be detected by the smell.

HE WAS A ST. LOUIS GROCERY DRUMMER.

Said John D. Patterson, of Kansas City: "There was a very mad conductor on the east-bound Kansas City train the other night. The car was crowded and I shared my seat with a St. Louis drummer, who was bent on having a good time at the expense of his fellow-passengers. As the conductor came along a dog under our seat began to snarl viciously. The conductor looked hard at the drummer. 'No dogs allowed in the coaches; take him into the baggage car,' he said. Not my dog,' replied the drummer as he made a vicious kick. The cur went howling under the seats the full length of the car. The passengers became interested. The conductor, porter and brakeman made search for him. He continued to run and howl. The passengers joined in the search, but no dog could be found, and the quest was finally given up. Just as the passengers had settled into a doze the dog set up a heart-breaking, ear-piercing howl. The search was renewed, but without success. As we pulled into Bunker Hill the dog got under the wheels, and his death song was something appalling. The conductor was overjoyed. He got off and looked for fragments of the dog. The drummer had alighted, and as the conductor called all aboard he put down his grips and filled that train from engine to sleeper with dog fights. He was a ventriloquist. The conductor was so mad that he forgot to take up tickets for forty miles."—Interstate Grocer.

coloured, not mottled, rind. A cheese with a soft, porous interior will sometimes have this outside appearance, while the flavour is not to be guessed at by an outside application. The moment you press your finger tips on the rind you can begin to judge of the interior make up of a cheese. If it yields readily under the pressure of the fingers and the rind breaks, or does not spread back readily

OLD TIMES.

(Eugene Field.)

There are no days like the good old days—
The days when we were youthful,
When human kind was pure, and mind
And speech and deeds were truthful ;
Before a love for sordid gold
Became man's ruling passion,
And before each dame and maid became Slave to the tyrant Fashion.

There are no girls like the good old girls—
Against the world I'd stake 'em.
As buxom and smart and clean of heart
As the Lord knew how to make 'em.
They were rich in spirit and common sense
And piety all-supportin',
They could bake, and sew and had taught school, too,
And they made the likeliest courtin'.

There are no boys like the good old boys—
When we were boys together,
When the grass was sweet to the brown bare feet
That dimpled the laughing heather,
When the peewee sang to the summer dawn
Or the bee in the billowy clover,
Or down by the mill the whip-poor-will Echoed his night-song over.

There is no love like the good old love—
The love that mother gave us,
We are old, old men, yet we pine again
For that precious grace, God save us.
So we dream and dream of the good old times
And our hearts grow tenderer, fonder,
As those dear old dreams bring soothing gleams
Of heaven away off yonder.

OUR TIMES.

(W. H. Seyler.)

There are days as good as the old days—
In these we now are living,
And human kind is as pure of mind
And hearts their wealth are giving
As in the days when man's brute passions,
Uncurbed by education,
Brought woe and strife into each life
A curse to civilization.

There are girls as good as the old girls—
I know it for I've got one,
She's as lithe and smart and pure in heart
No purer lived, no, not one.
She is rich in love and common sense,
And plenty pious feeling
She can cook and bake the aiiest cake—
My heart she's ever stealing.

There are boys just like the old boys—
They're living in manly days,
And the woods ring clear with their hearty cheer,
—They're wandering in healthy ways.
And the whip-poor-will sings at evening still
And the bee sips sweets in the clover,
While the old brindle cow is down by the mow
Chewing the same cud over.

There is love as true as the old love—
The love our mother has given.
We are strong young men, and again and again
Give thanks for that gracions leaven.
And we live and we sing and our energies bring
To finish the work we've begun,
That when we grow old our hearts may not hold
Regrets for the days that are gone.

THE PEACH AND APPLE CROP.

From a fruit crop estimate, prepared upon the reports of 5,000 correspondents of three United States agricultural journals, the following is taken :

The peach crop is certainly short and prices must rule high ; the small orchards in Southern New England hang quite full, but New York has only 40 per cent., and some fifty reports from Newcastle, Kent and Sussex and from the Eastern Shore show that on the Delaware peninsula 40 per cent. of a full crop is all that can be expected, and peaches are now dropping off. The Georgia peach belts promise to have a great crop, but not so North Carolina. The Ontario peach orchards along the lakes are comparatively bare. The Michigan peach belt sends conflicting reports. California has every hope for quite a full crop. It is too early to forecast the apple crop, but its prospect on July 1 was only half as good as at the same time last year, when the crop was enormous, due partly to the remarkably favorable weather from August 15 to November 1. The finest prospect this year for a surplus for commercial purposes is in the famous apple-shipping regions of Nova Scotia. Maine is almost as good. Southern New England poorer, while in the great apple belt of western New York the prospect is very poor—hardly 33 against 100 on July 1, 1891. Much the same is true on the Ontario apple belt across the lakes. The situation is still worse in the apple-shipping sections of Ohio and Michigan, though good in the limited orchards of Minnesota and the Northwest. But in the commercial orchards of Missouri, Kansas and Arkansas the July prospect has not been so poor for years, the central and intermountain States are short, and only in California do we again find a promise of a fairly full apple crop. Cable advices from England confirm the poor prospect there, owing to cold and wet during blossoming, with a somewhat better outlook in Europe, though nothing like a full crop."

HERE IS A SMART GROCER.

An enterprising grocer has discovered a novel and highly successful way to secure and retain the custom of all the servant girls in his neighborhood, says the New York Herald. He bought at the price of waste paper a large quantity of yellow covered penny dreadfuls and uses the single sheet for wrapping purposes in such a manner as will enable the girl after a certain amount of trade to secure the complete story. Some very strange dialogues can be heard in the store. The following will suffice for example:—"A loaf of bread, please, and wrap in 'The Orphan's Woe,' page 5." "A lamp chimney, and give me 'The Blind Man's Curse,' third sheet." "Oh, my dear sir," pleads another girl, "couldn't you give me another copy of 'Slim Jim, the Boneyard Terror !' Our dog has eaten the other." "Why, how was that?"

Well, you see, sir, my missus didn't know the value of the story, and wrapped some scraps in it for the dog, and he swallowed the whole lot, paper and all." "Here, miss, is your soap," continued the grocer, turning to a third customer. "And please observe the wrapper. It contains the thrilling story of 'The Crimson Stain ; or, The Marble Bride.' You shall have the continuation when you come again. And," turning to his assistant, he continues : "Here, Hans, mark down the lady for 'The Crimson Stain,' second sheet. She has bought the soap."

PORK PACKING GRADES.

The Canadian pork-packing trade is beginning to experience the benefit intended to be conferred upon it by the government when it placed a duty on American hogs coming into this country. On all hands we hear that the business is improving, and that the prospects are still brighter. Since the imposition of the tax, farmers have gone much more largely into breeding and keeping. There is one defect, however, to which the pork-packers are now directing the attention of the government. The opinions of the pork-packers of the country on the subject are voiced by Mr. George Matthews, of Toronto, who says : "If the government would only rectify the pork duty so that the packers could make all kinds of pork as well as fine, no American hogs would be brought in at all. There is one thing misunderstood about this question, and that I have never seen rightly put in any paper. The packers do not ask the imposition of a higher duty; what they ask is that the government should rearrange the description of the different cuts, because the cuts as classified in the act and the modern cuts in packing are widely different. In the inspection act there is a cut called extra fine. Well, we used to make that, but we do not do so now. We have 'navy,' short clear mess; and other brands. We want the government to reclassify. There is another thing too. Pork intended by the government to pay a duty of 3 cents is brought in at 1½ cents per lb. This is done in this way. We bring in the pork in long strips, from the shoulder to the ham. We cut this in three or four and we repack, having the pork the government intends shall pay 3 cents per lb., but only pay 1½ cents on the long strips. Everybody does this." We have no doubt that if these views are pressed upon the attention of the government the defect will be remedied without delay.—Canadian Trade Review.

D. Nicol, of Cataragui, has been commissioned by the fruit growers' association of Ontario to collect fruits for the world's fair. He will only accept native fruits of rare kinds.

The merchants of Nanaimo are organizing a fire insurance association. They claim they are paying the insurance companies a higher rate than is paid in other cities, it being 5½ per cent.

Four freight trains of tea, each consisting of thirteen or fourteen cars, have left here since the arrival of the steamship Empress of China. The longshoremen commenced unloading the steamer at 8 o'clock on Saturday morning, and by 11 o'clock the first train started. This is hustling, and no mistake.—Vancouver News-Advertiser.

On Saturday morning a considerable section of the business quarter of Stayner was destroyed by fire. Among the sufferers were John Petrie, and D. Gillespie, whose grocery stores were burnt. The property was insured.

T. B. Robb, New York, who was well-known to the grocery trade in Canada died in Perth, July 8th. He was respected by all who knew him. He had extensive business relations with the Canadian wholesale houses.

The Victoria (B. C.) Board of Trade in his annual report says the total salmon pack for 1891 was 314,893 cases. Of this 220,761 cases were shipped to England; 60,950 to Canadian cities; 23,534 to Australia, and 9,648 to local consumers.

The West Lorne Canning & Evaporating Company (limited) has been incorporated with $20,000 capital, the promoters being T. E. Montague, Dugald McPherson, Archibald McKillop, jun., W. Brock, G. H. Munroe and Benjamin Partridge, all of West Lorne.

Cream with berries and other fruits is quite a luxury and may now be enjoyed by everybody, since Highland Brand Evaporated Cream is readily obtainable, daintily put up in cans, from every grocer. This Cream has a much more appetizing appearance on acid fruits than ordinary dairy cream, as it does not curdle, but remains smooth and glossy.—Adv.

Though the Japanese have been making many vile imitations of foreign cigarettes, the merchants are now crying out against the manufacture of imitated Japanese cigarettes in the European settlements of Yokohama. Tokyo tobacco merchants have even gone so far as to refuse to deal with foreigners in that article of trade.

Orr Bros., Windsor, having started their new mill are turning out a Diamond brand of flour suitable for the best class of trade. The mill is equipped with all the latest improved machinery, and has a capacity of 100 brls. per day. It is fitted out by the well-known manufacturers, the Goldie & McCulloch Co. The building is large and is solid brick, four stories high.

The Helvetia Milk Condensing Co. gives its Highland Evaporated Cream the benefit of special advertising literature that is attractive in form and pointed in substance, and in both impressive. It consists of several handsome, well-printed little pamphlets in which the nature and uses of the Highland Cream are clearly set forth.

"The Son of Heaven" and the members of the Chinese Imperial Household are naturally very particular about their tea, says a correspondent from Hong Kong. Several dealers have lately been making purchases of the fragrant herb, in a lordly uncommercial way, on behalf of the Imperial tea-drinkers. Only the finest quality is taken, and the prices for some choice varieties are described as fabulous.

Port & Winch, of Vancouver and Westminster, shipped, a few days ago to Calgary, Donald, Banff and Vancouver, about 3,000 lbs. of fresh salmon. The Vancouver News-Advertiser says: The daily shipments of the enterprising fish dealers are constantly increasing and their business spreading all through the Dominion, from Westminster and Vancouver to Montreal and Quebec.

The salmon canners do not like the regulations with respect to the disposal of offal, but will, of course, comply with the law. They have the choice of three methods, namely: To bury it above high water mark, to have it towed out to sea, or to deposit it in perforated cribs at the canneries. Most of the canneries, it is understood, will crib the offal; but a few will send it to the oil factories. Burying offal or towing it to sea is so expensive as to be quite out of the question.

Nothing has appeared in the Associated Press dispatch in years to arouse the public to such a sense of the necessity for judgment in the security of papers and valuable documents as the St. John's fire, when nearly all foreign safes proved worthless, and those of the Canadian manufacture of J. & J. Taylor alone stood the test.

A new machine has just been patented by Mr. Gaudrie of Port Hope, for the purpose of putting Labels on bottles of all sizes and kinds, and also on fruit and other cans of all sizes, and on square packages of all sizes. The capacity for labeling beer bottles is from twenty-five to thirty thousand per day, and it will do easily from eight to twelve thousand tins and three-pound fruit cans. The management of this device is in the hands of Alonzo W. Spooner, of Port Hope, the Copperine man.

The British steamship Fingal, 2,510 tons, Capt. Fullmore, loaded a cargo of tea at Kobe, Japan, under charter to the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. She proceeded from there to Yokohama, and sailed for Vancouver about the middle of this month. The Company have already one sailing ship, the George Skolfield, on the way. The tea business of the Company has very largely increased, and, although the Empresses all bring full cargoes of tea, they cannot carry all that is awaiting shipment.

The Prize List of the Toronto Industrial Exhibition ought of itself to beget a big interest in the great Fair, as it offers substantial inducements to producers to exhibit the products of their handiwork, manufacture or culture that should bring many competitors together. The Prize List is very lengthy, and the classes are so diversified as to give a chance to all varieties of product, while the prizes are ample and well graded. The List should be very thoroughly distributed among the people, as a perusal of its pages will suggest to many a man to enter something that he never thought was comprehended in the scope of the Industrial's intended exhibits. The great Fair is sure to be a success, and everybody should con its Prize List with the object of ministering to that success.

The Odessa correspondent of the Kingston Whig writes as follows: There is quite a stir among Odessa merchants at present. Mr. A. is angry with B. over some little commercial dispute. Mr. B. denies anything of a character that is not straight honest business. Mr. A. resolves on revenge. As a result everything is marked in plain figures "away down below cost," A. claiming that he will "make the business so that there will not be two cents in it for anyone." Meanwhile the public smile and smack their lips in anticipation of the wonderful bargains to be had for the asking.

At the last meeting of The Toronto Retail Grocers' Association, there was quite a discussion on Surprise Soap. On investigation it appears that the party who was reported as cutting the price did so through a misunderstanding, and nobody regrets it more than himself. If the secretary of the Association or any member knowing of cutting on Surprise Soap, would acquaint the manufacturers or their agents, they can rest assured matters of this kind will always receive prompt attention. From all we know of the Surprise Soap manufacturers, they are, and wish to be good friends to the retail grocers, and help them to make Surprise a profitable line to handle.

The first year's experiment with the newly established lobster hatchery at Picton, N.S., has proved highly successful, about sixty-five millions of young lobsters having been hatched out and placed in the sea after they had attained a few weeks' growth. This is the result of securing the eggs from the female lobsters brought only to one cannery. There are about five hundred canneries which would average about the same number as the one where the eggs were preserved, so that some idea may be formed of the millions of young lobsters which could annually be hatched if all the eggs were preserved instead of being wasted as is now the case. As the hatching is not an expensive affair it appears as if it would pay the canneries to have a hatchery attached to each, so as to insure a steady annual crop of lobsters. Mr. Wilmot, superintendent of the fisheries, is completing a new glass hatching jar similar to that used in the fish hatcheries, which is so arranged that the eggs will be kept in motion by the running water all the time, and it is expected that the percentage of eggs hatched in future will be even larger than this year.

THE ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND FIRE.

A naval force under the command of Sir Baldwin Walker, is engaged blowing down the dangerous walls. The safes belonging to most establishments have been opened. The bank vaults, court records and savings bank-books are in good order. The records of the Crown Lands Department are all destroyed. The manuscript of the important Acts passed during last session have also been destroyed, and there is no copy extant. The largest mercantile establishments had English safes, and all proved worthless, the contents being completely destroyed. Taylor's safes all came through the fire unscorched internally. In one case there was a Milner and a Taylor in the same building. The contents of the former were destroyed, while those of the latter were intact. Consequently the Canadian safes are now in great demand. Public gratitude to the Canadian people for their prompt assistance is warmly and universally expressed.—The Empire, July 16, 1892.

It has been ascertained that the total amount of the insurance on the property destroyed will reach four millions and a half, but this will not cover more than one-third of the losses sustained. One peculiar feature of the conflagration has been the test it afforded of the value of rival makes of safes. Those manufactured by Milner have been found useless, while those made by Taylor, of Toronto, proved perfect. The test ought to prove of the utmost value to Canadian trade as some of the most serious losses have been caused by safes proving unreliable.—The Gazette, Montreal, July 14.

DRY GOODS.

A fairly active house trade has been experienced during the past week with wholesalers, but parcels have been small and while numerous for this time of year, are yet not very great in volume. Everything is selling with no run on any particular article. The letter orders have been for staples, novelties and a few lines of light summer goods.

Celluloid has advanced in price, in New York, and the pure celluloid collar will now cost 11c. per dozen and the cuffs 22c. per dozen, more than previously. There is but one company handling these goods in the States and they control prices.

Information has just been received showing a strong advance in raw silk in France and Switzerland. This will have an effect in making prices stiff in all future purchases made by the Canadian retailers this fall, and next spring there will be a strong advance, amounting to nearly 15 per cent. All stocks of silk dress goods and trimmings are consequently very valuable at present.

The handkerchief trade during the past two weeks has been very strong on low-priced goods, but the higher priced goods, have been very slow in movement.

Prospects for fall trade are quite encouraging, and the wholesalers are stocking up very heavily in anticipation of a good demand. In another week, stocks will be nearly complete. Many dealers throughout the country are holding off and are missing the cream of the goods. The late buyer may save a little on some lines but he loses the best patterns and the best-value goods.

NOTES.

Wyld, Grasset & Darling are showing a nice range of fall dress goods in tweeds, serges, box-cloths, and fancy effect goods. Among their special drives are, a job line of ladies' circulars, which are of excellent value, and a low line of ladies' cotton hose. They are showing special value in a line of knot scarfs at $2.25, while their range of neckwear is quite extensive in all lines. A line of white shirts, open front for full length, and being donned as the wearer would a coat, have had a good market. They also report a strong demand for Canadian tweeds. In other classes of tweeds they are opening up some very nice lines.

Gordon MacKay & Co. are showing some nice varieties and patterns in strap-bows, and other neckwear. Several cases are being opened. Their line of harvest mits is in good demand as the quality and price seem suitable. They are receiving a very large shipment of woollen and silk sealette. In order to show the extent of the demand for these goods, it might be mentioned that in one line of this cloth, several hundred pieces were sold last season, beside doing a large trade in other qualities and prices. Their range this season will be quite extensive and varied both as to quality and price. They are also showing some Irish friezes in plain and nap surfaces, which are worthy of attention. They are opening up some novelties in frillings, ruchings, and some pretty silk and wool mixes in fall dress goods. These are shown in shot effects, in twills and jacquards.

John Macdonald & Co. are still receiving shipments of carpets and linoleums for fall delivery. In their linoleums they have a large variety of patterns and qualities. They have also received several cases of new American silk gimps, from which they have filled all their back orders, and the balance is placed in the department. Gold and silver gimps and silk moss edgings are shown in pretty designs. Among their new goods are some pretty pongor silks in all colors, for nesses and fancy work, and moire ribbons in colors, sizes 5, 9 and 16. They have just opened up a full range of Belwalp serges and coatings for which they are sole agents in the Dominion. The serges are shown in black and blue and the coatings in gray mixtures. Their stock of flannels is quite large, including white and scarlet saxony; salisbury; red, white, and blue grounds, and the staple lines.

W. R. Brock & Co. are showing some new styles in flannel embroideries in silk and cotton thread; and a large range of dress and mantle pearl buttons in plain and fancy patterns and in all sizes from 18 to 60 lines. Among other things worthy of attention in the house are a range of the celebrated Hercules suspender, and a range of fingering yarns and Saxony in several grades and colorings. There are showing some plumb lines for the fall trade in hosiery, gloves, cardigan jackets, and men's socks.

Among the noticeable things in the house of Caldecott, Burton & Spence are some new and pretty lines of trimmings, especially in gimps and fur trimmings. They have a large range of new silks in pongees, sorvaks, Bengalines, and the peau-de-soie which is fast becoming very fashionable. They have shipped a large quantity of the latter silk during this week to Montreal merchants, the Montreal wholesale merchants not seemingly being up to the fashion in this trade. Kid gloves in great variety and large quantity have been received.

John Macdonald & Co. are opening up ten bales of travelling and driving rugs. These are beautiful goods, being shown in fringed plaid rugs, striped and checked bound rugs, and printed seals and black mohairs. The patterns are entirely new and very artistic, consisting of printed sporting effects, crescents, and checks. The new Lumsden rug is very pretty, having a nice silk curly surface.

OLDEST GROCERY TRAVELLER.

"I believe that Alexander Hill has the longest experience of any grocery traveller on the road" said a gentleman to THE GROCER on Friday last as that gentleman stepped out of Sloan & Crowther's, Toronto, with two valises on his way to his home in Guelph. "He has been eleven years with this firm and was thirteen years on the road before that, making twenty-four years continuous travelling, and he looks good for another twenty-four." THE GROCER would like to know if there are any others with a like or longer service on the road.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, July 21, 1892.
GROCERIES.

The general report gathered along the street reflects a spiritless trade. Even in houses or lines in which business is active there is little buoyancy. Profits are impalpable. The wants of the trade are small in everything but sugar, and in sugar do not come up to their usual mid-July volume. Wholesalers vote this the worst year the grocery trade has had since the formation of the Guild, and no one in the trade can recall one so bad in the same distinguishing feature—the lack of profits. Buyers follow the policy they usually take to on a market where they have the upper hand, that is they buy warily, gauging their purchases by their strict necessities, and trust to the panic that competition has engendered among wholesalers to be able to make later purchases at lower figures. Houses that have a dull moment fancy that the trade is being done by other houses and weaken prices by their bid for customers. The volume of sales has on the whole been about up to that of last week. Money does not come forward quite as freely as could be wished.

COFFEE.

In the series of purchasers—importers, jobbers and retailers—there appears to be little impulse to buying at the moment, the market for Rios not being regarded or reported as critical for speculators, and the supply for regular trade being sufficient for current business. The range of prices continues to be from about 17½ to 21c. Javas retain the firmness which they took on some time ago, and run from 32 to 36c. for very fine grades. Padang coffees are from 28c. upwards. Mochas are steady from 30c. up.

DRIED FRUITS.

The attention has fallen away very materially from Valencia raisins. Off-stalk fruit, so active a few week ago is now dull. The prices are not weak however, as they have more to gain from the time between now and the incoming of new crop raisins than they have to lose from the surplus yet to be sold. The lowest grade is quoted at 3¼c. The bulk of the stock in store is held at higher prices, quoting for the most part from 4½c. up. Currants are quiet at 4½c. upwards. A purchase of a lot of choice cases by a house on this market is one of the events of the week. The reports of the new crop promise an average yield as to quantity, but a much better quality of fruit than was gathered last year, some of which was exceedingly poor. From some sections the report of mildew is heard. Prunes have ceased to attract attention and are about out of stock. D's still quote at 5¼c. The crop of French prunes is expected to be smaller than last year's, which was much below the average. Lemon peels are scarce at former quotations, namely, 16 to 17c. Other peels are unchanged. In nuts there is little doing. The price of Valencia and Sicily shelled almonds has stiffened outside.

RICE AND SPICES.

Wholesalers are selling more rice than they were and are getting the same prices for it, that is, 3½ to 4c. for B and 5 to 5½c. for Japan, according as the latter is milled at home or abroad.

In spices conditions and prices are unaltered. The trade is moderately good.

SUGAR.

Wholesalers cannot congratulate themselves upon any amendment in the situation so far as they are concerned. One improvement, but it has not reacted favorably upon prices, is the decline in the supply of the lowest grade of granulated that was put on this market some weeks ago, and has wrought so much mischief ever since. The refinery

Jobbers appear to be satisfied with the outward movement, and feel that they can depend upon it, if it is kept up at the present rate, to exhaust the stocks of staples before the new pack begins to come freely into stock. The distribution is now nearly all tributary to one-house. Jobbers' orders and sales of car loads make a big drain on supplies. Inquiry from Winnipeg is now causing some figuring that may result in a large sale. The call for small parcels is also of importance as a force on the side of the demand. The price of the best brands of peas, corn and tomatoes is $1 to $1.05. There are brands of tomatoes obtainable at 95c. New peas are in stock to some extent and selling at $1. Other vegetables are quiet and unchanged. Fruits are receiving no attention. The pack of new season's fruits is likely to be limited both by the tendency of canners to learn a lesson from last year's experience, and by the shortage in several of the crops, notably cherries, plums and peaches. The remains of the 1891 pack of salmon continue to go into consumption at stiff prices, $1.50 to $1.60 and even $1.70 being paid for talls and $1.80 for flats. Flats are selling better since the scarcity of talls. Some new pack salmon is just arriving and a car of old has also just come to hand. The price of the new is $1.45 to $1.50. The sale of mackerel has been rather better recently, the price generally going being $1. The cheapness has favored business, and probably the scarcity of salmon has tended to the same effect. The price of French sardines as well as of Portuguese of the new pack is firm, and jobbers' quotations here are unchanged at figures in Prices Current.

For making tomato pulp and preparing pumpkin and squash for canning is very well known to all the canners in the United States, and a few of them are in use in Canada. The high tariff has prevented their being used extensively heretofore.

We are now manufacturing these machines at Oakville, Ont., to enable our Canadian friends to obtain them without paying a heavy duty; but we shall make only a few of them unless ordered. Those who contemplate purchasing, should send their orders promptly to insure the saving of duty, as late orders will have to be filled from stock in the United States which will be subject to a 30 per cent duty.

MARKETS—Continued.

The B.C. Commercial Journal says: The run of sockeye salmon has commenced on the Fraser River, but it is reported as being very light, with only a few boats out from each cannery. The run this season is expected to be light, being the off year, and canners may find it difficult to put up sufficient fish to supply orders already contracted for. Reports have been received from the northern rivers, and fishing is reported as being as good as last year. Fish are not so very plentiful in the Skeena, but are numerous near the mouth of the river, and the canners are satisfied with the season's prospects. McLellan's cannery has put 2,500 cases, Standard 2,500 cases, Skeena Packing Co. 2,000 cases. The canneries on the Skeena averaged 2,000 cases when last heard from. On July 9th the Barbara Boscowitz brought down the first of the season's pack, consisting of 2,100 cases, from the British-American and North Pacific canneries of the Anglo-British Columbia Packing Co. on the Skeena River.

which produced it is said to be making no more of the same kind. It can hardly pay to get the name of making such inferior stock, if the consequences to the makers and jobbers are generally the same as those which followed a purchase of it by one trader we know of. He had been caught with some of this off-granulated; another order for a car of granulated came from the same dealer; he was shipped some very good sugar, but as the name on the barrels showed it to have been made at the same refinery as that which made the off-grade he had previously got, he sent the whole shipment back. The prices of granulated run from $4\frac{1}{4}$ c., this quotation being for carloads, and the one to which last week's cut brought some of the houses. There is some effort made to get 4.40c. for smaller lots. Yellows run from $3\frac{1}{4}$ c. The sugar trade is in a bad state truly, and is affording no money to either refiners or wholesalers. The low freights from the maritime provinces bring the refineries of that part of the country into strong competition with the Montreal refineries. The jobber gets the benefit of this competition but does not keep it, giving it away and depriving himself of a profit.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups are almost gone out of the market, so dull is the trade in them. The lowest in which there is any interest taken is quoted at 2c. Offers are free at low prices, but the wholesalers have no use for the stock. Shipments to the United States markets have been made from Montreal and Maritime province refiners.

The molasses market is locally the better of the change in duty, though the full benefit will not be felt until all remains of rubbishy stock brought in previous to the increase in duty have been run off and the season of demand is here. Choice Porto Rico grades are selling at 38 to 40c. New Orleans molasses from 30 to 45c. is in stock.

TEAS.

Low grade teas are steady at last week's prices and appear not to be in excessive supply. In Japan there is a perceptible improvement in the tone of the market for low grades, in consequence of no new season low grades having come forward yet. The prospect at the moment is favorable to higher prices for these teas in the near future. A big sale of low grades, supposed to be the remainder of Colgate Baker & Co.'s stock, was made here last week at prices believed to be about 11 to 11 $\frac{1}{2}$ c. The stock had been lying in Montreal. The general position of the market for Japan is strong and points to the likelihood of good prices, the settlements this year in Yokohama being up to date three or four million pounds less than they were in the corresponding period of last year. The local market has been quiet with few transactions. A fair business in Ceylons has been done with jobbers when exceptionally good value has offered, chiefly in low grades. Young Hysons continue high, Thirds and Seconds scarce, Japan quiet but with better enquiry for low grades.

MARKET NOTES.

[Importers, wholesale merchants and manufacturers should send any items intended for this department so that they may reach the head office not later than Wednesday morning. The editor will always welcome such information.]

Samples of new peas were shown on Monday by W. A. Ferguson, of the Delhi Canning Co.

W. T. Harris, Chatnam, N. B., dealer in general merchandise, offers 200 cases canned lobsters, also dried cod of finest quality.

Recent advices report very light pack of sardines by French canners, and show that cost of raw stock is quite as high as it was a year ago.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol of Hamilton regret being unable to fill orders for Diamond Crystal Salt promptly. The factory is, now, however, in full blast, and orders will all be shipped inside a week.

The cherry, plum and peach crops are said to be rather short this year. That of itself may have the effect of reducing the pack of these canned fruits sufficiently below last year's limits to bring the market to a healthy state.

W. H. Gillard & Co., Hamilton, fill their advertising space in THE GROCER this week with an important announcement of bargains in new-season Congou teas, three attractive lines of which they are now offering at prices that will enable the trader to give excellent value at moderate figures. The system of advertising that the firm have adopted as an accessory to the trade in this tea is a special feature that cannot but benefit the retailer.

J. W. Lang & Co. are still able to fill orders for salmon.

New season's Packing and Moning teas are now offering from England.

London produce clearing house quotations for spot Ceylons 5 3-16c., Indians 6 5-16c.

Faulder's Silver Pan marmalade is handled by H. P. Eckardt & Co., and has good sale these days.

H. P. Eckardt & Co., are offering extra value in a line of new season Japan teas they have now in stock.

French fishing is again poor, and consequently best Portuguese brands of sardines keep up their prices.

Smith & Keighley are selling a black tea at 15c. that a year ago would have been considered cheap at 20c.

The quality of the new crop of currants is expected to be better than that of last year, which was unusually bad.

Davidson & Hay have new Star lobsters in stock, talls at $2.25 and flats at $2.50. The lobster market is very firm.

Canary seed is likely to be dearer, owing to unsatisfactory expectations of new crop and short stock of old crop.

According to private advices to Musson & Co., to hand on Tuesday, Barbados molasses has been advanced 3c. per gallon at the Island.

Sloan & Crowther have received the first carload of new pack Clover Leaf salmon. It is put up in tall tins and is to be had at $1 45 to $1 50.

Warren Bros. & Boomer received a car of Empire canned salmon on Tuesday. The packers claim that this exhausts the stock of old salmon held at the coast.

The salmon run is good on the Skeena River, and the canneries are very busy. The fish are later on River's Inlet, but there also promise to be plentiful. It is reported that the Indians on the Inlet will demand more money for the fish.

E. M. Dadelszen of Bordeaux advises representatives here that the crops of Marbots and Cornes promise well, but that Cahors, which is the walnut earliest ready for shipment will yield a smaller crop than last year's. New York has already laid down many confidential orders.

T. Kinnear & Co. are offering very best quality of canned corn beef in 1 lb. 2 lb. and 14 lb. tins, and boneless chicken, duck and turkey at attractive prices. This is the season for these goods, and traders will find it worth while writing for quotations.

The E. B. Eddy Co.'s. newly-patented package for their popular Telephone matches is now on the market, hurried on in fact by the rush of orders which followed the intimation that it was forthcoming. The city trade has kept the telephone busy calling up the firm's branch at 29 Front St. W. to send forward the Telephone matches in the new style package, which is a very attractive one. In addition to its telling shelf appearance the new box takes up one-third less store room and makes freight to the buyer one-third less than the old package. Count and quality are up to the Company's usual standard of fulness.

A letter from Smyrna confirms advices of some time ago concerning the fig and Sultana raisin crop. The growing fig crop is in splendid condition at the moment, but it has yet to stand hot weather and parching winds that may seriously affect it. A good crop of Sultana raisins is assured.

Advices by mail report favorably upon condition of the European beet crops, but suggest a late harvesting, as the roots are backward, and there seems to be an inclination to let them remain as long in the ground as possible for the purpose of gathering strength and body.

Warren Bros. & Boomer are in a position to give some good bargains in Patras currants in cases. A choice lot of these shipped here on consignment had to be sold, as the affairs of the owner were being closed up. They were accordingly put up for sale, Warren Bros. & Boomer were the buyers and they got them far under cost.

Shelled almonds, both Valencia and Sicily, which have recently been at very low figures, have had a sharp advance in the primary markets, amounting to about 3c. per lb. in consequence of the estimates of new crops, which of Sicily alone are said to be 60,000 bags short of last year. Considerable buying has been done on speculation.

Mail advices from London, Eng., under date 9th July, report the tea market for Indians and Ceylons without material alteration. In China teas the principal feature of the week has been the arrival of the steamer Moyune with new season's Monings. Taken altogether the quality is decidedly poor, and there is an abnormally large proportion of common tea. Monings have opened at exceptionally low prices, some parcels showing good value.

A lot of 3,200 packages low grade Japans which has been pressing on the Canadian market for some time, changed hands this week. It was held by George Musson & Co. in Montreal, and sold by them to a wholesale grocer here. This seems to indicate an improved feeling in the market, for a month ago no reasonable bids were obtainable on this lot. The terms are private. The buyers, figure on a limited supply of new low grades to let them out with a good profit.

The Fraser River canneries are now all ready to begin packing, and will set to work the moment the sockeyes appear in sufficient number. A few of the principal packing establishments have been putting up Spring salmon for some weeks, which will be disposed of in the Dominion. The English

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

This week has a better record for business than most of its predecessors for some time back. Some shipments have been sent eastward at rather more satisfactory prices, $3.95, Toronto freights being paid for 85 per cents. In feed there is little of interest to report.

FLOUR.—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.95 to $5; strong bakers', $4.50; white wheat patents, $4.80; straight roller, $4.40; low grades, per bag, $1.25 to $1.50.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.80 to $4.90; Manitoba strong bakers' $4.25 to $4.40; Ontario patents, $3.90 to $4.20; straight roller, $3.60 to $3.75; extra, $3.20 to $3.25; low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.50.

MEAL.—Oatmeal is $3.80. Cornmeal is $3.50.

FEED.—Bran is $11 to $11 50, shorts $12 $13, mixed feed $22, feeding corn 50 to 52, oats 31 to 32c.

HAY.—Is fairly active at $10 to $10.50 for No. 1 timothy and $9 for mixed.

STRAW.—Is steady at $6.50 to $7.

MONTREAL.

There is no change to note in the position of the flour or grain market. Flour is moving slowly at unchanged prices, and no movement is reported in grains. Oatmeal is neglected. We quote: Winter patent, $4.80 to $4.90; spring patent, $4.85 to $4.95; straight roller, $4.20 to $4.40; extra, $3.90 to $4.00; superfine, $3.25 to $3.50; city strong bakers' $4.60 to 0.00; strong bakers, $4.50 to $4.60; oatmeal $1.90 to $2.00; bran $13.00 to $14.00; shorts $14.00 to $15.00; mouillie 23 to 24c.

MARKETS.—Continued

market, strange to say, will have nothing to do with the Spring salmon, although it is far superior to the sockeye. All the canneries had a few boats out Tuesday night, and as high as 60 fish were caught, indicating that the run is commencing. Another week should see it in full swing, though canners generally believe the catch and pack this year will be light.—Vancouver News-Advertiser.

McMeekin & Co's notes on Indian and Ceylon Teas for June are as follows:

Indian.—The offerings were 28,000 packages, against 29,000 packages in the same month of 1891. A large proportion of the tea was second-hand parcels from dealers' stocks, and about 9,000 packages were of new season's growth. A few of the latter had very desirable quality, and were eagerly competed for, but during the greater part of the month the offerings of both old and new seasons were generally undesirable, and therefore were not much in demand. The quantity of tea made, up to latest telegraphic advices from India, appears to be little in excess of the figure of this time last year, and quality on the whole is much the same; but some really desirable teas are now on the water. The average of public sale prices for the month was about 9d. per lb. against 9¼d per lb. for the corresponding month last year. The imports were 1,644,927 lbs. and the deliveries 7,957,089 lbs., leaving in stock on 30th June 23,000,268 lbs.

Ceylon.—The offerings were 63,000 packages, against 88,000 packages in the same month of 1891. Except for the few really fine teas, there was a somewhat heavy and dragging market throughout the month, and prices leave off generally lower. However the fall is more apparent than real, owing to the prevalence in the offerings of inferior quality teas. The imports were 6,107,122 lbs. and the deliveries 5,487,576 lbs., leaving in stock on 30th June, 18,380,688 lbs.

About 5,000 packages of Java were sold, for which there was a fair demand at a low level of value. In China teas little business is passing, and quotations are lower. The quantity shipped from China to the United Kingdom up till date is rather ahead of the figure for last year.

PETROLEUM.

A very slow business is done in Canadian refined oil, and no change in the price has occurred. Quotations are 14 to 14½c.

The Petrolia Advertiser reports:—Petrolia crude $1.26¾ per barrel; Oil Springs crude $1.27½ per barrel. The drill still keeps hammering away punching holes down into the earth and a small quantity of oil is being daily obtained from each new well, sufficient to keep up the requirements of the Canadian people. The stock of oil during the last month has slightly increased in the hands of the different tanking companies, but the stocks in the hands of refiners are less than they were this time last year, and we consider that the present production of crude oil is about equal to the requirements of the country. The refined oil market is dull, and we quote oil in bulk at seven and three quarter cents (7¾c.) f. o. b. here, 60 days or wo per cent off for cash.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The price of butter does not improve though the demand apparently does, as all that comes, of whatever quality, finds a buyer. The reason that prices do not mend appears to be that the ideas of shippers who are making up for export are rather fixed, as they consider an export business unprofitable if the cost of the butter is above 14 to 15c. The store packages that have come forward this week have taken from 12 to 14c., the latter price being rare and given for only exceptionally good butter. There is scarcely any white butter offering and it is in demand. Good dairy tubs go as high as 15c., but there is much more dairy tub selling at 13½ to 14c. than at 15c. A car of dairy tub was sold on Monday, but the sale was concluded on private terms. It was made up in the main of selections. There has been a considerable run of inquiry from the west for creamery tub, but the price has in every case stood in the way of business, as 19 to 20c. has usually been the quotation.

Cheese is quite firm at 9 to 9½c. The English market is good, but would be better if Canadian shippers did not compete so stiffly among themselves.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Are very dull at $1 to $1.20, quality and quantity fixing the range.

DRIED AND EVAPORATED APPLES—The prices are the same as before, 3½c. upwards for dried and 6c. upwards for evaporated. No sales of any moment are reported.

EGGS—There is a decline in interest among buyers and stocks do not move readily into consumption. There has lately been some loss incurred in handling on the part of some shippers. The price is 10 to 10½c. for firsts and 9½c. for seconds.

The Continental Egg Co., Grimsby, Eng., quotes reselected Canadians, weight about 15 to 15½ lbs. per 12c, 6s. od. to 6s. 3d.

HONEY—The effect of new, though none has been bought yet, is beginning to be felt in weaker prices. Old is still quoted at 5 to 7c. extracted, and 14c. for sections.

HOPS—The price is rather easier in quotation though the same figures are quoted, that is, 21 to 24c. for '91's and 16 to 18c. for '90's.

PROVISIONS.

Packers are beginning to have stronger ideas as to the value of most products, and selling has seconded the views of the packers, as there was a very good business transacted during the week. Prices are therefore higher. The movement of cars has been unimportant. One car of sweet pickled ham was sold on Monday, but the price was not ascertained.

BACON—Long clear is 8c., smoked backs are 11c., bellies 11c., rolls 9c.

HAMS—Are steady at 11c.

LARD—Pure is unchanged at 9¾ to 10c. for tubs and pails. Compound is steady at 7 to 9c.

BARREL PORK—U. S. heavy mess is $13 to $14, Canadian $15. short cut $16.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef is 4 to 4½c. in fore and 7 to 7½c. in hindquarters, mutton is 7 to 7½c. Spring lamb is 11 to 13c. per lb., yearling lamb 9 to 10c., mutton 7 to 8c., veal 7 to 8½c.

VEGETABLES.

Old potatoes are scarcely salable, 20c. per bag out of store being a hard price to get.

New Canadian potatoes are now coming in at $2 per barrel. United States new potatoes have had to take a drop from $3 to hold their own.—Melons are 25 to 40c.—Cucumbers are 40c. a doz. United States tomatoes are 50c. in small packages and $1.50 for large, and Canadian are $1.50.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW.

HIDES—There is no change in hides. No. 1 green cows' are 4½c., and other grades quote accordingly while cured are 5c. in carloads.

SKINS—Lambskins are 40c., and pelts have been advanced to 30c. Calfskins are 5 to 7c.

WOOL—The market is quiet at 17c. for combing and 20c. for clothing fleeces. The prices of pulled are 21½ to 22½c. for super and 25 to 26c. for extra.

TALLOW—The prices are 2c. for rough and 5 to 5½c. for rendered

GREEN FRUIT.

The weather has been rather varied for business to be steady, cool days occurring with more frequency than they commonly do at this time of year. The price of lemons remain the same, that is, $4.75 to $5.25. The strong position of this fruit in New York has not been maintained and now prices there and at other distributing points are easier. Oranges are steady at $5.50 to $6 for Mediterranean Sweets. A few Valencias are still held away up in the neighborhood of $12. Bananas remain at $1.75 to $2.25. New apples are $4 to $5. California plums are $4 to $4.50, cherries are $1.25, peaches $3.50 to $4.50, apricots $2 to $2.25, red currants 75 to 85c., black $1.20 to $1.40, gooseberries 60 to 80c., raspberries 10 to 12½c.

FISH.

The fish trade is in a very quiet state just now. Prices are steady at 6½c. for salmon trout and whitefish and $1.50 to $1.75 per hundred for lake herring, and 14c. for salmon.

SALT.

There is no feature of the salt market to comment on. It is quiet and prices are unchanged.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, July 21, 1892.

There has been a shady trade in most kinds of groceries during the past week, the improvement already noted being fully maintained. In fact it has led to some wholesale clearances out of first hands, and in some lines bulk lots are not to be had at all, as importers have none at present on hand. This is the case more especially in connection with dried fruits, coffees and teas, all of which have moved freely. In fact all in all the grocery market has presented more life, while this freer buying is all the more welcome because buyers are well able to handle their purchases, for it is generally admitted that their supplies have run down pretty low. In fact the present turn is due to the actual want of supplies induced by the fine weather as much as anything else. Of course there is still a strong disposition to proceed conservatively until the crop prospects are definitely certain, but the fact that this improvement in groceries has occurred in the interim is considered all the more encouraging.

There have been no special features to note as compared with those of the previous week.

SUGAR.

There has been a fair trade doing in sugar, although the change in it has not been so marked as in other lines, due to the fact that buyers have been supplying themselves pretty freely at the cut prices that have been offering recently. For all that a fair trade has been doing and refiners have been kept pretty busy filling orders from jobbers, which is a sure sign that things are looking up. Prices are unchanged. We quote: Granulated 4¼ to 4 5-16c.; yellows, low grade 3¼ to 3½c., bright yellows 3½ to 4c.

SYRUPS.

The demand for syrups has been of a quiet sort, in fact they are about the only line of groceries which are dull. In molasses however there is a fair movement at 28 to 29c.

TEAS.

The tea market has been quite active, and holders show, if anything, a more independent tone, stocks of Japan especially being held. Demand has been especially active for goods worth from 20 to 23c., and some good turnovers have been the result.

COFFEE.

There is no abatement to the strength in coffee noted last week, and with the light supplies available at present here, holders are as stiff as ever. Bulk lots of Rios have been moved at 17½c., but we quote ordinary jobbing prices steady to firm. We quote:—Rios 18 to 20c.; Java, 23 to 25c.; Mocha, 24 to 25c.; Jamaica, 19 to 21c.; and Maracaibo, 22½ to 23c., Santos, 17½ to 19c.

RICE.

There has been a steady business doing in rice, with no change in values to note. We quote standard $4 to $4.10, Japan $4.50 to $5, Patnas $4.50 to $5, and Carolinas $7 to $8 per hundred pounds.

SPICES.

There has been more doing in spices, several jobbers operating, which has led to some large lots of Pimento being moved from first hands here, mainly on a basis of 6½c.

NUTS.

There is nothing special to mention regarding nuts aside from the ordinary jobbing demand. We quote: Almonds Tarragona 14 to 15c.; almonds, Ivica, 14 to 15c.; almonds, common, 10 to 11c.; almonds, hard-shell, 7 to 8c.; walnuts, Grenoble, new 12 to 14c.; walnuts, French 10 to 10½c.; cocoanuts per 100 $3.75 to $4.00; filberts 9 to 10c. pecans 16 to 17c.; peanuts 7 to 10c.

DRIED FRUITS.

Dried fruit has been scarce and firm under a continued active demand. This has led to the movement of round lots from first into second hands especially of Valencia raisins which have been cleaned up almost bare here. Prime fruit therefore is firm now at 4½ to 5c. and the same remarks apply to currants in a minor degree for they also to a satisfactory extent have shown more activity at values of 4¼ for barrels 4½ for half barrels and 4¾ for cases in good fair sized parcels.

GREEN FRUIT.

There has been a fair trade doing in green fruit. Fancy oranges newly arrived have been selling at $6 per case while lemons are steady at $3.50 to $4. Bananas continue scarce and firm at $3.50 to $4. The S.S.

America with over her cargo of 12,00 bunches and a lot of other miscellaneous West Indian fruit at public sale on Monday next.

APPLES.

Apples are quiet and unchanged, and we quote regular $5.50 to $6 per barrel, evaporated 6 to 6c., dried 4 to 4½c. per lb., and evaporated peaches 12 to 13c. per tin.

HOPS.

The hop market has ruled very firm, with holders all calculating on the prospect of a short crop across the line. This has induced our Canadian growers to ask more, and they are doing so. Sales here of fair sized parcels 1891 have been made at 27½c. and we quote 25 to 30c. as a range.

HONEY.

The demand for honey is of an ordinary sort. We quote values the same, strained 7 to 8½c. and comb 8½ to 10c. per lb.

FISH.

The fish market is fairly active with prices about the same. Smoked Yarmouth bloaters, per 60 box, $1.00 to $1.10; St. John's bloaters, per 100 box, 80c. to $1.00; boneless cod, large boxes, 6 to 7c.; do. small boxes 7 to 8c.; finnan haddies 7 to 8c.

We quote No. 1 herring, per bbl., $4.50 to $4.60; lake trout, per half bbl., $4.00 to $4.25; sea trout, per bbl., $8.25 to $8.75; codfish, green, No. 1, per bbl. $4.75 to $5.00; do. No. 2, per bbl., $4.25 to $4.50; codfish, dried, per bbl., $4.25 to $4.50; salmon, B.C., per bbl., $13 to $13.50; do., Nfld., No. 1, per tee, $22.50 to $23; do. do., No. 2, per tee, $21 to $21.50; do. do., No. 3, per tee, $20 to $20.50.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market is dull and unchanged, the movement in pork and smoked meats being still very fair. Canadian short cut, per bbl. $16.50 to $16.75; mess pork, western, per bbl. $14.50 to $15.00; short cut, western, per bbl. $17.00 to $17.50; hams, city cured, per lb. 10½c. to 11c.; lard, Canadian, in pails 8¼ to 8½c.; bacon, per lb. 9½ to 10c.; lard, com. refined, per lb. 7 to 7½c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

Cheese opened the week with a brisker tone, no doubt due to the operations preparatory to the sailing of the Bristol steamer, for, as we have said, the expectation is for heavy shipments this week. Whatever the cause, there can be no doubt that July cheese has opened out to a much better demand than most people expected. This is shown by the steadiness of prices, which have been surprisingly so, considering the heavy shipments that have been going forward to the other side.

Butter continues dull on spot, but there is news of further deals from the country, some considerable buying of the first part of July being reported around 20c. These purchases, however, are no doubt similar to those of the June make, and are mainly to be put away in the expectation of what the future will bring forth.

WHEN TEA IS POISONOUS.

The death of a boy, aged seven years ("shock produced by drinking hot tea without milk") forcibly and sadly emphasizes the particular vice of the ordinary English method of drinking tea, says the British Medical Journal. The tea had been left for some time "in the oven to warm;" that is to say, it was a strong decoction of tea leaves to which time had been given to extract all the tannin and which had then been rewarmed. It was then drunk without milk; that is to say, the tannin was not converted into a relatively harmless albuminous tannate by the addition of milk. It is precisely because of our English method of "making tea" from such infusion of tannin, as well as of theine, that tea is so injurious to the digestion, and, as in this case, when taken in unusual strength into an empty stomach, and without milk, becomes an irritant poison. No people who know how to make tea use milk with it—neither the Chinese nor the Japanese; but then the hot water (not boiling) is poured on to and off the leaves at table, and as soon as the liquor becomes of a pale straw color. The pot is always a small china one, and the hot water kettle is brought alongside it on to table. Half a minute suffices for the first infusion. It is a very grateful and refreshing beverage this "honorable tea" which one sips at frequent intervals in the far East; but of course it would be, and is, insipid and not worth drinking if its flavor be drowned by sugar and milk. No people in the world drink so much or so often as the Japanese, and Europeans in Japan easily fall into the same habit. No doubt is ever heard of it being injurious or a source of indigestion; that is because they take care not to extract the tannin from the leaves and we take great care to do so. This is why we say persons who live on tea and bread and butter have weak digestions, and why this poor boy was poisoned.

WEISMILLER OUR STANDARD BEARER FOR THE LOCAL.

Such was the cry of the Conservatives of South Huron, at the large and enthusiastic gathering lately held at Hensall. The Seaforth Sun makes the following remarks on the subject:

As advertised, a meeting of the Conservatives of South Huron was held at Hensall, on June 28th, for the purpose of choosing a candidate to contest the riding in the interests of the Conservative party. John Torrance, President of the Association, presided with his customary ability.

On motion of J. S. Roberts and F. Neelin, it was decided to at once proceed to business and bring out a candidate.

Several nominations were made. All the nominees made stirring and encouraging speeches, and each withdrew in favor of Mr. Weismiller, who was then declared the candidate amidst loud and enthusiastic cheers. This news, says the New Hamburg Volksblatt, gives us great pleasure and we wish the Conservatives of South Huron success in this nomination, and feel positive that a better selection could not very well have been made. We have the honor of Mr. Weismiller's acquaintance since his school days. He was born of German parents in the village of Wellesley, Waterloo County, and early manifested great talents, which later obtained great influence as a teacher in his native county, where he rose to be one of its brightest ornaments. Mr. Weismiller possesses all the characteristics of a thorough German, he is unceasingly industrious, thoroughly honest and truthful, and it is to these elements in his nature that he has such a large number of true friends. As far as we are aware he possesses in the highest degree the confidence which the Conservatives of South Huron place in him, and also the ability to adequately represent his riding in the Local House. He has withal the advantage of being thorough master of both the German and English languages, speaking both fluently. As a merchant he has through his solid characteristic business habits for a long time borne a good name among the people in his riding, and possesses their complete confidence, (how could it be otherwise?) Says the Sun, very handsomely, he is the coming man and the country will yet hear of him. These are emphatic and prophetic words, and the Conservatives of South Huron should well weigh their import and spare no effort to elect Mr. Weismiller, who is now in his best years, and able to work out manly deeds. Particularly it behooves the Germans of South Huron to consider the election of Mr. Weismiller as a matter of honor, and should make his return to the Local a point to be obtained and no effort spared. Only by hard fighting and work can one obtain the victory, and this cannot fail if they but hold together. We feel assured that Mr. Weismiller, if elected, will do all honor to his riding. Gluck Auf.

WHERE THE JOKE COMES IN.

The dead-beat prays: "Give us this day our daily bread," and then expects the grocer to act as free distributing agent for heaven.—Detroit Herald of Commerce.

Mother: "The grocer sends word that he gave you an extra dozen eggs by mistake. Where are they?" Small son: "I seed I had a dozen to spare, so I threw 'em at some boys wot was kiddin' me. You oughter to see 'em scoot.—Good News.

I've heard a heap o' men talk about luck in my time, and so far as I have been able to keep track of individuals, those who was ho'in corn at a dollar a day instead of talkin' on the grocery steps have got ahead of the fastest.—St. Louis Grocer.

An exchange tells of a Hagerstown, Md. hen that laid an egg, upon the shell of which was the imprint of a foreign piece of money: the date 1822 and the word "Constitution" can easily be deciphered. If that hen story is true it was a most miraculous lay, if not, it is a marvellous lie.—Detroit Herald of Commerce.

Deaf and dumb beggar—"Say, pard, did yer see that dude jest went by?" Blind beggar—"Yaas; what of him?" Deaf and dumb beggar—"I'd a' killed him if he hadn't gave me a dime." Blind beggar—"Why?" Deaf and dumb beggar—"He was whistlin' 'McGinty.' That tune allus makes me sorry I'm a himposter.—Harper's Bazar.

"Look here, waiter! Didn't I give you a dollar when I first came in?" "Yes, sah." "And you've kept me here nearly three-quarters of an hour." "Yes, sah. I done that to show you dat I couldn't be bribed, sah."

Miss Thumpp-Hardie—Did you ask Mrs. Nexdoor if my piano playing disturbed her baby? Servant—Yes, mum; and she said the baby liked it, and she was much obliged to you for playin' so much. Miss Thumpp-Hardie—Did she, really? Servant—Yes, mum. She said it saved her th' trouble of poundin' on a tin pan.

"Why, Bridget," exclaimed the housewife, "I can write my name in the dust here!" "Deed, ma'am," replied Bridget, admiringly, "thot's more nor I can do. There's nothing loike education, afther all, is there, ma'am?"—Washington Star.

Mr. Williams (Fanny's admirer)—"Is your sistah going to the seaside this summah, Tommy?" Tommy—"That all depends on you. Heard ma say that if you and Fanny were engaged before the season opened, there wouldn't be any sense in her going."—Texas siftings."

"Look yere," demanded the city marshal of Boomopolis, Oklahoma, bursting into a room where several prominent citizens were congregated, "what's the cause of this rumpus? Whatever are you doin' with that tourist?" The tourist in question was stretched on his face on the floor with four prominent citizens holding him down, one seated on each corner. "Makin' him useful as well as ornamental," was the reply. "Playin' checkers on his pants. It's your move, Hammerslaw.—National Tribune.

Landlord of Seaside Hotel—"Where are all the young ladies this morning?"

Head Waiter—"They are out on the water killing a shark."

L.—"Killing a shark? That's a curious pastime for young ladies."

H. W.—"It's a man-eating shark, you know, and they're afraid he'll get hold of the only man that's here."—New York Press.

Brown—"Did you take any holidays this year, Jones?"

Jones—"Yes, of course."

Brown—"How did you manage your business while you were away?"

Jones—"Oh, I just took my advertisement out of the papers until I returned, so there was no business to manage. Capital idea, wasn't it."—Tid Bits.

Mr. Hasheater: How is it, Mrs. Boardinghouse; here it's Easter and you aren't serving any eggs?

Mrs. B.: I read the egg market quotations this morning; they said that eggs are stronger, and they must certainly be unfit for use in that case.

"What's your son Josiar doin'?" said a neighbor to Farmer Begosh. "Wall," was the reply, "he thinks he's diggin' bait, but he's makin' a garden."—Washington Star.

Mrs. Youngwife—"Bridget, why didn't you get that molasses I ordered?" Bridget—"Faith, and Oi tried, mum, but there wasn't any in town." Mrs. Youngwife—"How do you know?" Bridget—"Because ivery sthore that Oi went to had a soign out 'N. O. Molasses sold here,' and Oi didn't go in."

A French gentleman, while travelling in Brittany, got out at a station where the train stopped for a few minutes, and entered the refreshment room. Casting his eye on a basket containing some buns, he suddenly burst into tears. The sympathetic bar-maid gently asked him what was the matter, and elicited the following touching explanation: "My dear young lady, pray excuse my natural emotion. Two years ago I was travelling on this line with my never-sufficiently-to-be-lamented wife. We came into this refreshment room and scratched our initials on a bun which I still see in this basket. I beg you to let me have it as a tender souvenir. Here are 40 centimes."

THE VARIATION IN DEMAND FOR CANNED FOOD.

The development of the canned goods business has been so rapid that the phases of demand can be better noted than in older and slower lines of commerce. Coming into notice first as a new and curious method of preservation, costly and therefore within the reach of but few, it was used only on fine fruits and foods that were the perquisites of the very wealthy, a panderer to unseasonable appetites that had the financial means for gratification. Then with improvements in methods of producing the wrappers (cans), and system in operating the cannery, came the ability to reduce prices till the better class (so called) of employers could indulge in these luxuries of canned fruit out of season. Parenthetically we would say that in our country oysters appear to have been among the very first things to which this new industry was adapted, and there is no surprise in this, for oysters were a luxury to the inland dweller that at all times would command a high price among a large though still limited class of people. But when the factories in the fruit lines found competition increasing they turned their attention to the vegetables and it required a preparation of a more careful kind to furnish these than it did of fine fruits, for the fruits were at first largely put up in heavy syrup and the heavier the syrup the easier it is to keep hermetically canned food. Besides this when fruit begins to swell, a reprocessing will generally restore its good qualities, except it suffers somewhat in appearance, according to its kind, but with vegetables they not only could not be put up with sugar, and were therefore entirely dependent on the processing for keeping qualities, but once they swelled, reprocessing did not restore them to good eatable condition, so they were a virtual loss. Nor could such good prices be obtained for them as for the fruits, yet it was hardly possible to pack them except at a good price, because of the trouble and risk involved. On the other hand they were cheaper in the green product than the fruit, and the absence of sugar saved some expense. All this time canned foods were luxuries for the well-to-do only.

But the apparently vast profits that seemed to exist between the cost of the green product and the same article in the cans naturally tempted numbers into the business, many of them farmers who saw easy fortunes in the new business. As the crop of fruit is always limited and that of vegetables can be increased almost at pleasure the latter naturally offered the greater opportunity and temptation, so vegetable canners multiplied.

Just as in early days the dissemination of the oyster depended on the introduction of the railroad and the demand grew with the dissemination, so the success of the canning business is mainly due to the contemporary development of improved appliances for this business, the production in nearly all cases of parties not in the canning business. Some of the most important and most radical and remarkable improvements have been accomplished by packers, and we are glad to say they nearly always reaped a good financial reward from them.

But the extent to which the business has been dependent on modern rapid invention is remarkable and there is no other single line of modern material progress that is more directly complimentary to our age and the American inventive genius than this.

No sooner was the field of demand apparently supplied than the excess of goods reduced prices, this increased the area of demand, this again increased the number of canneries; the increasing competition in connection with the greater volume of consumption led to the introduction of new methods and machinery, this reduced prices in turn to such figures as placed this food within the reach of the most humble, and a vast development of demand was the immediate result. From this sprung the extension of the business in the west until now nearly every section of the country has canneries sufficient for its supply. Even the far away North Pacific Coast States are developing numerous factories, the advantage of the region for fruit justifying the establishments.

With the growth of this great business has come the increase of orchards and all manner of fruit cultivation, for the fruit grower has the cannery as a guarantor of consumption and the winter for a market.

With the increase of fruit culture has arisen the regular railroad fruit trains to carry special or sectional fruits to sections not so blessed, so that it now matters not whether you live on "Greenland's Icy Mountains or Africa's burning strand" you can have the products of either at any time, and this was not possible until the growth of the canning business justified the horticulturists in increasing their orchards with the cannery as a guarantor against loss if fruit crops everywhere happened to be prolific in any one season.—The Trade (Baltimore.)

At the Head office, Toronto, a place is set apart where they can see all the latest newspapers and the latest issues of trade papers from all parts of the world, where they can do their correspondence or obtain any information. Parcels may also be directed to the Head office.

Two bulletins, prepared by H. H. Dean, B. S. A., professor of dairy husbandry in Ontario Agricultural College, have lately been published by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. They are No. 75 and No. 76 in the series of bulletins issued by that Department, and are bound in one pamphlet of fourteen pages. The first is on "Butter-making on the Farm in Summer," the second on "Butter-Fat in Milk and Cream." Storekeepers who are obliged to handle a considerable part of the butter made in their neighborhood might perhaps make this pamphlet the means of reforming one butter maker among their customers, if they would simply recommend that it be read. It is a very concise exposition of the methods followed at the Experimental Farm in Guelph and of the tests that are made to ascertain the butter-productiveness of milk. The milk of some cows is low in butter-fat, while that of others is rich. Hence the returns from equal quantities of feed consumed by two given cows may vary materially, and the one that gives the more milk may yield the less butter. This lesson in economy may be of service to the farmer, and the lesson in dairy practice will be of service to both him and the store-keeper. The country trader who has to take butter for his goods can afford to do a little missionary work to raise the standard of rural butter-making, as it is only by raising the standard that he can make the one-price plan render satisfactory results to himself. In bespeaking a careful reading of these bulletins he is saying a good word for the makers and two for himself. A note dropped to the Department of Agriculture of Ontario, Toronto, will secure the free delivery of the bulletins to anybody who sends it.

The ice men have now their turn, and if the weather backs them up for a few weeks with a steady temperature like that of last Saturday and Sunday, they will be much beholden to it. They had a winter hard enough to produce reasonably cheap stock, the cold having been sufficiently intense near home for the solidifying of a good 14 inches on all pure water within easy reach. The winter before, the icemen had to go into more hyperborean regions for stock, and hence had the expense of transportation over considerable distances to add to cost. The other extreme of temperature befriended them, however, in its due season, and the summer made up in the demand what the winter had lacked in the supply, so that the year 1891 was a fairly satisfactory one to the ice-dealers. Grocers, butchers and other vendors of perishable lines that can be preserved by cold storage are likely to be good customers this year, and consumers of course have equal motives for buying ice. The grocer cannot afford to do without it. It costs too much to make the attempt. Of course it is material that the ice should be from unpolluted water. Boards of health should urge upon local municipal bodies to adopt and enforce the rule that every stock of ice should bear a satisfactory certificate of the purity of its source and composition.

The general practice of business men warrants the inference that they regard competition as a greater hindrance to success in trade than small capital is. A may open a store in a place where there is no competition in his line, and with the drawback of small capital and without any circumstances specially favorable to collection will by care multiply his means and probably become a rich man. Let B start in another place where there is five times as much buying done as there is in A's district, and let B have capital ample to prevent any embarrassment on that score, but let him also have to compete with four other traders, and he will probably have difficulty in holding on to the capital he starts with. The volume of his sales may be greater than the volume of A's, but the volume of his profits will not be. It may happen that B has a capital which will enable him to do, not merely his due one-fifth of the business done in his line in his town, but also to extend out and do another fifth, or twice as much as A does. Even in that case it is unlikely his profit-returns will be equal to those realized by A, and A may be paying interest on credit accounts or on borrowed capital, owing to the slenderness of his means. We might even make A carry a little more weight in the longer time he has to give his customers and the greater proportion of loss through bad debts, and yet A might come out ahead, so great is his advantage in immunity from competition. In fact the more B prevails over his competitors, unless he prevails to the extent of extinguishing them, the less is likely to be his margin of profit. Business men to-day are proceeding upon the assumption that liberal capital is worth less than limited competition, and are rapidly getting rid of the capital as if it were so much cumbersome ballast in the way of their active manoeuvres to sink rival traders and bring to themselves the boon of restricted competition. It seems that money is considered to be well spent if it is used effectively to dislodge a competitor, and though it makes the victor poorer in money it makes him richer in opportunity, which after all will be used only to get the lost moneyback. B's capital is equal to 40 per cent. of A's, and A knows that B will fight him until all his capital goes. This knowledge does not deter A from undertaking the extinction of B, though A feels that 40 per cent. of his own capital must go the way that B's goes before B relinquishes his hold. It is simply in virtue of A's surplus means over B's that A beats B, but he hopes to recover all from the high prices that restricted competition will bring. Sometimes he does, but there are sometimes too many Richmonds in the field for one Richard to kill them all, and Richmond at last ends Richard.

Some discretion should be left to travellers in the matter of expenses. To require that a detailed statement, accounting for every cent spent on a trip, should be submitted to the scrutiny of the house is doubtful policy. It implies that a low view of the status of the traveller is taken, whereas the sort of service the traveller is engaged to do, and the extent to which he is thrown upon the guidance of his own judgment, justify the belief that the wholesale trade have rather a high conception of the nature of the traveller's work. He is no mere servant with a specified limited commission to carry out. If he were, it is probable the ways and means whereby he should proceed to do the thing directed to be done would be as clearly defined as the duties themselves. He is an executive agent, entrusted with some of the power of his principals. He has to decide for himself in as many cases as they have to decide for themselves or for their agents. His house must delegate some authority to him, in the same way as the country must delegate authority to its government, and—to bring the parallel a step further—while he must render an account of the money he spends and receives—as a ministry must—so, like a ministry, he should be allowed to put the details of some classes of expenses under the general entry of secret service outlay. There is no doubt the traveller has quite often to be very diplomatic in his methods.

He has to spend money for policy's sake. With this customer he puts in a holiday if he happens to strike the town on one, and that holiday costs him money. This man he must entertain in this way, that man in that. There is no need to indicate more closely some very necessary expenses that probably could not be made self-explanatory or justifiable on paper, which indeed being put on paper might wrongly be deemed more condemning than justifying. All this is said upon the supposition that the traveller has a creditable record that is well known to his firm. If he has, he ought to be allowed to lump his secret service expenses in one entry. The test of whether or not he is worthy of this confidence will be found in the returns from his work. If his business pays all it should pay, that ought to suffice.

The United States Sugar Trust is threatened with competition from an unlooked-for quarter. It is reported that a project is on foot to form a company of Cuban planters which shall go into sugar-refining very extensively in the United States. If this company can operate its scheme on a scale of sufficient magnitude its success will certainly be gratifying to the sugar producers of Cuba. These, quite as much as United States consumers, had to pay tribute to the Trust. As soon as the combination of all the refineries was effected the planters were at the mercy of the Trust. The chief market for their raw sugar must of course continue to be the United States. But instead of their being several buyers now in that market among whom free internal competition would be to the benefit of the growers, there is only one buyer. The Trust has absorbed all the individualities that formerly played and calculated against each other, and now the seller has to take its offer. A refusal cannot be risked, as there is no other buyer to come along with a better offer. Hence the planters of Cuba have not realized very good prices this year. If they can form a company strong enough to beard the Trust in its den, they will have at least provided for an alternative customer in the United States, and will have the satisfaction of feeling that they have turned the tables on the Trust. The Trust has virtually usurped rights of the sellers in taking from them all option as to the price they shall sell at. The sellers are now breaking into the sphere of the buyers. There is a possibility that the new Brooklyn refinery in course of erection to compete with the Trust will be controlled by the Cuban company.

Tariff arrangements play their part among the causes of economic change. The conclusion of the reciprocity treaty between the United States and Spain a few weeks ago was soon followed by the projection of an enterprise on the part of a group of capitalists in the former country for the manufacture of alcohol from low grade molasses. The fact that molasses from Cuba and Porto Rico now comes free of duty into the United States determined the starting of this industry, which promises to be run on a huge scale, the revenue to the Government from the excise collected on the alcohol they will produce being estimated at $10,000 per day. Already some large shipments of low grade molasses have been made in tank steamers from Havana to New Haven, where large works are being prepared for the manufacture of alcohol from this raw material. A large plant is said to be going up in Blissville, L. I. This new application of molasses should make away with a great part of the low grade stuff that has been such a drawback to good prices for really good molasses. We in this country are less concerned than we were in seeing the lowest grades disposed of without loss on good molasses, as the recent addition to the duty keeps very poor stuff out. But the change will be almost certain to give a stronger tone to the molasses market. It is also represented that alcohol can be more cheaply produced from molasses.

The sale of syrup has fallen off remarkably the last two years. This decline in the volume of business has been coincident with an even more marked decline in the price, and is therefore rather anomalous. The lowering of the price is always the surest way to increase consumption, and the reduction of consumption is usually only a simple matter of adding a little more to the price. But it must be remembered that the same cause which made syrup cheap also cheapened and increased the production of its most powerful rival in consumers' favor, that is, canned fruit. We have cheap syrup because we have cheap sugar, and the greatest diminution in the price of sugar has been brought about by the removal of the duty on raw. The huge demand for granulated sugar called for a huge production, an incidental of which is syrup. But the cheapness of sugar increased enormously the production of canned fruit, both by domestic and factory process. This canned fruit is not so direct a product of sugar as syrup is, but its abundance is as directly an effect of cheap sugar as the abundance of syrup is. It is more popular, it therefore displaces a great quantity of syrup, and hence is explained the seeming paradox of low prices reducing consumption.

THE BRITISH MARKET FOR CANNED GOODS.

That part of Commercial Bulletin No. 4 which relates to eggs was discussed in a former issue of THE GROCER. The information afforded by the same Bulletin as a basis for an export trade in canned goods is equally deserving of attention and is considered in this article. Canned beef to retail at 4d. would find a capacious market in Britain, owing to the enormous consumption of that staple food by the poorer laboring classes. Animals that would not bring high prices if exported in the live state might be made to yield a better profit if converted into canned meat here and shipped to England. Butter in tins is in wide demand in England, and bulk butter is put into tin packages and exported thence to India, China and other countries of the East. Our creameries should have a share in the supply of this. In canned fruits, apples appear to have the best prospect, so far. To produce them too there need be no diminution of the stock of whole fruit that would be shipped to England, for the raw material of canned apples is not the class of stock that ships well in the hard state. By working up a market for canned apples we would therefore be supplementing our apple exports, for we should be adding to the quantities of hard fruit we already send, a certain quantity of fruit that, owing to its softness, cannot be shipped in the natural state. There are fall apples that do not keep well in the natural state, which, taken at their best, make good material for canning. In the same way we should be able to sell dried and evaporated apples with the result of increasing our total apple export. Canned peaches and pears are represented likewise to be in good request. The sale of canned tomatoes and of catsup and tomato sauce ought also, according to the Bulletin, to be large. Shippers are cautioned to remember that their goods must be of acceptable quality.

From Mr. Just's memorandum, which is added to the High Commissioner's report, the following extracts are taken:

Canadian canned goods are gradually working their way to the front, and in some cases are preferred to other competing products of the same class, and command higher prices. Still there is room for improvement, and the requirements of the market must steadily be borne in mind if a permanent and expanding outlet is to be secured on this side for Canadian varieties at remunerative prices.

In canned vegetables, tomatoes especially have been in fair demand. The latest prices are:—Sundry American brands No. 3, new, 4s. 3d.; French 4s. 6d.; French Talls, 5s. to 5s. 6d. per dozen. In this article Canadian brands, although not much known, have fetched better prices than the American, the quality of the tomato being preferred to the American packing, but they have been almost unobtainable. I have good reasons for believing that in this direction there is a promising opening for Canadian enterprise. Canned peas and beans are not much in demand, the continent being able so far to beat the American and Canadian article, both in colour and price. In this connection also the competition of fresh vegetables, sorely obtainable at all seasons of the year in this country, has to be taken into consideration.

Evaporated vegetables, for which there is a good export trade to mining countries with a small rainfall like Australia, the Cape, &c., are in good demand. The Canadian product, however, while superior in quality for domestic use, is at present much too high in price to compete successfully with the French, Russian and other brands in the market. Its appearance also is not so attractive, though the Imperial naval and military authorities find it well adapted for their purposes, and are extending its use.

With regard to canned fruits, the consumption increases with great steadiness. An interesting feature in this trade is the putting up of apples in large tins of 6½ lbs. This package, known as the "Gallon Apple," comes at present mainly from the districts south of Lake Ontario, and is rapidly becoming a great favourite for domestic use, especially in poor fruit years, as when cooked, they are not to be distinguished from the fresh article. The reputation of the Canadian apples is now so assured in this country that a more vigorous participation of Canadians in the trade is desired, and should be attended with satisfactory results. The wholesale prices range from 10s. to 11s. 6d. per dozen cans, the Canadian variety commanding generally 1s. per dozen more than the American.

CANADIAN TOBACCO.

The growers and manufacturers of Canadian tobacco are not satisfied with the present differential duty of 20c. a pound against foreign tobacco. In the memorial that is to be submitted to the Governor-General-in-Council, of which the burden is given on another page, they set forth the reasons on which they base their plea for additional discrimination in their favor. These do not appear to counterbalance the objections that their proposals at once suggest. Even if they made out a better case than they do in behalf of the producers of native tobacco, fault might be found with their plea that it is entirely on the wrong ground to convince the public that the changes proposed should be made. There are many lines of production where the argument based on protection would be deemed conclusive by a majority of the consumers, but tobacco is not one of these. Canadian tobacco has enjoyed protection for over 30 years, and has now an advantage of 20c. a pound in its favor, yet it has been unable to attain to such a degree of excellence as to win the preference over foreign leaf tobacco. It is not even acceptable as a substitute, for, during the American war, when it was almost impossible to get Virginia leaf there was a great shrinkage in the demand for tobacco, though the price was away down to 7 and 8c. a pound and Canadian leaf tobacco was plentiful. The claim that we have the best soil does not appear to be borne out by the quality of the leaf we raise. Culture cannot do so much to fit the soil as the memorialists claim, since tobacco exhausts the soil rapidly, and therefore new ground has to be taken from time to time.

We have not outlived the conditions which required that the duty on foreign leaf should be collected as an excise instead of as a customs duty. That is a protection to the consumer against fraud, called for as much to-day as at any time. Every smoker or chewer can now get good tobacco, but if the internal revenue system of collecting the duty were exchanged for its collection at ports of entry, what guarantee would the consumer have that he could get good tobacco, without paying for it such prices as the Canadian manufacturer, guarded by the stiff duties proposed in this memorial, would be pleased to charge? The fraud would consist in the mixing of inferior native leaf with imported leaf. This would enable the maker to realize the full benefit of the protection, and would condemn consumers to use a tobacco of at least mediocre quality. The revenue would suffer. The memorialists claim that they are providing for this by making the duty on foreign leaf 35c. instead of 25c. or 10c. higher. This they urge will offset the shrinkage in the returns in internal revenue that will follow their proposed abolition of the excise on Canada leaf. That would scarcely be in accordance with the main and professed object of the petition, which is to foster the production of domestic tobacco. It would be hard to realize that object and at the same time maintain the revenue from foreign leaf tobacco, as it can only be as imports of the latter decline that the consumption of native leaf tobacco can increase. The concession of the prayer of the memorialists would be at the expense of the national revenue and of consumers. The price would determine what grade would be the staple, as quality under the proposed conditions would be too costly a basis of selection, though it is now the basis. And the price most popular would be that charged for a mongrel tobacco.

Consumers are willing to pay a good price to get good tobacco, as the consumption of tobacco shows. They make up about $2,000,000 of the revenue, which they pay on the tobacco they consume. Their wants should therefore have some consideration and their views will be apt to hold, as they pay better than the plan proposed in the memorial could be made to pay.

A WARNING TO GROCERS.

EDITOR CANADIAN GROCER.

SIR.—Allow me through your valuable paper to make a suggestion to grocers in the matter of this growing demand for packet teas before it is too late, and the grocer finds himself high on the rocks selling sugar and soap whilst other trades are reaping the benefit of the tea trade. Last week I was approached by a big gun on Front St., who by the way is handling a packet tea to retail at 35c. per pound. In the first place I was very much persuaded to take it, which I refused to do, secondly I was then given the option of having it put in on approbation. Upon declining to entertain it at all I was insultingly told that it would be put in at every available fruit and drug store in my locality. Now, Sir, we see what is before us, now is our time to act, push our own teas and drop the packet teas before it is too late. I for one intend to pursue that course and push my own blends, for, if not otherwise checked, taverns and saloons will be selling packet teas as in England.

THE PRICE OF SUGAR.

The present state of the sugar business with the wholesale trade of this Province, and of Montreal, is fast approaching a climax, and causing the more thoughtful to ask where it is going to end. To-day the jobbers are customarily selling sugars at cost, and it requires very little ingenuity on the part of retailers to buy goods at even under present current prices at the refineries. That this is not only not business, but absurd, anyone of average intelligence will plainly see. That it will, if continued, ultimately end in disaster is also transparent, and that it is seriously injuring everyone in the wholesale trade is almost equally certain, though many are unwilling to acknowledge the latter fact, or even think it themselves. Therein lies the trouble. Many are continuing the present slaughtering with the idea of gaining trade in other lines, some with a view to advertising themselves amongst the retail traders, others do it in the spirit of retaliation, while there are those who are actuated by the more sinister motive of closing out weaker competitors. Whatever the motive, whatever the pretence, such action is upbusinesslike and futile. And while the cutting of prices may cause discomfiture to competitors, at the same time it is quite possibly injuring the parties themselves just as severely. Charles Kinsley's celebrated remark seems to fit the case exactly when he said: "And then they don't thrive. They can't thrive. * * * They begin by trying to oust each other, and eat each other up; and while they're eating up their neighbors, their neighbors eat up them; and so they all come to ruin together."

The idea of men selling one-third of their yearly turnover at cost, and even at under cost, would appear to any outsider as beyond belief. And yet men priding themselves upon their business ability and capacity are to be found in the wholesale grocery trade of Ontario doing this commonly at the present time. And what are they gaining? A reputation for foolishness. Are laying up aggravation and worry, and making for unsatisfactory balance sheets at the end of the year.

THE EVANGELINE OF NOVA SCOTIA.

Among the enterprising manufacturing firms of this fertile valley none are more deserving of mention to the large number of THE CANADIAN GROCER'S subscribers than The Forest Canning Company, Halifax, N. S. When it is stated that the personality of this concern is the same as that of the world-renowned lobster packers, Forest & Co., no better guarantee of stability, enterprise and worth is needed to recommend their goods. Their total pack is put up under their personal supervision. The selection of a site for their factory at Kingston station, N. S., shows the good judgment of the firm, as the locality is one of the healthiest and most productive in the Province. It abounds in good pasture and spring water, the stock is all of the highest grade and thorough bred, making it easy to have the richest milk as well as the healthiest food that can be produced in any country. The company's products are condensed milk and coffee, preserved fruits and vegetables. The firm have not spared either labor or money in erecting suitable buildings, and a plant of machinery of the very latest invention for their extensive works. Their new improved milk condenser gives the greatest satisfaction. A word to the grocer will not be out of place. There is certainly a great amount of responsibility on the tradesman who handles this class of goods. As condensed milk is coming more into general use year after year, mothers in many cases depend on pure condensed milk as food for their infants, it being less liable to engender that terrible scourge, cholera infantum, which is so fatal to infancy. Every grocer therefore should try to obtain the best and purest at whatever cost, and flatly refuse to handle any article that has for its recommendation "cheapness." Grocers are asked to guarantee the Jersey Brand in the name of the Forest Canning Company.

The canned fruits and vegetables packed by this company will rank A 1 with the best in the world, the fruits of the Annapolis valley being renowned for their juice and flavor, and the vegetables for their tender wholesome growth, the climate of the valley being very suitable for maturing all kinds of fruit and vegetables.

THE SOUTHERN OPOSSUM.

In days gone by the southern section of the Union was known far and wide for hospitable people, and it has been said that one might travel for a week over the hills and valleys of that section without having to spend a dollar for lodging; the traveller having to stop at the farmers' homes, as there were few public lodging houses at that period. One of the delicacies the southern people delighted to set before their visitors was opossum meat with sweet potato dressing, and it is said to be one of the richest and most delicious edibles that can be had in the southland. THE GROCER is forcibly reminded of the "possum and taters" by receiving an invitation to attend an old time 'Possum Supper and Banquet, to be given by the Southern Department at the Buffalo Exposition on the afternoon of August 17th complimentary to the representatives of the Northern press and Railroads. There will be present a number of prominent Southern gentlemen, and no doubt the occasion will be pleasantly remembered by those fortunate fellows who are included in the invitations sent out by Hon. J. T. Patrick, Secretary of the Southern Inter-State Immigration Bureau, Raleigh, N. C.

A NEW FIRM OF PORK PACKERS.

The Canada Gazette announces that James Park, of Toronto; Charles Blackwell, of Lindsay; Andrew Park, Toronto; Susan Blackwell, of Lindsay; Margaret Thompson Park, of Toronto; and Thomas Blackwell, of Lindsay, are seeking incorporation as Park, Blackwell & Co., limited, to engage in pork packing in Toronto. The capital stock is placed at $50,000.

The composition of the new company is a guarantee that it will do a first-class trade. James Park has been identified with the pork packing and provision business for a quarter of a century. He enjoys the good opinion of his customers throughout the country. Chas. Blackwell, of Lindsay, infuses new blood into this business. He is a young man of about thirty years of age, and has had a successful career as a grocer. He is a careful, shrewd business man, and will no doubt make his mark in the provision trade in this city. The goods produced by the firm of Jas. Park & Son are well known in the markets of the Dominion of Canada, and with increased capital the new firm should be a success.

A recent decision of the customs department rates potted meats at 3c. per lb. instead of 20 per cent. as formerly, and soups are now rated as extract of beef at 25 per cent.

FOR THE PROTECTION OF NATIVE TOBACCO.

Below is reprinted all but the preamble of a memorial that has recently been circulated in the east, and which is to be presented to the Governor-General-in-Council in the interest of growers of native tobacco. It is said that a very large number of signatures of influential merchants and manufacturers have been obtained. It prays:

That, for instance, the consumption of tobacco, which grows from year to year to immense proportions, goes nearly almost exclusively to the making of the fortunes of foreign farmers, when it is a well known fact that our soil is well adapted for the production of the first quality of tobacco;

That the inability of the Canadian farmers to compete with other and remote parts of the world is due entirely to our fiscal legislation, which practically puts foreign producers, already skilled in this branch of agriculture, on the same footing as our people, foreign leaf tobacco entering in the Customs free of duty, whilst Canadian tobacco is subjected to the same excise duties, if mixed with the imported leaf;

That your petitioners beg to suggest that the system of excise duties, which might have been the only possible system years ago, when the tobacco industry was in its infancy, is fast being driven to the class of antiquated notions, surrounded as it is with a complicated, useless and expensive machinery, involving too much technicality and red tape;

That there is no reason why tobacco should not be treated as all other merchandise which pays duty at the Customs;

That the collection of duties in the usual manner and by the ordinary staff of the Department of Customs would relieve the public treasury of an enormous expenditure, as the manufacture of tobacco would then be left as free as all other industries, and all the staff and special excise officers now paid for by the tobacco department, all the costs of stamps going around the packages of cigars, cigarettes and tobacco, all the different sets of books the factories are supplied with, all the branch offices in every town and city would be dispensed with, which means a saving to the Government of hundreds of thousands of dollars per annum;

That they humbly suggest that a Customs duty of, say, 35 cents per lb., should be imposed on all raw leaf tobacco brought into this country, to replace the present duty collected through excise, which is now 25 cents per lb.;

That an additional duty of about 35 cents per lb. should, of course, also be imposed on imported manufactured tobacco, or partly manufactured tobacco, and a duty of $4.60 per lb. and 25 per cent. ad valorem should be imposed on all imported cigars, cigarettes, etc.;

That the apparent increase from 25 to 35 cents is to meet the deficit that may occur in the revenue by the natural increased production of Canadian tobacco;

That such a change in our fiscal legislation would leave our farmer free to sell his own tobacco according to its merits, without any official hindrances;

That this would create an industry which the lack of encouragement has prevented coming into existence till now, inasmuch as our tobacco producers had to compete without protection against the whole world;

That the objections which persons non-experienced in the trade will raise, that a higher customs duty will be a premium to contraband, is answered by the statement that tobacco smuggled from the United States into Canada can only be home-produced tobacco, which, in the States, bears a nominal duty of 6 cents a pound of excise duty, as against 25 cents here, and not foreign tobacco, which carries an enormous customs duty of $2.75 in the same cases; so that if the Canadian tobacco leaf becomes free of excise duty the tide of contraband will have to stop or run the other side;

That to answer another objection raised that heavy customs duties and freedom of excise will proscribe the better class of tobacco and encourage the production of a cheap and injurious article under the false guise and name of foreign tobacco, your petitioners beg to state, that the competition of the manufacturers and the knowing taste of the consumers will, then as now, set matters right in that respect, and for a long while, as long as it will take to improve and perfect the cultivation of Canadian tobacco, the costly luxury of the best foreign tobacco (cheap foreign tobacco is prohibited by the heavy customs duty) will be paid by wealthy amateur smokers,—on the other hand the fear of a cheap home-produced tobacco disappears with the obvious answer that the Canadian leaf is used duty free and harmlessly by an immense and most healthy population;

That there is no intention of suggesting to the Government an abandonment of its control over an industrial branch which all foreign governments have jealously regulated; and that a continued license of, say $200 equal to what is actually in existence, viz., $75 for cigars, $75 for plug and cut tobacco, $50 for Canadian tobacco, should be maintained at the option of the Government;

And your petitioners well knowing with what zeal and earnestness your attention is constantly fixed on every means tending to develop the resources of this new country, hope Your Excellency will give his care to these our representations and views.

The London Advertiser, of Saturday, had a page devoted to that city's grocery trade. The centre-piece of the whole was the programme of the local association's pic-nic held on Wednesday last. The remainder of the page was taken up with the advertisements of leading wholesale and retail branches of the trade, and a good hearty send-off for the pic-nic itself.

HAMILTON RETAIL GROCERS AT THE FALLS.

"Come along with us and we will make you happy."

There must have been 3,000 grocers and their friends who accepted the above invitation and attended The Hamilton Retail Grocers' Association's third annual picnic at Queen Victoria Park, Niagara Falls, on Wednesday, the 20th inst. It was one of the best excursions that ever left that city, and was brought to a close without a single hitch or accident. The grocers closed their stores on Tuesday night and kept them closed until Thursday morning. It was their holiday; they earned it, and they had it. Three trains loaded with passengers, whose baskets were loaded with good things carried the jolly folks to the grounds, and the 13th Battalion band furnished music. The Committee had a bountiful supply of hot tea, coffee and milk, which was given free to every person. Walter Baker & Co., of Boston, Mass., filled many large jugs with their Breakfast Cocoa for the guests, and must have contributed a large number of gallons of that goodly drink. The Toronto Biscuit and Confectionery Co. were well represented, two of the firm—Geo. W. Booth and H. C. Fortier—with their Hamilton representative, Cyrus King, were on the grounds all day. This enterprising concern sent over from Toronto on the early boat a handsome tent, two of their prettiest young ladies and a large supply of their justly celebrated biscuits. The latter were given away to all who could crowd near the tent, the only trouble being the wares did not hold out long enough. The demand was greater than the supply, but they promise to do better in bers of the association and their families were likewise favorites in the demand. The badge was made of white silk and has a Dominion flag in the three colors upon it, and the following—"Hamilton R. G. A. Souvenir of THE CANADIAN GROCER, Toronto." Five hundred of these were pinned on by this paper's representative who accepted the Grocers' kind invitation to be with them. The day was perfect, and every one took in the sights of Canada's national park, a number crossed over to the United States side and there was no point of interest neglected. The committee deserve just credit for the grand success they made of the picnic. They all worked as grocers know how to work, and were ever ready to make any additional labor that would tend to make the day more pleasant for their guests. The return train arrived home in good time, and all claimed they had spent one of the most enjoyable days of their lives. The Hamilton retail grocers may well be proud of their venture. Their friends will only be too delighted to accept of such a treat in the near future.

SENSIBLE SUGGESTIONS TO NEW GROCERS.

The retail grocery business is a peculiar one, more so than any other I know of, from the fact that nearly every man who has a dollar to spare, or who fails in any other business, thinks he can run it successfully; in reality, it is the most difficult in the country to succeed in because the profits in many articles are so small and there are so many perishable goods to be handled. The impression prevails that a man has nothing to do but to go to some wholesale grocer, buy a stock of groceries, without any knowledge of their quality, fit up a store and the customers will come and he will coin money. If this mistake is discovered in time, and the man has any grit in him, he begins to understand that in order to succeed he must know the business. This means hard work, long hours, close study, and, for a while, very poor pay. In order to succeed, he must place some object before him and try to attain it. For instance, if he has started in a town or city where there are some good stores, he must look around, pick out one of the best, and say to himself, "How has that man got his store in the condition it is in?" Get him thinking this way, and in a short time he not only gets his store in as good condition as the one he chose for his model, but he does better, he makes improvements suggested by either the wants of his trade or his own ambition, inspired by his first failure. He does not do it without work. He must study the qualities of the various goods he trades in, learn their history and make himself familiar with their qualities in order to gain the confidence of his customers, for in this lies the secret of success.

Never sell them goods that you can not recommend, and, if a mistake is made by your men or yourself, rectify it at once. Don't let the customer see that any pecuniary consideration stands in the way of making the mistake good, either in weight or quality.

Let the parties with whom you trade see that you know the quality of the goods you want, that you are a judge of them, and they will not try to palm off inferior goods on you. Pay all your bills promptly, getting all the discounts off.—L. J. Callahan, in Michigan Tradesman.

The E. B. Eddy Co. report business satisfactory. Their branches at Montreal and Toronto and their agents and travellers from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast are crowding the house at Hull with impatient orders. Since responsible branches have been opened at Montreal and Toronto under direct control from headquarters at Hull, and since paper has been added to the Company's other lines of manufacture, there has been an immense increase in business, as the wholesale trade and the jobbers in nearly every line of business are now purchasers from the Company direct. The rapidity with which the paper branch of the business has developed is beyond the most sanguine expectations of that most sanguine of men, Mr. Eddy. Their paper mills with three machines, already the largest in Canada, are to be supplemented with a 96 machine, which is expected to be in operation by October of this year. This Company's matches, woodenware, indurated fibreware and washboards are now sold by every grocer and general storekeeper in Canada, and so now are their manillas, tea, wrapping and toilet papers. The trade of Toronto and West are requested to correspond with the Toronto branch, 29 Front street west, as much as possible, and thus receive immediate attention.

[Scene grocery store. Proprietor working at books. Enter city traveller.]

C. T.—Good morning, Mr. T.

Grocer.—Hello! How are you this morning?

C. T.—Well, taking all things into consideration I can't complain. I might be worse and then again I might be better.

Mr. P.—Well, it is no use complaining so long as a fellow has his health and gets three square meals a day and a good bed to lie on. I don't see what we are all worrying about. We can't take any of it with us, and we don't know whether we might be alive to-morrow or not, so what is the use of us eating ourselves? The world owes us all a living, and I guess we'll get it. I often think that it is a want of proper faith on our part to worry so much.

C. T.—I don't think there is the slightest doubt of that, sir. Proper faith will remove mountains, but I am sorry to say too few of us have got it. We get so wrapt up in our little selves that we lose sight of our dependence. I venture to say that not twenty men out of every hundred could tell you at night what color the sky was in the morning. They are so wrapt up in things down here that they never think to look up. If they would look up more and down less they would have happier hearts and more brilliant minds. I feel that if the grocers had the proper faith we would not have the trouble with the Wednesday afternoon half holiday that we have. How do you feel on the half holiday question, Mr. P.?

Mr. P.—Well I would go in for it. I think it is a good thing and don't see why it should not be carried out, but I don't think you will ever get it to work on this street.

C. T.—Why, how is that?

Mr. P.—Well you see, my neighbor Mr. H. over on the opposite side of the street is hard to bring to close at nine or ten, let alone a whole afternoon. I truly believe that he would keep open on Sunday if the law would let him. He is the worst man you ever saw. You can't get him to do anything.

C. T.—He must be a pretty tough case then.

Mr. P.—Yes he is.

C. T.—Well, I have an agreement here, and if you will sign it I will see if I can't handle him. I will do my best to get him to sign it.

Mr. P.—All right, I'll sign it, but I don't think it will do any good. I know him so well.

C. T.—Well we will see.

[Grocer, signs it.]

C. T.—Thank you. Now I will see what I can do with him. Good day.

[Traveller crosses to opposite store. Enters store.]

C. T.—Good morning, Mr. H. This a fine large morning.

Mr. H.—A what?

C. T.—A large morning.

Grocer.—Well, you get your share of it, don't you?

C. T.—Oh, yes. It is so large we all get a share of it.

Grocer.—That's good. He, He! Very good. He, He! It is a large day and no mistake.

C. T.—Well, how is business, Mr. H.?

Mr. H.—Business! He, He! There is no business. If it keeps like this very long we will soon have to bust up and pay our creditors thirty or forty cents on the dollar, the same as M. did up the street. He, He! I tell you, there is no use for an honest man trying to get along now. The honest man who struggles hard to pay his creditors a hundred cents on the dollar is not in it now. Why, there is M. up the street. He has been cutting and slashing things so terribly that the business men for hundreds of yards around him could not exist. He was selling lots of things at less than I could buy them, and less than I know and could prove that he bought them, and yet the wholesale men would push goods on to him and give him all the credit he wanted, knowing this and backing him up so that he could cut our throats who are doing a legitimate business and paying a hundred cents on the dollar. It looks to me as if the wholesale houses here want to run the retail trade as well as the wholesale. I don't see what other object they can have in view when they back up a man like that. But a good many of them have got bitten lately, and they deserve it. I hope it will open some of their eyes. I heard it rumored that one wholesale man had about sixty thousand dollar's worth of another man's floating around, and I heard that another wholesale firm had to go security for the rent of certain retail grocers who have failed and compromised, before the landlord would let them continue. The wholesale men between their supply stores and smart Alecks have got business down to a very unhealthy state. In fact some grocers call it rotten. It seems a kind of a hard name, but that is about the proper term to use. How can a man who meets his obligations and pays a hundred cents on the dollar compete with a man who only pays thirty or fifty cents? It is ridiculous to expect it. The worst of it is, the very men who are backing up these men so that they can cut our throats, have the dog gone cheek to come and ask us for an order. It's kicked out they ought to be. Why, an honest man would not have the cheek to ask the amount of credit that these supported smart Alecks and splurts do without being able to see their way clear to pay their bill when it comes due.

C. T.—Yes, sir. You are right. There is too much of this sort of thing going on. In fact the wholesale houses of to-day are doing nothing more or less than educating the retailers to be rogues, and as long as they will sell to men of that description, men whose hobby or craze is to sell things at cost and under cost, it will never be any different. Of course I have been told that they add on a percentage to make up for losses, so that you and every honest grocer are paying to help keep up these pests. If it was not for that they could never stand it. Now, I tell you what I would suggest as a cure for such houses. Let every grocer around the neighborhood of the one who is cutting get their goods from the same house, cut like blazes, and smash up too. Perhaps that would bring them to their senses. Of course their object in keeping a supply store is to run every other grocer out. That being so, you might as well let them pay for their trouble. It's them that should do so, not you. If they were not blind they would see that they are only cutting their own throats. If there was only a little more of this sharp practice done this cutting would soon cease, and through the wholesaler too. Of course the extra they make on the straight dealing grocer goes to make up the loss on the other. Quite a number of these smart splurts don't give proper weight, and instead of giving bargains rob the public. Here is a sample. Flour, by the bag, $2.60; by the stone (I don't know whether they call that 12½ or 14 lbs.), 50c., a difference of 90c. on the bag. Here's another: Finest sardines, 7c. a tin. Finest sardines cost 12c.

The Retail Grocers' Association should allow so much money to be spent for space in the papers to show up all such frauds, for they are nothing else inwardly and outwardly. Barnum said that the public liked to be gulled. I think the wholesale men like to be gulled too, for they are often caught by the unconscientious splurt who leaves him in the soup. They are not satisfied with the steady going, honest grocer. They want something exciting, something that will wake them up, and they get it by being taught a practical lesson. They have no use for a plain, matter of fact, conscientious man. He is too dry.

A commercial traveller's card that lately came under our notice has a feature that is deserving of general imitation. On the one face is the conventional contents, the name of the traveller and the name of his house, its city and an indication of the wares it deals in. But the back of the card has the distinguishing novelty. There a skeleton form is left to be filled in with the following memoranda: where the patterns or samples are, the hour of the appointment between the traveller and the merchant, the date. This facilitates and regulates business.

Before the Hamilton Markets, Fire and Police Committee, Chairman Kenrick the other evening read a long opinion from Solicitor MacKelcan on the right of tea pedlars and others in similar business, to carry on their trade without taking out a license. The effect of it was that so long as the pedlar carried his stock in Hamilton, no license was needed. The opinion was asked for to settle a question raised by H. H. Laing, and the committee decided that no action was required of it. In the meantime H. H. Laing had come in, and the question of imposing a license fee on tea pedlars and similar trades was taken up again. Mr. Laing read statistics from other cities to show the practice that obtains in Toronto, London and Montreal, and urged that a like large revenue ought to be secured in Hamilton. The by-law was produced and read to him, showing that all classes of pedlars upon whom a license can be imposed are required to pay. The subject was allowed to drop, on the understanding that Chairman Kenrick will look into it further.

The salt combine survive, at least until the end of the year. Friday last was the day on which the differences between the Canada Salt Association and Ontario People's Salt Company were to have been ventilated at Osgoode hall, but by consent judgment was allowed to go for the plaintiffs. It has been agreed by the counsel of the two corporations that the Ontario company cannot apply the Combines Bill to the trust, the points at issue having been determined in the case of Ontario Salt company against the Merchants' Salt Company. The defendants are therefore, bound by the agreement and cannot escape until its expiry at the end of this year.

THE CAPABLE MAN IS THE EXCEPTION.

It is said that the financial agent of a great insurance company, in a city of two hundred and twenty-five thousand, recently died. The manager of that company went to that city to appoint a successor. Out of thirty applicants for the position not more than two could be regarded as eligible. The capable man in any walk of life is rare. The capable boy, if he is allowed to follow, to some extent, the bent of his "inclinations, is not so rare. It may be a difficult matter, sometimes, to get a good office boy, or a boy to run an elevator or any particular position you may desire to fill. However, if you take the same boy who fails in any of these places and ask him what he has thought he would rather adopt for a life work, and then hire him for the position of his choice, ascertaining his natural tendencies and inherited abilities, the chances are he will prove perfectly satisfactory.

The trade in summer fabrics is about over, the sorting trade has continued more active and longer than usual, showing that retailers have been making up for the loss of the early summer trade. The orders for fall delivery are still coming in, and show an enormous advance over last year. Some houses report an advance of as much as twenty-five per cent in the volume of fall and winter orders. Everybody is preparing for a brisk fall and winter season, and every indication points out that they will not be disappointed.

Tinsels and fringes are not so strong in public favor as in former seasons.

The ruching effect is strongly in favor for dress trimmings, it is shown in narrow edgings with fluffy effect such as feather, mohair and silk.

There has been a slight falling off in the house trade during the past week, but the houses are very busy receiving and shipping.

Collections are much better than at this season last year, money being much more plentiful, and renewals less frequent.

NOTES.

W. R. Brock & Co. are showing a nobby line of very pretty silk and wool vestings for summer wear, and all wool vestings for the winter trade. These are splendid sixteen ounce goods and shown in light and dark colors. This line forms the latest thing in vestings and is well worthy of attention. They are showing some superfine French trouserings in stripes, cords, diagonals and checks, which are perhaps the most expensive trouserings sold on the Canadian market, but the value is good. They have some beautiful winter suitings, such as finished worsted in basket weaves, and real Harris tweeds. These goods are shown in quite extensive ranges as regards color and quality.

Gordon Mackay & Co. have just received a shipment of ladies' jersey jackets in new shapes and latest styles. These are of extra good value. They have also received, during the past week, several large shipments in Irish, Scotch, and English tweeds in the new colors, such as fawns, drabs, and brown mixes. No doubt there will be an extra strong demand for these imported goods for the coming season.

Wylé, Grasset and Darling are showing good value in light and dark grey flannels and in blue Campbellford flannels; Also in flannelettes in cream and grey grounds and in fancy mixtures. They have some very pretty things in curls and beavers for ladies' cloaks, these two lines will undoubtedly be the leading lines in winter cloakings. They report a strong demand for Hygiene, wollen ribbed vests. These goods are also shown in cotton and mixtures. The wollen garments have drawers to match, thus giving an additional impetus to their sale, over last season. This house has also a very nice range of narrow gimps.

Sampson, Kennedy & Co. are showing a very varied line of ruching trimmings in all the different effects such as mohair, feather and silk. They have just opened up about two hundred bales of berlin wools and fingering yarns, and are busy filling order for these. In dress goods, they are showing a very fine range in serges, in navy, black and fancy and in estimanes. Their costume tweeds contain many attractive patterns. They have a special line of moire ribbons, in which they claim to be offering especial value. Their lines of black silk and cream laces, and veilings are very complete.

John Macdonald & Co. have just opened up a shipment of their well-known purple-edged, black, gros grain silk, and are now filling their back orders for this specialty. They have also received a fresh shipment of black satin luxors in which they always show good value. Some very nice things in German papier mache novelties have been received this week. Among them are crumb-trays and brushes, calenders, napkin rings, jewel boxes, handkerchief and glove boxes, brackets, tables, table mats, jars, etc. The designs and decorations are really of a most artistic nature and are sold at lower prices than their appearance would indicate. They are selling two lines of summer corsets which have met with considerable favor they are the Q. C. and M. C. both famous for their lightness. They have just opened up a large Austrian shipment of jet buttons. These are shown in sets of buttons $4\frac{1}{2}$ to 12 lines, also in barrel shaped jets, which are finding a strong demand. Large horn buttons made in mixtures to match the new tweed-effect dress goods, are having a good market. Their shirtings are still selling at the old prices, and a large shipment of various qualities has been received which will be sent out at former prices.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence have a beautiful line of gimps made with a tweed mixture to match the tweed dress goods, which are now being shown so much and which are preferred by buyers, to the plain-dyed goods. These trimmings are accompanied by buttons in tweed effects, so that the dress goods, the trimming, and the buttons may all be found to match in the house of this enterprising firm, for this introduction is truly an enterprising movement. They report a large demand for sourahs and silks in various light colored grounds with spots. Their Japanese silk in $22\frac{1}{2}$ and 27 inch goods, in light shades, is selling well.

McMaster & Co. are showing some novelties in dress goods, including Canadian, Scotch and other foreign tweed effects. Their range of French and domestic box-cloths is quite extensive, as is also that of pongees and sourahs, which they show in the latest shades. Their stock of velvets and velveteens is complete. In ladies' scarfs they are showing special value in whites, creams, and shot effects. Several cases of men's neckwear have just been opened. In English and Canadian braces they are offering some plums.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, July 28, 1892.
GROCERIES.

Throughout July, trade has been pretty much of the same general type, and the last week of it does not redeem the month from the character of dulness which it won at the outset. The tone of trade is as low as ever. Sales are made, perhaps fully up to the average for midsummer, but they yield little or no profit to the sellers. Buyers are plainly not tempted to venture far beyond their reach. They realize that nobody on the buying side has an advantage, and that nobody on the selling price gives one, advantages being so common that they have ceased to be concessions. Sugar engrosses the chief attention and is no more remunerative than ever. Canned goods are moving out at the same steady rate as they have done for weeks past, and prices do not represent a big profit to the jobber. Fruits are dull and generally low-priced.

COFFEE.

Coffee is one of the lines that are now in fair demand. Harvest time appears to rouse the interest of buyers, the consumption of common grades being then considerable. The primary markets and main centres of distribution have not undergone any change in the ideas that rule the coffee trade. Prices are steady on spot at last week's quotations. Rio coffee is 17 to 21c., Porto Rico is 23 to 25c., Padang 26 to 28c., Mocha 28 to 32c., Java 30 to 35c.

DRIED FRUIT.

The amount of business now done in dried fruits is exceedingly limited. A few boxes of Valencia raisins are called for in occasional orders, but the total output of them is comparatively small. The price going for the bulk of the off-stalk handled or held is 4 to 4½c. Currants are slightly firmer than they were at 4¾c. upwards, but a diminishing proportion of stock is obtainable at that figure. The proportion of low grade stock is lower than it was, and reports of the coming crop favor firmness. Prunes are still to be had from 5¾ to 6c. in cases. Dates are not selling by any means freely, and are quoted at 5 to 5½c. Candied peel is unchanged, lemon being scarce and firm at 16 to 17c. In citron and orange there is no change. Nuts are likewise steady at quotations in Prices Current and are dull of sale.

RICE AND SPICES.

There is a wider demand for rice, considerable shipments having been made this week. There is nothing new to say of prices. These remain at from 3¾c. upwards.

Spices are steady and unchanged at quotations in Prices Current. The demand is light.

SUGARS.

The call for sugar keeps up and determines the movement of considerable quantities in carloads. Most of the houses have each shipped a few carloads this week. The quality of the granulated now on the market is not so wide in the range of variety as it was earlier in the season. There is still marked difference between the best and the worst, but it is not so great as it was. The lowest price quoted is 4¾c. for cars. In trade lots the basis of quotation is 4¾c. with the majority of traders, though some ask 4½c. for the best grade. There is no voluntary offer of yellow at 3¾c. unless in very large quantities, and the buyer would probably not have many to choose between to get yellow sugar at that price. Hard bargaining might shade 3¾c., but not to a very general extent down to 3¼c. The shipments of the week included both yellow and granulated, though less of the former than of the

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

The facts of the canned goods hold not for one week nor for two at this time of year, but for a whole season. There has not been any important variation to take note of for weeks past. The wants of traders keep cropping up here and there, and a few cases go with this order a few others with that, so that the supply is declining every day. The price appears to be easier, $1 to $1.05 being still quoted, but the possibility of buying slightly below this is rather stronger than it was at the beginning of the month. Vancouver furnished an order for a carload of assorted vegetables the other day, but the purchase was made on private terms. Though orders have been taken on the appearance of the sample of newly-packed peas, this class of goods does not figure to any extent in the supply yet, the maturing of the stock usually being a matter of some weeks' duration. Salmon is very scarce on spot notwithstanding receipts reported last week, all of which have since gone out to supply retailers' orders. The price is very firm from $1.50 upward.

The B. C. Commercial Journal says: All reports received from the Fraser River agree that the run so far is a poor one. One says the run is much the same as last year, and another says it is similar to the run of 1888

HAMILTON, - ONT.To Canning Men.-OUR CYCLONE PULP MACHINE

For making tomato pulp and preparing pumpkin and squash for canning is very well known to all the canners in the United States, and a few of them are in use in Canada. The high tariff has prevented their being used extensively heretofore.

We are now manufacturing these machines at Oakville, Ont., to enable our Canadian friends to obtain them without paying a heavy duty; but we shall make only a few of them unless ordered. Those who contemplate purchasing, should send their orders promptly to insure the saving of duty, as late orders will have to be filled from stock in the United States which will be subject to a 30 per cent duty.

MARKETS—Continued.

which, it is well known, was the lightest of late years. The prospect of the canneries filling all their tins this season seem rather gloomy up to date. The Beaver and Richmond canneries report 250 cases altogether. Private advices have been received reporting a good run in Beechy Bay last Saturday. These fish are expected in the Fraser this week. Some dealers are not quoting for Eastern shipment, in fact have withdrawn all quotations, being satisfied with the strength of the market to wait until they see how the fishing is going to turn out on the Fraser River. The Anglo-British Columbia Packing Co. shipped 1,300 cases from the Fraser River to Vancouver on July 11, which is the first Fraser River shipment of the season. The Martha Fisher, chartered to load salmon by R. P. Rithet & Co., arrived from Liverpool July 17. The British bark Glen-garry, 802 tons, Capt. Davidson, now at Rio de Janeiro, has been chartered for salmon to the United Kingdom by Bell-Irving & Paterson for September-October loading.

latter. The raw sugars in stock do not sell freely. Demerara is quoted in barrels at 4c. Barbados at $3\frac{1}{2}$ c., Louisiana at $3\frac{3}{4}$ c. The sugar trade this month has been of smaller volume than for the same month of last year. The shortage in the cherry crop, and the limited proportion of the strawberry crop suitable for canning, have been the chief causes for a slightly lower consumption.

Willet & Gray, New York, in their Statistical say: Total stock in all the principal countries, at latest uneven dates, 1,230,127 tons, against 1,179,697 tons at the same uneven dates last year. Stock in Havana and Matanzas, by cable, 125,000 tons, against 134,000 tons last week. The market is firmer, without change of quotations, in sympathy with the European markets, which have recovered from the recent depression and advanced 3d per cwt. The change is owing to the discovery, through the medium of charters made for steamers to load sugar for the United States, that the American refiners availed of the foreign situation to secure a line of beet sugars at the recent low quotations of 12s 9d and 12s 10½d cost and freight. The present price is 13s 1½d per cwt cost and freight, and it remains to be seen if it will be maintained in the absence of further purchasing for America. Cuba remained passive during the European decline, but will scarcely continue so for long, should the European markets again recede, as is not unlikely. Java sugars for September shipment are offered more freely. There is no news of special interest from cane producing countries. At the close sales of Centrifugals are made at 3 1-16c., and including 80 hhds Muscovados, 89° basis, at 2 11-16c. but as more has been or would be paid privately for a regular parcel, we do not change our quotations for Muscovados. The last two weeks in July and the first two weeks in August are generally counted by refiners as their dull period in the midst of the active season. Trade is therefore falling off a little temporarily, but not sufficient to have any influence on the general situation, and prices will remain steady, until the next advance comes from an increased demand. A novel feature of the week is a small importation of soft refined sugar into this country from Canada. Scotch yellows are arriving in small amounts, but find small sale, as the country buyers are not now in want of such low grade sugars. It is very noticeable that the low current prices of refined lead to a rapid increase in the consumption of the higher grades and to less of the lower grades.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Few sales of syrups are heard of these days. Prices are pretty much for the buyer to elect. They range from 1½c. upwards.

A very small business is done in molasses. The firmness reported last week from the Islands is undiminished. The quantity of molasses destroyed in the Newfoundland fire was so large as to have a material influence in strengthening prices.

TEAS.

Low grade Japans, from 20c. downward, are not likely to favor the buyer this year. The supply of these grades is said to be not more than half as great as it was last year. The market for Japans retains all the firmness that advices indicated a week ago, and there are no low grades yet in sight. The second crop leaf is now on the market, but under a strong demand, stimulated by scarcity, the price has gone up $1.50 per picul.

Low grade black teas are scarce, but are not in strong consumptive demand yet. Retailers are not placing orders freely for any class of tea.

MARKET NOTES.

A carload of salmon for Davidson & Hay is now some days over due.

W. T. Harris, Chatnam, N. B., dealer in general merchandise, offers 200 cases canned lobsters, also dried cod of finest quality.

Advices from Halifax and Nova Scotia markets state that prices there for mackerel have advanced 50 to 75c. per bbl. during the past few days.

Kemble & Co., Indian teas, Calcutta, have opened an office in Toronto, and will work up a Canadian business from there. A. Davidson is their representative.

Geo. Musson & Co. received a cable on Tuesday advising them that the settlements of Japan teas up to that date were 278,000 piculs as against 303,000 piculs up to the same date last year.

purchases have been made owing to the extreme ideas of sellers. The second crop is reported to be poorer than it was last year, but owing to the shortage in the first the price is firm.

Perkins, Ince & Co. are advised by cable that the agreement limiting the supply of Ping Suey tea to 14,000 pkges., is almost certain. An advance is consequently expected. This news has little bearing on the price of Ping Sueys here as a very limited quantity is handled on this market, but the restriction of the supply is apt to make the price of young Hyson teas higher.

Mail advices from Yokohama to June 22, report exports of tea to that date :

And upon condition of market as follows :

"There has been a steady demand, settlements since last circular reaching 24,300 piculs. Low grades are being chiefly dealt in. Second crop leaf is arriving, but quality is rather disappointing, owing, no doubt, to continued wet weather."

The London Grocers' Gazette, July 9, says:—The event of the week has of course been the arrival of the Moyune. Of her cargo about a fourth is, we hear, for immediate transshipment and will not come on the London market at all. Judging by the paucity of fine parcels in the ship. Russian buyers in Hankow must have operated with much more than usual freedom and left the London trade practically only common to medium teas to deal with. At any rate opening prices seem to confirm this, as with the exception of one deal at 2s per lb, there has as yet been no fine tea sold.

Mr. Lawrence Kirk has just returned from the Skeena, and says that he thought a good deal of the "fisheries," or canneries, and regretted that their market was not greater. When he was up at the Skeena all the canners were observing the half-pack arrangement, and were very conservative in their choice of fish. The Inverness had some 4,500 cases packed; the Alert Bay Co., 500; the Aberdeen, 2,300, and the Balmoral a like number. Mr. Cunningham had about 6,000 Spring fish on his wharf ready for packing. Fifteen thousand each is the usual pack, but they have limited themselves mutually, this season, to 11,500, and there will be no difficulty in getting that together. There was a good deal of talk up there as to the Fishery Commission, and there is a kick as to the increase in the cost of a licence. They don't much mind the offal-disposal arrangement, although they think it unnecessary there, but canners do think that they might expect more from the Government than they are receiving. It costs them from $4,000 to $5,000 a year for nets, and they find this is mainly attributable to the 'snags,' which ruin the nets.—Vancouver News-Advertiser.

PETROLEUM.

Not much business is being done by the refiners or dealers, prices rule easy and are unchanged in quotation.

The Petrolia Advertiser reports:—Petrolia crude $1.26¾ per barrel; Oil Springs crude $1.27½ per barrel. The price of crude oil remains about the same as last week and is dull and nominal. We must remember however that old time is shipping along apace, and manufacturers will soon be running their plants full blast, so as to be prepared for the fall trade demand. There is a disposition on the part of heavy holders of crude to ask higher prices for their commodity, but the light demand is a draw-back at present to any improvement in values. The refined oil market is very steady and moderately active for the season of the year, so far as the higher grades or refined oils are concerned, which are quoted at about 18c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The price of butter has improved somewhat this week. Good dairy tub butter is worth from 14 to 16c., but it must be prime if it brings the latter price. Round lots of choice store packed butter change hands at 14c., but 15c. is now and then got by holding out, if the butter is of really fine quality. There is a considerable amount of buying for shipping. Rumors of some big transactions in creamery tub by local holders are afloat on the street, and it is said that it is claimed by one firm that they sold a lot at from 19 to 21c., but this is not supported by any other evidence than that of rumor. The butter market is at all events in a very satisfactory state. Now is a very good time for both sides of the market to do business, for sellers have the opportunity of getting good prices and buyers can get good butter.

The jobbing cheese market here is steady and is not affected materially by outside influences. The prices are 9½ to 10c. for No. 1, and 9c. for No. 2.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Are dull and neglected. There has been some improvement in the condition of the market owing to shipments made by some Chatham growers to the Spanish West Indies. The price here is $1 to $1.20, according to quality and the size of the lot.

DRIED AND EVAPORATED APPLES—While there has been no change in the price, the views of holders appear to have some strength in the prospective shortage in the apple crop. Prices continue at 3½c. upwards for dried, and 6c. upwards for evaporated.

EGGS—The supply and the demand now match each other very well. There is little stock carried long, and there is no delay between receipts. The price is steady at 10½.

HONER—The price is low and so is the tone of business. Extracted is 5 to 7c., and sections are 14c.

HOPS—Holders on this market still quote 21 to 24c., but business is dull. There was quite a large sale made this week at 23c. Hops of the 1890 crop are 16 to 18c.

PROVISIONS.

Smoked meats are in demand, but distribution is for the most part in small lots. For long clear there is also some demand. Prices remain at last week's quotations.

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

The record of deals closed and shipments made is not a large one in flour this week, but the activity of the buying side was shown in numerous offers for future shipment. Between buyers and sellers there is a difference of about 10c. on the average, and this is seldom overcome or compromised so as to bring about business on spot. Feed is still easy, hay is weakening, oats are unchanged.

FLOUR.—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.95 to $5; strong bakers', $4.50; white wheat patents, $4.80; straight roller, $4.40; low grades, per bag, $1.25 to $1.50.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.80 to $4.90; Manitoba strong bakers' $4.25 to $4.40; Ontario patents, $3.90 to $4.20; straight roller, $3.65 to $3.75; extra, $3.20 to $3.25; low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.50.

MEAL—Oatmeal is $3.80. Cornmeal is $3.50.

FEED—Bran is $11 to $11.50, shorts $12 $13, mixed feed $22, feeding corn 50 to 52, oats 33c.

HAY—Is fairly active at $10 to $10.50 for No. 1 timothy and $9 for mixed.

STRAW—Is steady at $6.50 to $7.

MONTREAL.

The flour market continues quiet, trade being confined to local requirements. Values unchanged. We quote: Winter patent, $4.80 to $4.90; spring patent, $4.85 to $4.95; straight roller, $4.20 to $4.40; extra, $3.80 to $3.95; superfine, $3.25 to $3.50; city strong bakers' $4.60 to 0.00; strong bakers, $4.45 to $4.65.

Oatmeal remains about steady, with only a fair local trade doing. We quote: Granulated, bbls $3.99 to $4; rolled winter $3.80 to $3.90; Standard $3.75 to $3.85.

Bran and shorts are meeting with fair local demand at quotations. Mouille is quiet. Bran, $13 to $14; shorts, $15 to $16; mouille $20 to $22.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

There is a fair demand for all grades of flour though prices are slightly easier and some say still lower prices may be looked for, as crop prospects are excellent. Quotations given are Manitoba $5.50 to $5.60; Ontario high grade $4.70 to $4.80; Medium patents $4.40 to $4.60.

OATMEAL—Is in good demand though prices hold firm, standard is quoted $4.10 to $4.20; Roller sells more readily at same prices.

CORN MEAL—Very little moving, prices are firm, and probably will hold steady at present figures $2.80 to $2.90.

MARKETS.—Continued

BACON—Long clear is 8c., smoked backs are 11c., bellies 11c., rolls 9c.

HAMS—Are steady at 11c.

LARD—Pure is unchanged at 9¼ to 10c. for tubs and pails. Compound is steady at 7 to 9c.

BARREL PORK—U. S. heavy mess is $13 to $14, Canadian $15, short cut $16.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef is 3½ to 4½c. in fore and 7½ to 9c. in hindquarters, mutton is 7 to 7½c. Lamb 9 to 10½c., mutton 7 to 8c., veal 7 to 8c.

VEGETABLES.

Old potatoes are nominal and virtually unsalable, the supply of new swamping the market for old. New are $1.50 to $1.75 per barrel.—Onions are dull and slow of sale, from $1.75 to $2.25 per crate.—Watermelons are 25 to 35c. Muskmelons $2.75 to $3.25 per case.—Tomatoes, United States in boxes, are 60 to 70c.; Canadian are $1.25 per basket.—Celery is $1 to $1.25 per case.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW.

HIDES—The price is steady at 4½c. for No. 1 cows', and 5c. for cured.

SKINS—Pelts are 30c., lambskins 40c., calfskins 5 to 7c.

WOOL—New fleeces are plentiful at 17c., clothing wool is 20c. For pulled the prices continue at 22c. for super and 25 to 26c. for extra super.

TALLOW—Rough is dull at 2c., rendered at 5 to 5½c.

GREEN FRUIT.

Oranges are very scarce. Mediterranean Sweets are about done, and quote rather nominally at $5.50 to $6. Rodis are in and afford the bulk of the supply. The price is $4 to $4.25 in 100's and $6.25 to $6.75 in 160's. Messina lemons are $6.50. Maoris are $6.50. Bananas are in good demand at $1.25 to $1.75. New Canadian apples are in and selling at $3.50 per barrel. Raspberries are 8c., red currants 75 to 90c., black currants, $1.25. Cherries are remarkably scarce and are very firmly held at $1.25 and upwards. Nobody has any stock for more than an hour at a time, and only a few baskets at that. Gooseberries are 75c. to $1. California pears are $4 to $4.25. Apricots are done. Plums are $3.50 to $3.75, peaches $2.25 to $2.50.

FISH.

The fish business is not very lively just now. Orders are not numerous, and are usually easily satisfied as to quantity. Salmon trout and whitefish are 6½c., lake herring are $1.50 to $1.75 per hundred (by count), and salmon are 14c.

SALT.

Trade is on the quiet side. Prices are steady and unchanged at quotations in Prices Current.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, July 28, 1892.

GROCERIES.

The tone of the grocery market is pretty much the same as it was last week. Orders that are being taken are fair and travellers report that future business is sure to be good as the crop prospect is fine. The wholesale trade report steadier prices and not so much cutting in the heavies. Payments are very good and on the whole the outlook is very promising for the future.

SUGAR.

There is still a fair trade being done in sugar. The refiners report quite a few jobbing sales at former prices. It is said that the trade are pretty well stocked at cut prices but the feeling on the whole is a shade firmer than formerly. The wholesale trade seem to be selling at steadier prices. The retail trade are now doing a good trade in the above line now that the preserving season is in full operation.

SYRUPS.

Syrups are dull, and what trade that is being done is at a very low figure. In molasses the business shows a little better feeling, but prices are so low that a profit is out of the question.

TEAS.

The tea market is still active and quiet, a few lots have changed hands during the week. Japan stock in first hands here are being firmly held and will remain so until the sailing ships arrive in the early part of September.

COFFEE.

Coffee is about the same as noted in our last weeks report, and under the light stocks dealers are talking very firm. We have to report the sale of a few lots of Rios at 18 to 20c. We quote:—Rios 18 to 20c.; Java, 23 to 25c.; Mocha, 24 to 25c.; Jamaica, 19 to 21c.; and Maracaibo, 22½ to 23c, Santos, 17½ to 19c.

RICE.

The demand for rice continues steady, and several car lots have been closed out during the week. There is no change in values since our last. We quote standard $4 to $4.10, Japan $4.50 to $5, Patnas $4.50 to $5, and Carolinas $7 to $8 per hundred pounds.

SPICES.

Spices are unchanged and the business noted last week is about all there is to note. The trade that is being done is only of a jobbing nature.

NUTS.

A quiet trade is all there is to say regarding nuts. Prices are the same. We quote: Almonds Tarragona 14 to 15c.; almonds, Ivica, 14 to 15c.; almonds, common, 10 to 11c.; almonds, hard-shell, 7 to 8c.; walnuts, Grenoble, new 12 to 14c.; walnuts, French 10 to 10½c.; cocoanuts per 100 $3.75 to $4.00; filberts 9 to 10c. pecans 16 to 17c.; peanuts 7 to 10c.

DRIED FRUITS.

The firmness of last week is still maintained, and with the light stock on spot dealers are inclined to talk on the firm side. Prime fruit is selling at 4½ to 5c. The same remarks apply to currants. We quote 4¼c. for barrels, 4½c. for half barrels and 4¾c. for cases.

GREEN FRUIT.

There is a fair trade doing all round in green fruit. Bananas are firm and are now selling at $1.50 to $2. The steamer American that was expected here yesterday will not be in till Friday. She has 12,000 barrels on board.

APPLES.

Apples both in barreled and dried stock are quiet and the business doing is only a small one. We quote regular $5.50 to $6 per barrel, evaporated 6 to 6½c., dried 4 to 4½c. per lb., and evaporated peaches 12 to 13c. per tin.

HOPS.

Hops are still firm. Sales of a few lots have been made on a basis of 27½c.

HONEY.

Honey remains as heretofore and prices are unchanged. We quote strained at 7 to 8½c. and comb 8½ to 10c. per lb.

FISH.

The receipts of fresh salmon are very small and prices are firmly held, a few sales being made at 12 to 14c. In pickled fish a few small lots of dry cod have been placed at $4.75 to $5. We also hear of sales being made at a lower figure. Smoked Yarmouth bloaters, per 60 box, $1.00 to $1.10; St. John's bloaters, per 100 box, 80c. to $1.00; boneless cod, large boxes, 6 to 7c.; do. small boxes 7 to 8c.; finnan haddies 7 to 8c.

We quote No. 1 herring, per bbl., $4.50 to $4.60; lake trout, per half bbl., $4.00 to $4.25; sea trout, per bbl., $8.25 to $8.75; codfish, green, No. 1, per bbl. $4.75 to $5.00; do. No. 2, per bbl., $4.25 to $4.50; codfish, dried, per bbl., $4.25 to $4.50; salmon, B.C., per bbl., $13 to $13.50; do., Nfld., No. 1, per tee, $22.50 to $23; do. do., No. 2, per tee, $21 to $21.50; do. do., No. 3, per tee, $20 to $20.50.

EGGS.

There is no change in the position of the egg market stocks are being pretty well cleaned up by local and export demand. Prices are still quoted at 11c. in a jobbing way.

PROVISIONS.

The local pork market is firm in sympathy with the western markets. The demand continues very fair. Some enquiry is reported for lard and a good local enquiry is reported for smoked meats. We quote Canadian short cut, per bbl. $16.75 to $17.40; mess pork, western, per bbl. $16.00 to $16.50; short cut, western, per bbl. $00.00 to $00.00; hams, city cured, per lb. 11c. to 11¼c; lard, Canadian, in pails 8¼ to 8½c; bacon, per lb. 9½ to 10¼c; lard, com. refined, per lb. 7 to 7¼c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

Butter rules about the same. Creamery is held firm, and where stock can be had it is readily taken at 20c.; but holders won't move, as the majority of holdings cost that and over in the country. Fine Western dairy also finds buyers at 15½c. to 18c.; in fact, the market, as a whole, is steady. Creamery, 19½ to 20½c.; Townships dairy, 15 to 17c.; Western dairy, 15 to 16c.

Cheese retains all the firmness recently. We quote: Finest colored, 9 to 9¾c.; finest white, 9 to 9¼c.; under grades, 8½ to 8¾c.; cable, 44s. 6d.

GRAIN.

Grain has been quiet during the week, peas and oats being the only lines that were active to any great extent. We quote: No. 2 hard Manitoba 85c.; No. 3 hard Manitoba 74c.; peas, per 66 lbs. afloat 77 to 78c.; oats, per 34 lbs. 35 to 35½c.; corn, duty paid 65c.; barley, feed 35 to 40c.

DRY GOODS.

The fair weather we have been having lately seems to have the desired effect on dry goods. It is reported that stocks in the country are light and the dealers are taking hold more freely. Payments are also on the improvement

ST. JOHN, N. B., MARKETS.

ST. JOHN, N.B., July 28, 1892.

GROCERIES.

A slight improvement is noticed in the grocery trade. Goods are moving more freely and collections are easier.

FISH—The market is entirely bare of large cod, and choice medium cod also are scarce, while small are dull of sale, the trade being well supplied. Bay herring are the only kind obtainable. The fish are small but well cured. Prices are about $1.75 per barrel, while barrels are scarce. Smoked herring sell slowly. Prices are very low, 8 to 9c.

It is a well recognized fact that no business establishment is complete without some cash carrier system. Attention is called to the Whiting Cash and Parcel Carrier. It seems in it impossible for anything to get out of order, as there are no cords or springs. Merchants throughout the country, who give it a trial, may satisfy themselves of its merits. feeling satisfied that where once introduced it would never be parted with.

SARNIA, Ont., June 8, 1892.

H. E. WHITING, Esq., London:

DEAR SIR,—I have been using your Cash Carriers for a long time, and must say they fill the bill in every particular, especially as to their keeping in order. It seems to me that they could hardly be improved on.

I remain, yours truly,

(Signed) JOHN LEYS,
Late Leys & Morrison.

This carrier has been in use two years and six months. adv

THE ADVERTISER AND THE DRUMMER.

Trade is the object of the business man. What he has to sell must be sold. To secure the necessary custom or patronage he uses every means available to acquaint the public with his stock and his prices. He employs men to travel. They circulate, like the contents of a mail pouch, here, there and everywhere. The sample trunk and the drummer are the greatest tourists of the nation. They are practically ubiquitous. Every hamlet enjoys their visits. They have the gift of living high and talking business, and in response to their persuasive powers the steamboat and freight train are distributing merchandise from one end of the country to the other. The secret of success is due as largely to the vanity of the purchaser as it is to the musical vocalization of the drummer. Men in business, as a rule, appreciate the honor of a personal interview. The distinction tickles the average man. It has of course to be paid for, but the expense is but a bagatelle in comparison with the pleasure. This secret, acknowledged as it must be, the drummer, aside from his personal and representative influence, is but a perigrinating advertisement or a commercial phonograph. His availability, as his eloquence and cigars, is of course limited. He cannot spread himself beyond his jurisdiction or his mileage ticket. The vacancy has to be filled by the printer. In this sense the trade paper out-travels the traveller, and advertising goes ahead of the drummer. By this means a manufacturer in New York can place his shingle on the desk of a California trader, and a man making gimlets in New Jersey can bore his way into a hardware store in Manitoba. It is impossible to limit the travelling powers of an advertisement. It has the mail bags of the world at its service, and needs but a post-office stamp for a free pass to the uttermost parts of the earth. From this scattering of commercial seed the sower reaps his crop. It may be found, perhaps, in an adjoining State; it may make a transatlantic voyage, or fetch an order from the antipodes.

A consensus of international trade, based on advertising, would be a revelation both in volume and area. In home business it is already an axiom in trade that the judicious advertiser is commercially wise and eventually successful. Everybody knows this, excepting of course the residue, who are innocent of knowing anything. This is eminently a reading age. The public mind is inquisitive. Men, according to their mental bias or their peculiar line of business are continually on the lookout for the particular apple they are searching for; as a rule they find it. It may be in an improved machine, a cheaper market, or a customer for their goods. Aside from the information an advertisement supplies, we have the equally pertinent fact that the house or firm that does not advertise its goods, loses just so much of public confidence. It is true that an advertisement is not a certificate of good character, nor in every case the affidavit of a fact, but in public opinion it is accepted as a voucher for respectability. It indicates a certain status of responsibility and enterprise, which are as necessary in business as a clean collar is in society. With these facts as self-evident as the hump on the spine of a dromedary, it is somewhat of a conundrum that men of business are by no means scarce who are as chary of an advertisement as they might be of an impostor. For all that the fact remains that the advertising of the nineteenth century is the great drummer of its trade, and the man who in the most judicious manner secures its services is the man who will find that in proportion to the seed he sowed is the crop he reaps.—Age of Steel.

SOMETIMES A NUISANCE.

"I want an itemized bill!"

Merchants, you have all heard that request, and a good many of you with a wrath you may not have cared to manifest, and some of you with a wrath you have taken no pains to conceal. Why?

"The needless trouble it causes," says one. "The reflection there is in the request against my honesty," says another. "The chance it gives kickers to kick on items of goods ordered, but which the customer has forgotten," says a third.

Well, friend, are these good reasons? Of course, the case pre-supposes you are doing a credit business, and if you are, an itemized bill, though a nuisance, is the tribute you are compelled to pay to that reprehensible system. Troublesome? Most assuredly there is some trouble in preparing an itemized bill, but that largely could be avoided if you did not conduct your business carelessly. A well managed business, if it is a credit business, has a good set of books. By that we mean well-kept books, and if the merchant has carefully journalized his business and keeps posted up, it is not such a tremendous job to render an itemized bill. There are two or three helps of which he may legitimately avail himself in this matter: 1. Render itemized bills the first of each month, never letting any account run longer than that without billing in itemized form. 2. Have printed on his bills, "Preserve this bill; itemized bills never duplicated." 3. Avoid bills altogether; adopt the pass-book or mercantile coupons. In fact, the last method pretty effectually removes any necessity for itemizing any bills at all.

But whatever the merchant may do, he has not the least right in the world to object or even to hesitate, to give one fully itemized statement of account to any customer who requests it, nuisance though the request may be.—Northwest Trade.

EARLY CLOSING.

Retail dealers who keep their stores open from an early hour in the morning until a late hour at night seem to us to make a great mistake. Not only do they overwork themselves and become the slaves of their customers, but they also overwork their employees, with the result that they gradually lose all interest in the business and are ever on the lookout for more desirable situations. Retail dealers complain that they cannot get satisfactory young men as clerks; and considering the number of hours that clerks in small retail stores are expected to work, we are not surprised at the aversion of bright young men to become counterjumpers. They see that young men in other paths of life work only eight, nine or ten hours a day, and they naturally ask themselves why they should work twelve or fourteen hours a day. If they were paid by the hour the case would be different, but they are not. They are paid by the week or month; and considering the number of hours they work, their wages are by no means equal to those of many other men who are not one whit more skilled or intelligent and who only work eight hours a day.

Retail dealers claim that they would lose business if they closed their stores earlier, but we do not believe that they would. The public are in sympathy with the early closing movement, and would willingly make their purchases earlier in the day if they knew that by doing so they were enabling the storekeepers and their assistants to quit work at a reasonable hour. However, it is not a question of sentiment. All that the retail dealers have to do is to decide to close at a certain hour, to notify their customer accordingly and to carry out their intention unswervingly. A few customers may be inconvenienced by such early closing, but they will readily adapt themselves to the change. Small retail dealers have been the slaves of the public too long, and surely it is high time that they should demand for themselves and their employees that consideration to which the poorest workingman in America is entitled.

The main obstacle to early closing is the lack of organization in the various branches of retail trade. For example, a retail grocer in a crowded district fears that he will lose business unless he keeps open as long as his competitor on the opposite side of the street; and as this competitor is precisely of the same opinion in regard to his own business, the result is that both stores are kept open until long after the ordinary business hours, and are not closed until the streets are almost deserted. Senseless competition of this kind would be impossible if these grocers belonged to an organization. And even if the majority of retail dealers in the various branches of trade would only form organizations and decide to close early, the minority would soon be compelled by the force of public opinion to follow their example. In many of our greatest stores the practice of early closing has already been adopted, and we have yet to learn that the proprietors have suffered any pecuniary loss thereby. Moreover, within the past few years the world has become impressed with the conviction that eight hours' work is enough for a man, and the sooner small retail dealers think likewise and act accordingly the better it will be for themselves, their families and their employees.—National Provisioner.

VALUE OF A GOOD BOOKKEEPER

One reason why many men fail in business is because they do not employ the means which are really at their disposal to avoid failure. Should a man attempt to walk along the street or on the country road with his eyes shut, it would be very strange if, sooner or later, he did not stumble or fall. Why? Not because he is weak or unable to walk, but simply because he does not use the means which nature has provided for avoiding accidents. The man who attempts to get along in business without the eyes which the experience of the world has proved are absolutely essential to success, may be declared to merit failure. Modern business is essentially of large operations; but large operations, involving many details, cannot be comprehended by the faculties unaided. There must be records and comparisons, and nothing but adequate accounting can bring this about. A business man using the accountant's work intelligently occupies a position comparable to that of the mariner consulting chart and compass. Conversely the accountant who properly assists the business man is like the maker of the chart by which the mariner sails. Even a small error in the chart will bring disaster. If mariners endangered the property intrusted them by attempting to sail without chart or compass, not only would the Government interfere, but the whole intelligence of the world would rise up and cry out against such foolhardiness. But there are thousands of business men jeopardizing the property of others, as well as their own inheritances in ventures because they do not use the chart and compass that is the safeguard and security of a business career, and yet no one cries out in warning. All sympathise with the unsuccessful business man when the inevitable disaster overtakes him, but no one points out that it was largely his own fault that he failed.—Office.

NOTES ON PRODUCE AND FINANCE.

The Chinese Consular reports all tell the same tale of losses by Chinese tea growers, and of their inability to compete with Indian and Ceylon planters. Mr. Westall, in a review of the Foo-chow tea trade, says:—In consequence of orders from Peking, recommendations were posted in the various tea countries by the local authorities to improve the quality of the teas this season, as a means towards the resuscitation of the trade. Some of the tea men in the Pakling, Paklum, and Pan-yong did their best to further this end, and to a certain extent succeeded; but, on the other hand, judging by results, no other conclusion could be arrived at than that those making teas in all other districts had disregarded the recommendation. The former were buoyed up with hope at the opening of the market, when they obtained for a few of their best chops prices 20 per cent. higher than the highest price paid last season, that they were going to make their fortunes, and congratulated themselves on having followed the guidance of the Mandarins. Their satisfaction was, however, short-lived, as the demand for fine tea—at any rate, high-priced fine tea—fell away, and as they persistently refused through the season to meet buyers in the matter of price, they were left at the close of the year with the bulk of these teas on hand. There were exceptions to this rule, but, as far as foreigners were concerned, whether they bought of these men at the high price or of others who submitted to a reduction, they lost money on their ventures. The prices paid for medium teas at the opening of the market, although no higher than last year, were thought by many to be high considering the low values ruling in the London market, and the telegraphed sales towards the end of July proved that they were so; indeed, the losses made on shipments up to that time were, on the average, heavy. Then as a natural consequence, prices declined and remained low, though not low enough, as it turned out, for the well-being of those who shipped, as the forced sales of the increased supply of Ceylon and Indian teas in Mincing Lane further depressed prices in that market, and if losses were comparatively light on these autumn shipments, there were, none the less, on the balance, losses. As regards common tea, it was scarcely to be expected that it would touch a very low point here after the "boom" which took place through speculation in London in January last; nevertheless, what is known as "Type" standard was bought in August to lay down at 5'3-4d. per lb., at which price it remained until the middle of October, when it rose to six-pence, on account of scarcity. Such of these teas as have already been sold have not brought back the money paid for them, as far as is known at present; therefore the season has not been a profitable one for shippers. As, however, there are still five months wherein to realise the season's export, now virtually complete, it may be, considering the exceptionally favorable statistical position of China tea in London, that the result of the year's trading will not turn out to be so unfortunate as was at one time expected. To the natives the season has again been one of severe losses. The little profit made on common tea went no way to make good a tithe of the money they lost on the better kinds. Those of them who have been engaged in the particular branch of the trade of making tea and bringing it down to their market appear never to have heard of the competition of Indian and Ceylon, or, if they have, cannot bring themselves to believe that tea can be produced in any country other than their own.—Home and Colonial Mail.

(PATENTED JULY, 1891.)

These cuts represent our new Fruit and Preserve Jars which we are now introducing to the Canadian Trade, and in doing so, desire to draw your attention to the advantages they possess over those made of glass and other material.

The Jars are manufactured from a mixture of English and Pennsylvania clays, making a stronger and better article than can be produced from any other combination.

We use only a pure Bristol Stoneware Glaze, which is free from Lead or other Metallic substances readily attacked by all acids. We guarantee the body to be thoroughly vitrified and absolutely acid proof.

These Jars will be found superior to all other articles in use for the preservation of Fruits, etc. Being non-transparent, the action of light cannot fade the color or ferment fruits kept in them, as is the case where glass is used, and being a non-conductor of heat, preserves are kept at a more uniform temperature than in either glass or tin, and will be free from the unpleasant metallic taste so frequently noticed where tin is used.

They are made in various sizes and are for sale by all Crockery and Grocery Dealers in Canada.

There is no class of contract more flexible than that entered into by manufacturers for the future delivery of goods at a specified price. Such an indenture does not bind more than it looses. Instead of being a closely-knit covenant it is a whole made up of a lot of loose parts, and any joint between these parts can easily be made to give way. There is only one proviso lacking to make a nullity of these contracts from the very beginning, and that one is "If the party to the first part does not change his mind." The reservations for possible fires, strikes, limitations of production and other contingencies, form so large a part in these agreements as virtually to cover all causes of non-fulfilment except avowed obstinacy. The anticipated and enumerated contingencies are so numerous as to leave wide ground for legal interpretation to include other causes not named or intended, but shown by legal construction to be comprehended, in the provisos set forth in the agreement. The party to the second part has little chance to escape liability for the goods, if the manufacturer chooses to deliver them. The ab-rogating circumstances are all on the one side. The contract ensures the manufacturer a customer at a price, and if the manufacturer sees no prospect of getting a better price when delivery is due, he has no need to fall back on any of the reserves in the agreement to release himself from the engagement to deliver. The buyer will get his goods. The wide contingency "limitations of output" is convenient. If the output is shown to be inadequate to supplying both A and B, the manufacturer of course cannot fill contracts with both, and of course will not prefer A over B if the latter is under agreement to pay a larger price than A, though A may have signed a month before B. The crucial test of the strength of a future contract is the state of the market when the goods are to be delivered. There is a growing feeling among wholesalers that manufacturers ought to be a little bolder venturers than they are, and this may bring about a less uncertain type of contract in future delivery business. Provision should always be made for eventualities, but in such a way that the language cannot be strained into a cloak for bad faith or a complete change of mind due to an improvement in the market. British wholesale grocers have recently introduced into their contract with continental sellers a provision absolving the parties from liability for sugar which is delayed or lost owing to the blockading of the port at which or to which it is shipped, or owing to other hindrance occasioned by war. This proviso is as likely to be a source of protection to the seller as to the buyer. No other cause disturbs or injures trade as war does, and it is prudent for the sugar dealers to make provision for that most damaging emergency.

It is time that some authority were established whose duty it should be to apply the level to customs appraisements upon the same class of articles entered at different ports. There is no reason why the fiat of each local collector should be supreme, but the facts of experience afford abundant reason why local appraisements should be subject to revision by a board competent to decide controversies between collectors and importers. The anomaly of A being able to enter his goods at 10 per cent less than B does at another port is a sufficient reason for the establishment of some assimilating power. It is a fact that the difference in the duty paid on certain articles, by merchants at different ports, and yet in range of competition with each other, is enough to determine which of them shall get the trade in these articles. Not many years ago a favorite expedient of many city importers was to enter their goods at some port where the business was light, and where the appraiser was therefore not fully experienced in the work of assigning to classes, making distinctions between similar lines or in judging material. At the city ports, where the appraisers were dealing with cases involving delicate discrimination and the nice construction of tariff clauses, all goods usually paid full duty. If the tariff would be strained so as to admit of a classification that would require a higher duty than that intended, the importer might expect to have the benefit of the doubt put against him. Civil servants are usually very prone to favor their department. Grocers are not so much concerned in this lack of uniformity as some other classes of traders are, because the former handle lines upon which there is little chance for differences to arise, and on the bulk of their imported goods they have no duty to pay. It is also likely that a regulating authority will be set up whose office it will be to expel all such inconsistencies from the customs service. The Minister of Customs after a conference with a number of Montreal merchants, has adopted a plan for the establishment of a Customs board, which, if necessary, can sit from time to time in various cities besides Ottawa. The board will be composed of experts in the various leading lines, such as groceries, hardware, or dry goods. To them will be referred all questions respecting valuations, classifications, etc. Bulletins, giving information respecting rulings and interpretations, will be issued from time to time. To this board will also be referred all questions relative to uniformity in Customs classifications.

The decision of the London (Ont.) police magistrate, in the case of a grocer who delivered liquor to a customer, should be heeded by all members of the trade who are so situated as to be able to oblige their customers by undertaking little commissions for them at the liquor store. There are people who dislike to go to a liquor store on any business, and if they can get their grocer to execute any orders for them there, they not infrequently trouble him with the business. They buy goods from him which his wagon is probably on the way to deliver, in passing the liquor store, and it is only a little act of accommodation to a customer for the grocer's boy to stop and purchase the liquor that is wanted and take it on, with the other parcels, to the customer's house. But it seems this is illegal. The illegality probably consists in the addition of 5 or 10 cents for service, which appeared to be added to the retail cost in the case of some liquors delivered by Mr. McBean. It surely could not be in the mere buying and delivering of the liquor. If it were, then no one could purchase liquor through a messenger or an agent. If grocers simply do a message for a customer, without adding any charges for their service, it seems certain that they can deliver liquor without being liable for any breach of the license law. Two or three years ago a retail grocer of this city was fined for delivering liquor in West Toronto Junction, but the ground was not the illegality of a grocer's buying and delivering liquor to a customer, but the sale of liquor outside of the territory covered by a liquor dealer's license. The fine, if we mistake not, was afterwards remitted on appeal.

The partition of the United States sugar trade between the Trust and Claus Spreckels leaves the latter supreme, so far as domestic competition is concerned, in the territory west of the Rocky Mountains. But the San Francisco refinery of that sugar potentate does not provide all the sugar consumed in that region, as witness shipments being made from the Vancouver refinery. And now the competition of British subjects from another quarter threatens to be an irrepressible hindrance to Mr. Spreckels' monopoly. Hong Kong refines sugar and ships it to San Francisco to sell there at prices which the local refinery cannot well meet. Hundreds of tons of this article have already been imported by way of the Sound and British Columbian ports. It is produced in Hong Kong by the very cheapest kind of coolie labor; the sugar enters that port free; the bags cost next to nothing; fuel is cheap, and against such odds the American refiners, working with high priced labor, are powerless to compete. The people of the Sandwich Islands had the benefit of the United States market for their raw sugar, which was admitted duty-free, when the latter country collected a revenue of about 2c. a pound on all other imported raw sugar. The passing of the McKinley Tariff put every other sugar-producing country on the same footing, and the Sandwich Islands lost their special advantage. It is now proposed by Claus Spreckels, in order to offset the incoming of refined sugar from Hong Kong, to establish a refinery at Honolulu, in the Sandwich Islands, where labor is cheap, and the raw material is obtainable right on the spot. As an illustration of the depreciation in the Hawaiian sugar trade, it is stated that shares in the Hawaiian Commercial Company, which were worth $37 each three years ago, have dropped to $2.75. This scheme ought to help the Sandwich Islanders to get rid of their sugar, and should enable Claus to produce a volume of cheap sugar equal to that imported from Hong Kong. He will not have a half cent. duty to pay either, as the Hong Kong refiners have.

The fresh fruit trade of the world has been immensely expanded by the development of transportation facilities in the last few years. The effect of that development has been almost revolutionary and has been the means of changing former wastes, particularly in tropical islands and countries, into groves, orchards and gardens whose fruits are exchangeable for millions of dollars every year. How much more of a stimulus the same cause will give the trade in fresh fruit depends upon the extent to which means of carrying and saving the fruit can be further improved and the rates of freight lowered, for consumption can be counted on to grow, if condition and price can be made satisfactory to consumers. The great consumption of fruit in the green state is affording a partial solution of the problem of what shall be done with fruits preserved by canning or evaporating. If all the green fruit that there is a market for could be got on that market in time, condition, and at a price necessary for business, there would be a very manageable surplus to be preserved. An experiment of which the issue is watched with interest by fruit growers on this continent, is now on trial. If it succeeds it will determine a new mode of disposing of fruit in the green state and will probably extend the acreage under fruit in this country. Five cars were shipped the other day from Sacramento in California destined for Liverpool. The consignment consisted of pears, peaches, plums and apricots. It reached New York in prime condition, and was there loaded on steamers of the White Star line. This is the first shipment of California fruit ever made to Europe. The fruit was picked ripe instead of green, the shippers desiring that on its arrival it may possess all the natural flavor that characterizes it in the region of production. It will have travelled 6,000 miles by the time it reaches Liverpool. The through freight is $5.70 per hundred pounds. If this venture succeeds for California, why could it not succeed for fruit-growing districts of Canada? Most of our fruit grows several hundred miles nearer to the British market than the California fruit does. We have at least equally good means of transit overland, if we had but an equally good fast Atlantic service. This latter requirement would be of service for many other lines of export, particularly for eggs, and it is to be hoped we will have it soon.

We have received a copy of the introduction to the 28th annual number of "Poor's Manual of Railroads." The Manual itself for 1892 is now about ready for delivery. This great compilation of railway statistics teems on every page with information of the utmost importance to that very numerous class of people who are interested in knowing all that is knowable about railway securities. Railway affairs enter so largely into the very warp of national finances that no statement of their condition can be too exhaustive. The Introduction shows that since 1867 when the first number of the Manual appeared, the total mileage of roads in the United States has increased from 39,250 miles to 170,601 miles, or 435 per cent. In the west the increase has been greatest, rising from 15,777 miles in 1867 to 100,599 miles at the end of 1891. In the South also the growth has been great, all the way from 9,940 miles to 32,110 miles. The business of the roads has increased even more remarkably than their extension. In 1866 the total tonnage did not exceed 47,872,500 tons; in 1891 it amounted to 704,398,609 tons. The mileage built in 1891 was 4,471 miles. The gross earnings in 1891 were $1,138,024,459, or 9.1 per cent. of the total investment. The net earnings were $356,209,880, or equal to 3.1 per cent. of the total investment.

THE BEST OF FIVE.

MANAGER CANADIAN GROCER.

DEAR SIR,—Enclosed find two dollars as subscription to THE GROCER, as I see the time is expired, and I would not like to lose any of the numbers, as I consider it the best publication out of the five weeklies I receive.

Yours truly,

JOHN LESLIE.

TOO MUCH CHANCE WORK IN THE TEA TRADE.

EDITOR OF THE CANADIAN GROCER.

SIR,—I notice a letter from Mr. W. F. Penrice in this week's issue of the GROCER, condemning the keeping and selling of package tea by retail grocers. I am glad to read of his conversion, and I hope to hear of many more city grocers who will follow his example and send the package tea back to its original source, lest the tea trade become demoralized and drift into illegitimate channels, such as dry goods, confectioners, fruiterers, pastry cooks, druggists, taverns and saloons, which in my humble opinion will be the ultimate result, and these places will be the distributors of packet teas and will to some extent hurt the legitimate trade. Let me just here instance a case of a jobbing dry goods store selling what they choose to call tea, at five cents a pound. This store is on Queen street west, between Peter and Spadina Avenue, where a half chest of this stuff is ticketed at the door at certain times during the day at five cents a pound. I suppose this is done to gull the public and make them believe it is a special bargain, when in reality the tea is unfit for use and ought to be dumped into the bay to blend with other odious smells that make Toronto a by-word and reproach, and doesn't improve its credit nor its standing as a clean healthful city. Now, sir, this so-called tea has quite a history, and would fill a book with much interesting reading if all the facts could be put together and made public. I am not able to give you all the facts, but only a few that have come under my notice during the last year. This tea was brought to Toronto from England by a man calling himself a wholesale tea jobber, and was located on Front St. On its arrival here this dealer very closely concealed his scheme for swindling, by having a half chest of good tea put among the rest, marked and placed just where he wanted it. From this he drew his sample and got advances on the whole lot, and after a time he left the city. Not till then did it dawn upon the holders of this tea that it was no good at all, for on examination it was found to be damaged by salt water, having been fathoms deep and lost its virtue as tea, and in its place had taken in salt, sand, sea shells and seaweed, although it looks in appearance a fairly good leaf Congou. I am told there was at one time about 20,000 lbs. of this stuff in Toronto, and that it has been (or some of it has) in every auction room in the city. Some went to Montreal and Hamilton, and it has become quite a by-word among those who know of it, the auction places refusing to take it in any more, because of its "peculiar aroma." They say it floods their rooms with its "fragrance," which is like sour seaweed, and has been christened "The Mermaid," and now we find this article called tea being retailed at 5c. a pound by a dry goods man in the locality I have described. Surely this is a matter for the Retail Grocers' Association to look into, also the City authorities, so that the public may be protected from frauds like this. Now, what guarantee have the retail grocers but that similar schemes to this one are being practiced in the use of packet teas, where in 99 cases out of a 100 the retailers know nothing of the contents of these packages, because they are fastened and sealed and never opened until they reach the homes of the consumers? Then again, what does the offering of packet tea by the grocer imply? Just this: That the grocer does not know his business, and cares far less, or he would want to know what he was giving his customers of his own knowledge, and upon his own authority. Would, think you, any grocer act so carelessly regarding cheese, butter, or fruit? My experience among the trade is that they would not, for the majority of city grocers spend one-fourth of their time selecting fruit and hunting for good butter to please their customers. Yet tea is made to take the last place and anything will do, as they have no time to bother with it. This, Sir, is one of the saddest mistakes in the retail grocery trade to-day, that retailers do not, and will not give tea its proper place and attention, while butter and fruit receive their full share, fruit especially, more I think than is really legitimate or paying by the majority who handle it. I would like you, Sir, in your bright and so ably conducted journal, to look into this matter for the benefit of the trade, and urge on the various Retail Grocers' Associations through the Dominion to take up this tea question in the way of debates at their meetings, such for instance "Our own bulk Tea versus Packet Tea," dealing with quality, price, profits, ultimate success and results. Something of this kind would tend to infuse more interest in one of the most particular and best paying articles in the retail grocery business.

Respectfully yours,

STEPHEN HUSTWICH.

TORONTO, July 30th, 1892.

P. S.—I forgot to mention that I had by telephone informed the City Inspector of this tea being offered for sale to the public at the place described. He appears not to have done anything in the matter. Why, is beyond my comprehension.—S. H.

ANOTHER SPEAKS.

WILLIAMSFORD, July 27, 1892.

EDITOR CANADIAN GROCER.

DEAR SIR,—Enclosed please find two dollars, for which kindly continue to send me THE GROCER. I am pleased to say that in my opinion it is the best publication of the kind published in Ontario, and deserves the hearty support of every general merchant in the country. For my own part, I consider the $2 subscription the best invested money of the year. The outspoken and uncompromising yet businesslike stand taken by it in reference to that unqualified humbug, the Patrons of Industry, should commend it to every dealer in the country. Were it not that I had been a subscriber for the past three or four years and profited by the sage advice given from time to time in its columns, I should, like many other poor fools, have made shipwreck of my business and a good conscience. I can now congratulate myself on the fact that the P. of I. is practically hors de combat in this section, and it has not enough friends amongst those of its former most ardent supporters to give it decent burial. The greedy traders who listened to the voice of the tempter can without any inconvenience or loss of trade take a trip to Muskoka during the heated term, and meantime they will not pay expenses of said trip out of profits of last three months' business.

There is another matter to which I wish to refer, and that is the practice so common amongst country dealers in this part of the country of allowing customers the price of tub over and above the full market price of the butter contained in tub. This is a very unbusinesslike custom and makes sad inroads on the small margin of profit made in handling butter.

I like the idea suggested in R. Wetherill's letter of July 15 in THE GROCER, and intend acting upon it.

Your representative, Mr. John Cameron, paid me a flying visit on his way to the Pacific Coast in the interest of THE GROCER.

With best wishes for the success of your publications, I remain, faithfully yours,

A. PARKS.

[We thank Mr. Parks for his remittance and his generous praise. THE GROCER is a representative paper, sensitive to every expression of opinion that reaches it from among its constituents. It aims to be the exponent of sound doctrine, and invites the criticism of the trade that it may keep in the closest touch with the ideas that are founded on the best practice. It seeks to improve by the knowledge of itself that the evidence of others affords. The approbation of its readers is the ne plus ultra of its ambition, and Mr. Parks' letter is about the model form in which THE GROCER likes to have its subscribers word their notices of renewal.—ED.]

THE MONTREAL GROCERS' PICNIC.

The twelfth annual picnic of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association last week was a success in every way. This no doubt is due to the untiring work of the different committees, who did their best to see that every one was used, as only grocers can use friends on a day's outing. At 8.30 the first train of thirteen cars, well loaded, started for the grounds, and a half an hour later another train of six well-packed cars started for the same destination. There must have been about 2,000 people on both trains. The grounds are situated on the Ottawa river near the village of Hudson, and for rustic beauty they would be hard to beat. On arrival the judges immediately started the games, which were partly got through before the party sat down to lunch, which was spread in a large marquee under the supervision of Messrs. Hall and Scott. The dinner was a most successful one, the following ladies and gentlemen being seated at the tables.

PRESIDENT'S TABLE.

After the menu was discussed some taking speeches were made by the various gentlemen present. The first toast "Our Queen" was drunk with a hearty good will. Then came "Canada our Country," which was replied to by Ald. Jeanotte M.P. The next on the programme was "Sister Associations." This was replied to by Ald. Stevenson, who made the speech of the day. In his remarks he gave the retail grocers some sound advice about early closing which they ought to profit by. Then came "The Press," which was proposed by Ald. Thos. Gauthier, Hon. Secretary of the association. Referring of the powers of the press he said they could do a lot of harm and could also do a lot of good, but hoped they would report the picnic in first class style. He also said there was one paper represented that always looked after the grocery trade. Every one could see by looking around the table a little white badge which showed that THE CANADIAN GROCER was always thinking of the trade. He then proposed the toast of the ever popular trade paper THE CANADIAN GROCER. The Montreal correspondent replied, saying that THE GROCER would always look after the interests of the trade as long as it received support. Several other toasts were drunk and the party adjourned to finish the programme. The result of the games was as follows:

Quoits—1st prize, gold medal, presented by Marotte, Leblanc & Co., B. Connaughton winner; 2nd prize, meerscham pipe, J. A. Lefebvre; 3rd prize, one case astral oil, presented by Peverly & Co., J. Berreau.

No. 2. Quarter mile race for bookkeepers and salesmen employed in the grocery business—1st prize, E. Turgeon, one pair of vases; 2nd prize, T. Montpetit, a fancy cigar box, both presented by Messrs. Christie, Brown & Co.; 3rd prize, Joseph Lamoureux, a carving set, presented by Mr. D. Stroud.

No. 3. One hundred yard dash for girls, money prizes—1st, Maud Hedgess; 2nd, Jennie Joslin; 3rd, Nellie Hubert.

No. 4. One hundred yards dash, for grocers and their employes—1st prize, 1 gold charm, presented by E. Robillard & Co., won by C. Huot; 2nd prize, silver cup, presented by Montreal Biscuit Co., won by A. Gauthier; 3rd prize, a cigar holder, won by S. Richard.

No. 5. Quarter mile race for subscribers and their employes—1st prize, silver watch presented by J. Brown, won by H. M. Childs; 2nd prize, biscuit jar, won by P. Grace; 3rd prize, cake basket, won by Alex. Duncan; 4th prize, presented by Christie, Brown & Co.

No. 6. One hundred yard dash, for boys of 12 years and under—Frank Douse 1st, Henry Morgan 2nd, and Frank Morgan 3rd.

No. 7. The waltzing contest was won by Miss Lorey and Miss Larue, who took the medal given by D. C. Brosseau. The 2nd prize fell to Mr. and Mrs. Smith and the 3rd to Miss Holden and Wm. Corbeille.

No. 8. Quarter mile race open to travellers and salesmen of the wholesale grocery trade Grace won the 1st prize, a walking cane; Cardinal the 2nd, a gold ring; and A. W. Childs the 3rd, a travelling companion.

No. 9. The hundred yard dash for fat men over 200 lbs. M. H. Dubois won the 1st prize, a silver cup presented by Vipond, McBride & Co., while D. Lockerby secured the 2nd, an opera glass; 3rd prize a box of cigars fell to the lot of A. B. Deschamps.

No. 10. Half mile race for drivers and store-men employed in the grocery trade, was won by J. Fortier, G. Desmaris 2nd, and Will. Piche 3rd.

No. 11. Quarter mile race for travellers and salesmen employed by biscuit manufacturers—The 1st prize, a silver cup, was won by A. Duncan; 2nd, a cruet stand, E. Copping; and 3rd, a cake basket, by T. J. Potter.

All these prizes were presented by the Laing Manufacturing company.

No. 12. Quarter mile race, for drivers in the ale and biscuit trade—W. Miller, 1st; J. Paiement, 2nd; S. Legault, 3rd.

No. 13. Hundred yards dash, Marotte & Leblanc's special race, open to grocers and employes only—1st prize gold medal, C. Huot; 2nd B. Taylor; 3rd, L. Dagenault.

No. 14. Quarter mile race, for beer and ale drivers—P. Keys, 1st; M. O. Rourke, 2nd; J. Barron, 3rd.

No. 15. Hundred yards dash, for members of the committee—1st, J. T. Malette; 2nd, L. Marchand; 3rd, W. Corbeille; 4th, T. Gauthier; 5th, M. Lemieux.

After the games were all run off, dancing was the order of the day. The souvenir badges of THE CANADIAN GROCER were very much sought after, especially by the fair sex, who were disappointed when told that they were for our friends the grocers only.

Something must now be said about the committees, every one of which worked hard to furnish enjoyment for their friends. The success of the picnic is largely due to the work of the president, S. Demers, the hon. secretary, Thos. Gauthier, and the chairman of the refreshment and railway committee, A. D. Fraser. All of these gentlemen made everyone at home and succeeded, for all were loud in their praise. The trains were under the management of Harry Ibbotson, outside agent of the C.P.R., who did his best to get the party there on time. At six o'clock a start was made for home by the first train, followed a half an hour after by the next train, arriving in Montreal at 7 and 7.30 o'clock respectively, ending one of the most successful picnics the grocers ever had. The following are the officers and committee to whom the success of the affair is due:

Officers—S. Demers, president; John Robertson, vice-president; Ald. Thomas Gauthier, hon. secretary; John Scanlan, treasurer; C. C. E. Bouthillier, secretary.

Sub-committees—Games, music and dancing—S. D. Vallieres, chairman; Vital Raby, J. B. V. Daoust, M. Lemieux, Philas Desormiers, Joseph Gareau, John Johnson, John Scanlan, B. Connaughton, J. Archambault, W. Corbeil.

Refreshments, printing, advertising and railway—Alex. D. Fraser, chairman; Ald. Gauthier, John Robertson, J. E. Manning, J. O. Levesque, E. Elliott.

Finance—S. Demers, president; S. D. Vallieres, Ald. Thomas Gauthier, A. D. Fraser, John Scanlan.

General committee—Joseph Archambault, R. Bouthillier, A. Bigaouette, John Currie, L. Cleroux, S. Cormier, Michael Delehanty, Joseph Desautels, Alex. D. Fraser, Ald. Thomas Gauthier, Z. Gascon, Z. Goulet, J.

LONDON RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION'S 2ND ANNUAL PICNIC.

The second annual picnic of the London Retail Grocers' Association was held on Wednesday last at Queen's Park, London. Every grocery store in that city was closed for the day. Many of the grocers from neighboring towns, as well as local wholesalers, were guests of the Association. There must have been 6,000 people in attendance. The day was fine, just the kind of day for a picnic. The lemonade, candy and peanut stalls did a large business. At ten o'clock a.m. the grocers' procession left the market square. First came the 7th Band on foot; next the Retail Grocers' Association and their guests in hacks; and last the decorated grocers' wagons. Sixty grocery wagons in line. Every one of them a piece of mechanical art, that must have taken hours of diligent labor. The streets were thronged with citizens, the children taking special delight in some of the original designs the drivers had in line. Arriving at the park, the judges, G. L. Oill, A. McKenzie and John Butler, all of St. Thomas and officers in the Association of that city, awarded prizes for the turnouts of the following grocers: 1st, J. L. Fitzgerald; 2nd, J. Annett; 3rd, Alex. Tytler; 4th, F. A. Rowat & Co.; 5th, Peter Smith (Beehive Grocery); 6th, T. E. Lea. In the judging, the horse, wagon, harness, and decorations were the four points kept in view. At the grounds there was a baseball match between the North and South sides of Dundas street. There was some good playing shown by both teams, the score being 10 to 7 in favor of the North. The players were: North side—J. Self, c.; W. Wilson, c. f.; W. Wandless, 1st b.; Donaghy, 2nd b.; Osborne, s.s.; J. Trebilcock, 3rd b.; L. Jeffries, p. Ranaham, r. f.; Burton, l. f. South side—Culbert, c. and 2 b.; C. J. Wall, 3 b.; Ferguson, c. and 2 b.; C. Nichols, p. and s. s.; Rossie, r. f.; J. Shaw, 1st b.; Saunders, l. f.; G. Trebilcock, s. s. and p. The score was as follows:

Innings	1 2 3 4 5 6 7
North Side	10 16 11 10—10
South Side	3 0 0 0 2 11—7

The other events were foot races, bicycle races, horse races and dancing. The programme was very long, and space will not permit us to give the events in full. The picnickers lingered until the 38 events of the programme had been gone through with, and then at 7 o'clock started for home, having had the largest day London has seen for years. The members on the various committees may feel satisfied that they did their duty well, and the success of their efforts is worthy of commendation. The following is a list of those on the committees:

The Managing Committee was—W. H. Ferguson, president; John Moule, vice-president; C. J. Wall, treasurer; E. Sutton, secretary.

Grounds Committee—James Fitzgerald (chairman), James Annett, W. H. Sanborn, Henry McCutcheon, Charles Deeper, Y. F. Mossop, B. R. Sloan, John Woods, James Dobbin, George Loveless, J. M. NOTES.

The London grocers were in it.

The St. Thomas grocers are good fellows.

W. L. Baker, representing Sapolio, was in the procession.

White dresses and fans were conspicuous in the grand stand.

Every one will look forward with interest too the next grocers' picnic.

There was a number of grocers from the surrounding country present.

The dancing on the platform afforded much amusement for the grand stand.

THE GROCER presented souvenir badges. Five hundred of these were given away. We tender our thanks for the many compliments received on their account.

The press represented was The Advertiser, and Free Press of London, and THE CANADIAN GROCER, Toronto.

President Ferguson was around shaking hands with every person on the grounds. He made everything pleasant for everybody.

J. L. Fitzgerald acted as marshal of the procession, mounted on a handsome bay horse. He also did duties as starter for the races.

The judges of the races in the ring were Thos. A. Browne, Thos. Gillean, and F. Saunders. J. W. Jones and T. W. Vanstone were referees.

Secretary Sutton, is a worker. For the last two months he has devoted the most of this time to the picnic. London grocers may well be proud of him.

A JOINT EMPLOYEES' EXCURSION.

As is annually customary with John Taylor & Co. and R. & T. Watson, these firms gave their employees an outing on Friday last. The two firms made special arrangements with the Empress of India, and issued 600 complimentary tickets to their employees and friends to enjoy a pleasant sail to St. Catharines, and a day's outing in the city park. Heintzman's band was engaged for the occasion and supplied excellent music. The Empress left Toronto with the gay excursionists at 8 a. m., and arriving at Port Dalhousie transferred her passengers to the train for the picnic grounds. The majority had their baskets and were soon enjoying a dinner of the good things they had brought with them. Others registered at the different hotels and feasted before going up to the park. The weather was rather warm, until a passing thunder storm which let down the rain in torrents, passed over the city. This did not prevent the enjoyment of dancing in the large pavilion on the grounds. Then the races and baseball match took place. In the latter a picked team from each firm played only two innings each. Had the weather and time permitted, it would have been an interesting feature of the day's programme. In the races, Frank Smith, who has officiated so often in the same capacity, acted as

NOTES.

The employers may well feel proud of their employees' the order was excellent throughout the entire trip.

Would it not be in line if other firms would do likewise with their help ?

Cigars and candies were passed around frequently by Morse Taylor, both going and returning on the water.

Geo. H. Baillie, Taylor's foreman, makes a jolly companion. He was a favorite with everybody.

The "Empire" "World" and THE CANADIAN GROCER were represented on special invitation from the two firms.

There are some good voices in the combined firms, and the company was favored frequently with songs.

LONDON INDIGO BLUE AUCTIONS.

The third quarterly indigo auctions in London were brought to a close in one day, instead of occupying the best part of a week. Only 3,050 chests were declared for sale, the smallest number ever offered in the July sales. The reasons are: Stock below the average, moderate if not low ruling prices, more or less adverse crop reports and large orders by Persian Gulf buyers. The latter are quite exceptional, and are usually the precursors of a short crop, as the Persian Gulf buyers as a rule supply their wants direct from the Calcutta, Madras or Bombay markets. It is worth noting that only 470 chests were sold on Monday under the hammer, the remainder (except about 700 sold privately) being withdrawn. The stock is only 8,128 chests, and therefore orders to the extent of 1,000 chests, the quantity estimated to have been bought recently for the Persian Gulf, would naturally affect the market.

POST YOURSELF ON TEAS.

Comparatively few country merchants are judges of tea in the sample. In buying stocks they depend almost entirely on what the salesman tells them, and if he happens to be one who wishes to take advantage of their lack of knowledge there is nothing to prevent his doing it.

It is not to be expected that every merchant can become an expert in the testing of teas, but he can put himself into position to know something about them. There are books within the reach of almost every dealer that tell of the methods of tea culture and this is important to understand as a foundation to a general knowledge of the subject.

The tea trade is perhaps the most important a country merchant has to deal with. A good tea will hold a good many patrons for him and poor teas will turn a good many away from him. Isn't it important then to be able to select good stock and not be dependent on the salesman who shows you the goods? Some houses have better stocks than others, but if you do not have the knowledge to see the difference you will be likely to buy of the first line of samples shown you simply because the salesman tells you that his line is as complete as any on the road.

Then you can sell teas better if you understand them. A merchant would not be regarded as a very competent dry goods salesman if he knew nothing about the quality of goods and the colors that go in harmony. Yet the average tea salesman is about as competent to sell tea as such a dry goods clerk would be to sell dry goods. The great trouble with so many merchants is that they neglect to inform themselves on important matters like these. It would take but little study to acquire a fair knowledge of the tea business. A good deal of information can be gleaned from the salesman if the questions are put judiciously. And yet many do not think it worth the trouble to ask a few questions, and then many of them will wonder why business progress is not better. Look into these matters.—Commercial Bulletin.

A woman residing in Austenville complained at the town hall a few days ago that a Dahlia street grocer was selling tobacco to her 11-year-old son, and though warned not to do so persisted in selling it to the lad. It would seem that the grocer does not know that it is now illegal to sell tobacco to boys under 16.—Halifax Morning Chronicle.

THE TOBACCO DUTY.

The following circular has been received by the tobacco manufacturers of this city :

Ottawa, July 30, 1892.

Sir,—Suggestions have been made that the system of collecting the excise duty on tobacco and cigars be changed, and that instead of collecting the duty on the manufactured product, as now practised, the duty be levied by and paid to the customs on the raw leaf tobacco when imported, and that the stamping of the goods be abolished.

The department is desirous of obtaining the views of manufacturers upon the change proposed, and would ask an expression of your opinion at as early a date as possible.

Kindly send your reply to the Commissioner of Inland Revenue, Ottawa.

I remain, sir, your obedient servant,
(Signed) W. J. GERALD,
Inspector of Tobacco and Factories.

The Halifax Morning Chronicle says: The egg trade to the United States has virtually ceased. During the year ending June 30th, 1890, the value of the export from the Cornwallis Valley was $9,121, and in 1891, $1,189. For the year ending June 30, 1892, not a single egg was exported to the States from the same district.

A great many localities in the Maritime Provinces were at one time noted for the quality of their oysters, as well as for the fertility of the beds from which these mollusks were taken, but they have of late become depleted, and in some cases entirely exhausted owing to various causes. During the past year an appropriation of $5000 has been voted by Parliament for the survey of oyster beds, and a start has been made, under the supervision of two experts brought from England for the purpose. A system of licensing grounds especially for other planting has also been devised similar to that in force in France and other European countries. Already private individuals have planted a large area, chiefly with Prince Edward Island oysters.

The steamer Empress of Japan brings additional details of the volcanic eruption of Gunong Aroo, on Great Sangir island, June 7. The town of Toroano was buried by ashes, and the enormous cocoanut plantations covering the hills on the head of Toroano bay were destroyed. One captain, who was there with a ship at the time, estimates that 10,000 lives were lost on the island, which presents a most dismal appearance. Relief has been forwarded to the survivors from neighboring islands.

A case possessing considerable interest to grocers was decided at the London (Ont.) Police Court on Thursday by Magistrate Parke. The defendant was Henry McBean, grocer, Dundas street, and the alleged offence charged against him was that of selling liquor without a license. The charge was preferred by Inspector Henderson. This was the first case tried there under the provisions of the Act passed at the last session of the Legislature, which makes the defendant under such a charge a competent and compellable witness. Plenty of similar cases have been tried heretofore, but a conviction was frequently impossible for lack of the defendant's testimony. To-day the defendant was first called, after he had entered a plea of not guilty. He had no license, and admitted having, upon several occasions within the past month, delivered liquors to customers in half-dozen or dozen bottle lots. He did not keep any liquor in his store, but when customers requested him to procure liquor for them and deliver the same with other orders he did so, and when not paid cash by the customer he charged for the as "cash paid for liquor." The magistrate gave judgment against the defendant, and fined him $50.

Steamship Wakefield, Captain Sheldrake, arrived in port last week, from Iloilo. She has a cargo of sugar for the Redpath refinery. The Wakefield left Iloilo, on May 17, and met with some heavy weather, although no damage was done. Among the crew are 10 Chinamen.

The steamer America, engaged in the fruit trade and chartered by Messrs. T. S. & G. Vipond, arrived in Montreal on Monday, this being her second trip from the West Indies. Her cargo consisted of 12,000 bunches of bananas and other tropical fruits. The trade has become such an extensive one, and Montreal developed into such a great distributing point, that next season the Messrs. Vipond have engaged for two steamers per month.

Thomas Potter, the fruit auctioneer, held a very successful sale of California fruit. There was offered a car made up of pears, peaches and plums, consigned to Vipond, McBride & Co. from Porter Bros. & Co. The car was exactly nine days on the road and was the first car to come direct from the Pacific to Montreal. The market is not in very good condition, and the prices realized surprised the trade. The 350 boxes of Bartlett pears sold at $2.62½ to $3.05; 482 boxes of Crawford peaches at $1.60 to $1.65; 20 boxes of Washington plums at $3.45, and 5 boxes of P. D. plums at $3.62½ per box. These sales will be continued every week in future, the next sale being expected for next Thursday.

THE "LAKE WINNIPEG."

Last night, as usual, was sailing night for two of the large steamship lines interested in this port. The vessels do not actually sail on Tuesday evenings, but all the passengers go aboard and the ship is put in readiness to start at the first glimmer of sunlight in the morning. At the Beaver Line wharf, nicely painted and trim, lay the steamship Lake Winnipeg, receiving passengers and the remaining portions of her cargo. For the Lake Winnipeg to carry first cabin passengers is something new, but easily accounted for. The Beaver Line finding it necessary to enlarge their passenger accommodation, decided to convert part of the freight space of the Lake Winnipeg into a saloon and several state rooms. These are all in the spar deck. The work has all been done in Montreal, and is a credit to the contractor, Mr. Shearer, and to Canadian enterprise. The saloon is large, airy and well lighted, nicely carpeted and well upholstered. Last evening, with the many flowers and evergreens, it looked charming. The state rooms are also comfortably furnished and large, and there is a nice bath room for the use of the passengers. The Lake Winnipeg has accommodation for about fifty first-class passengers. Last evening Captain C. F. Herriman celebrated the completion of the alterations by giving a little supper. There were present Mr. Jonathan Hodgson, one of the directors of the Beaver Line, Mr. Richard White, Mr. D. Battersby, Mr. W. J. White, Mr. W. W. Campbell, passenger agent of the line, and several others. After the good things had been disposed of toasts were the order of the evening.

Mr. R. White proposed the health of Captain Herriman and his good ship Lake Winnipeg. The captain made a suitable and happy reply. Speeches were also made by Mr. Campbell, Mr. Battersby, and Mr. W. J. White, and after a pleasant chat the party broke up. Great praise was given the Beaver Line for the manner in which they treated their passengers.

The Lake Winnipeg, since she had her new triple expansion engines put in last fall, has been making good time, and is now about the fastest vessel of the line. She has made some good runs.—Montreal Witness.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, Aug. 4, 1892.
GROCERIES.

Midsummer dulness is seldom long dispelled by any surprises in the way of brisk business. The holiday season is on and there seems to be nothing in the way of employers and employes taking their holidays in due turn, and at the moment nearly every house has given leave of absence for a fortnight to some one or two of its staff. The consumptive demand works in the grudging way it always does at this season, buying only bare necessities, and grocers have little motive in their trade for buying anything but sugar. Sugar is not appreciably changed in any respect from the position it was brought into early in the month of July. Canned goods are in fair demand, Valencia raisins receive their due share of attention, tea sells slowly, and general lines are quiet. Payments are unimproved.

COFFEE.

The Rio market is firmer. Importers find the price ruling last week hard to deal at now, and some purchases made on the primary market have been made at an advance of 1c. upon the prices paid for previous shipments. In other classes of coffee there is no change to report. Selling is not active. Prices are 17½ to 21c. for Rios, 22 to 25c. for Porto Ricos, 26 to 28c. for Padang, 28 to 32c. for Mocha, 30 to 35c. for Java.

DRIED FRUIT.

Valencia raisins are favored with another buying spell. Retailers' orders this week have been quite numerous and have made some copious drafts upon stocks. The price for the greater proportion of the stock now handled is 5 to 5½c., though some off-stalk at 4¾c. is still to be had. The New York market is working up a little higher. California has been a buyer on that market, for the reason that the report of the California crop of raisins favors the expectation of a very considerable shortage. It is expected that raisins held here will be wanted again in New York before the new crop comes to the relief of the market. There is a considerable quantity held here which was bought when prices were on the way down and which might thus find its way back to New York when prices are on their way up. Currants have improved since last week. Good Provincials below 5c. are now extremely hard to get. There are grades at 4¾c., but they do not rank high. Firmness in New York has benefited the market here. Prunes are quiet at 5¾ to 6c. Dates are dull at 5 to 5½c. Candied peel quotes at 16 to 17c. for lemon, orange 18c., citron 26 to 28c. Nuts call for no special notice, no new condition having appeared in the market.

RICE AND SPICES.

Wholesalers report a trade in rice lighter than the average this summer. Stocks are not over-full but easily suffice for all current demands. The price runs from 3¾c. to 4c. for common, and 5 to 5½c. for Japan.

Spices remain substantially as they were in most lines and do not come into prominence in the grocery trade done these days. Brown sago, very scarce sometime ago, and not yet in stock, will soon be to hand. Prices will be easier. The scarcity in England led to high prices in London, which checked buying in this market and caused local stocks to run down.

SUGARS.

Trade in sugar is still the absorbing business in grocery warehouses and salesrooms. There is as little money in it as ever. The retailer buys and sells at lower prices than he ever did before. Wholesalers try to make something out of the elasticity of prices. If they meet a customer so tough that they must sell to him below cost or miss a sale,

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

Consumption is not saturated for any considerable time by the purchases that are made from jobbers' hands. Hence there is always room for the continuance of business, as the demand is never sated. Small parcels going out are an earnest that other parcels will shortly have to follow, so that distribution is always busy but never called upon to exert itself. The week has a good average record of sales in assorted vegetables—peas, corn and tomatoes. A carload was sold on Monday. The drain is steady and considerable enough to give fair promise of exhausting the supply before renewal from the new pack amounts to much. New peas are in but old ones are still preferred, the new ones lacking the confirmation that a few weeks' storage always gives them. The extent of the coming pack this season is a good guessing problem, the matter being devoid of anything in the shape of ascertained data that could be of service for the purpose of making an estimate. The general feeling among jobbers is that it is prudent to await events and not try to anticipate them as buyers did in former years. Salmon is scarce and firm. The price is $1.50 to $1.60. To Canning Men.-OUR CYCLONE PULP MACHINE

For making tomato pulp and preparing pumpkin and squash for canning is very well known to all the canners in the United States, and a few of them are in use in Canada. The high tariff has prevented their being used extensively heretofore.

We are now manufacturing these machines at Oakville, Ont., to enable our Canadian friends to obtain them without paying a heavy duty; but we shall make only a few of them unless ordered. Those who contemplate purchasing, should send their orders promptly to insure the saving of duty, as late orders will have to be filled from stock in the United States which will be subject to a 30 per cent duty.

MARKETS—Continued.

firm at the canneries. The stock of the old pack is not yet exhausted here and the consumptive demand is rather moderate.

MONTREAL.

Canned goods are quiet and uninteresting with a very limited demand. The grocery trade here are only buying for immediate requirements preferring to wait for new supplies before buying any quantities. New peas and beans have arrived and are now being offered, but the trade show a strong desposition to work off their old stock before making new contracts.

they generally let him have his way and the sugar. If some less obstinate man comes along a little later he'll probably pay a price that will yield a profit. There are some men that it is easier to make a profit out of than others. It is by trade with the former that the majority of the jobbers hope to make their sugar business pay. The man who pays without a struggle the price asked by the wholesaler usually pays a full price. Also the man who owes for a bill of goods is not in so good a position to treat for inside prices as the man who does not. The cash buyer is usually a recalcitrant buyer, and does not part with his money until he is well assured that there is nothing more to be gained by holding on to it for further concessions. The buyer who negotiates with his money in his pocket gets the best that's going. There are sales made at 4¼c. for granulated in car lots and 3¼c. for yellow in the same quantities, but this price is not common. The range is from 10 to 25c. per 100 lbs. higher than this for the majority of sales. Several carloads have been sold this week. Yellows have constituted a considerable proportion of the stock that has gone into trade. For raws the market is dull. Demerara in barrels is 4c., Barbados 3½c., Louisiana 2¾c. In New York the price of refined was advanced 1-16c. last week. The market for beet has strengthened, owing to a reduction in the stock of firsts.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.

Trade in syrups remains of small proportions. Prices likewise continue to quote favorably to the buyer. There is some talk of shortage at the refineries, but this is denied. There is too little business doing on this market for any notice to be taken of shortage even if it were very decided. Quotations run from 1½c. upwards.

Molasses has not been moved at all by buyers on this market. The price is firmer. A cargo of Barbados was sold in Montreal the other day at a price 3c. a gallon higher than the same grades went for previous to the St. John's fire. Trinidad quotes from 35 to 37c. in puncheons, New Orleans in barrels is 30 to 32c., Porto Rico hogsheads are 38 to 40c.

TEAS.

Wholesalers are not busy distributing, but do not seem averse to buying good low grade teas at fair prices. Holders appear to understand the value of their stock, however, and do not part with it at low figures. Jobbers have bought a few Japans, but in rather small quantities. Buyers are cautious and do not take it for granted that the firmer tone of the market is a permanent thing, though there is little to warrant the view that it is not. Montreal men have been buying much more freely and paying 1c. to 1½c. higher than Toronto jobbers give. Ceylons are gaining ground in trade favor, and considerable quantities have been bought by local wholesalers. The tea market is considered to be in a very satisfactory condition for all grades and classes.

MARKET NOTES.

[Importers, wholesale merchants and manufacturers should send any items intended for this department so that they may reach the head office not later than Wednesday morning. The editor will always welcome such information.]

H. P. Eckardt & Co. are offering excellent value in Ceylon teas in all grades.

Warren Bros. & Boomer are now the only holders of Horse Shoe salmon upon this market. They continue to sell at $1.60.

McWilliam & Everist sold by auction a car of California fruit at their warehouse on Thursday last. The sale included 307 boxes Bartlett pears, 432 boxes Crawford peaches, 5 boxes P. D. plums, 20 boxes Washington plums. The pears were taken in lots at from $2.75 to $3.40, the P. D. plums at $3 to $3.30, the Washington plums at $3.75 to $4, the peaches at $1.55 to $1.75.

It was reported that a 500 bbl order for granulated was offered to the Montreal refinery that would fill it at $4.20, but both refused it.

Geo. Musson & Co. received cable advice on Monday that the price of Rio coffee had been advanced 1c. in the primary market. A shipment is now on the way for the same firm.

Sloan & Crowther have just received their second shipment of new Clover Leaf salmon. The first was exhausted a short time after it came to hand. The price is a little higher, being now quoted at $1.50 to $1.60.

George Childs & Co., Montreal, are landing another shipment of Lazenby & Sons' pickles by the "Rosarion" and have a full assortment of these high class goods by the same steamer.

Reports as to the Japanese rice crop are of a promising nature. A good early harvest is anticipated. The quotation for rice has fallen consequently, and is expected to drop lower than $6 per koku.

The New York Commercial Bulletin notes that there are rumors of a combination of beef packers again in circulation. The latest story is that the proposed combination will include every concern in the country of any standing or influence.

Eby, Blain & Co. are offering the Orient brand teas, a shipment of which has just come to hand. This is a very attractive package line. Travellers are on the road with samples this week, and consider the Orient an easy line to sell.

The orders for the Cunningham & De Fournier Co's. potted meats and game delicacies are coming in very freely. This is the third season for these goods. Once used they are sure to be repeated. Eby, Blain & Co. are the agents here.

A. M. Smith & Co., London, are landing a full line of Lazenby's pickles and other choice preparations ex the "Rosarion." The continued increase in the sale of these goods is very marked and the agents must feel pleased.

According to late advices, fishing for sardines off the French coast is still attended with unsatisfactory results, the catches being poor, and the prices at which they are locally sold very high, and the prospects for packers for another season are extremely gloomy.

McWillie Bros., Toronto, are showing a very full assortment of Lazenby & Sons' pickles and sauces and report them as the most satisfactory line of that class that they handle. Palestine soup put up by Lazenby & Son is a delicious article that has pleased their customers greatly.

Munn's Canned Caplin, packed in Newfoundland, are one of the choicest delicacies for restaurants and pic-nic parties. They have wide sale wherever introduced. James Turner & Co., Hamilton, are putting them on the market through their trade, and have ordered 5,000 tins to be forwarded at once.

Mail advices from London, under date 23d July, say: The market for low grades China tea is very weak, and some excellent values are obtainable. Ceylons are firmer, especially low grades. Indians are without quotable alteration, but with a tendency to decline. Greens steady, low grade Young Hysons scarce.

Small pearl sago is again more plentiful, and the latest report states that the cultivators of this commodity are turning their attention entirely to this grade, owing, no doubt, to the advanced prices recently obtained, while they have neglected the medium and large grades. If this is correct, prices of the latter are sure to advance, although the consumption is much lighter than that of the small.

The steamer Princess Louise, Captain McCullough, which arrived from northern points on Thursday, brought encouraging news for the owners of the Skeena River canneries. The River so far has been very good, and some of the canneries had 9,000 cases packed before the Louise left. They expected to fill all their cans this week. The salmon were not so plentiful at River's Inlet, but on the Naas the canneries have done fairly well, and it is expected that they also will have a full pack. About 2,000 cases have been put up at Alert Bay, the fish not being very plentiful.—Vancouver News-Advertiser.

W. Boulter, president of the Canadian Canned Goods Packers' Association, was in the city on Saturday on his way to the Pacific coast. He says the strawberry pack in eastern Ontario was very light: about half the average. Raspberries were frozen last fall and only a small quantity was put up. There were no cherries and there will be no plums: this seems to be general over Ontario. Tomatoes are backward, having suffered in the early part of the season from wet and grubs and from potato bugs—for the first time—they had to be set in many cases a second and third time; the recent hot weather has brought them on very rapidly. Corn is looking well with the present hot weather. The pea pack is about completed, this hot weather shortened the time of packing to a couple of weeks, and the total put down will be less than last year.

According to an official report on German trade, the business in coffee was hardly remunerative last year, as the great variations in prices took away all confidence. Owing to the annually diminishing production of coffee in Ceylon, the business between England and Germany has greatly decreased, and a substitute for such finer descriptions of coffee has had to be sought for elsewhere. The market has discovered this substitute in some Central American growths—those from Salvador and Guatemala, countries that are greatly improving their crops in point of quality. As regards these last named descriptions, for which London was formerly also the chief market, business has now been transferred elsewhere. Part of the German demand is at present supplied via Havre and Hamburg, from which ports exports to Central America have increased considerably, and part is covered by direct purchases in the coffee-producing countries, so that the coffee trade between Germany and England in comparison to former times, has become reduced to a minimum.

Regarding the Boston mackerel market, the "Commercial Bulletin" of that city says: "Owing to large receipts from the fleet and foreign sources prices have further declined, and the market closes unsettled. Last fare sale was at $10 per barrel right through, $3 less than a week ago. Cargo lots from Nova Scotia are quoted nominally at $10 to $12 per barrel, but buyers are holding off for further developments. Fares ranging from 100 to 350 barrels each have been landed at Gloucester and Portland from Bay of Fundy during the week, and the prospect for a good catch in that direction is quite promising. Several vessels have been added to the fleet, and others are fitting out as fast as possible. A few small catches have been

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

The flour market shows no more life now than it did a week ago. The sales for shipping are easily counted. Prices have retained the character noted last week, and cannot be described as either firm or easy. Cars of straight roller have changed hands every day at $3.75. Feed is firmly held, but large transactions are exceptional. Some sales of bran at $9.50 Toronto freights are reported, but holders generally ask $10.

FLOUR.—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.95 to $5; strong bakers', $4.50; white wheat patents, $4.80; straight roller, $4.40; low grades, per bag, $1.25 to $1.50.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.80 to $4.90; Manitoba strong bakers' $4.25 to $4.40; Ontario patents, $3.90 to $4.20; straight roller, $3.65 to $3.75; extra, $3.20 to $3.25; low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.50.

MEAL—Oatmeal is $3.80. Cornmeal is $3.50.

FEED—Bran is $11 to $11.50, shorts $13 $14, mixed feed $22, feeding corn 50 to 52, oats 33c.

HAY—Is fairly active at $9.50 to $10. for No. 1 new timothy and $9.50 for new.

STRAW—Is steady at $6.50 to $7.

MONTREAL.

Business in flour "on spot," is quiet, the demand being chiefly local; a few sales of straight roller and extra are noted at quotations. Values remain steady. We quote: Patent spring, $4.70 to $4.90; patent winter, $4.60 to $4.75; straight roller, $4.00 to $4.30; extra, $3.50 to $3.65; superfine, $3.15 to $3.30; fine, $2.90 to $3.10; strong bakers, $4.40 to $4.60.

Oatmeal meets with a fair enquiry, at about steady prices. Stocks are heavy. We quote: Granulated, bbls $3.90 to $4; rolled bbls., $3.90 to $4.00; Standard, bbls., $3.85 to $3.95; granulated in bags, $1.90 to $2.00; rolled in bags, $1.90 to $2.00; standard in bags, $1.80 to $1.90.

Bran and shorts are in fair local demand. Mouille is quiet. Quotations are as follows; Bran per ton, $12.50 to $13.50; shorts per ton, $14.00 to $14.50; mouille per ton, $19.00 to $22.00.

made in Barnstable Bay and brought in fresh but for a few days past the fish have disappeared and only an occasional straggler has been caught in the traps. Fair fishing is reported at Cape Breton and Prince Edward Island. Owing to the drop in cargo prices dealers are quoting lower, but there is no reliable basis as the quality of the fish varies considerably. Receipts for the week, 103 barrels from home, and 5,700 barrels from foreign ports. The fleet landed about 5,000 barrels, and catch to date is 15,850 barrels, against 9,393 barrels last year."

PETROLEUM.

The local market is dull and unchanged, Canadian refined continuing to quote at 14 to 14½c. outside, and half a cent higher delivered in the city.

The Petrolia Advertiser reports:—Petrolia crude $1.26¾ per barrel; Oil Springs crude $1.27¼ per barrel. The crude petroleum oil market has certainly a quiet look—taking a rest as it were, before an active season's work. This is usual however at this time of the year. Prospective purchasers of refined oil wait to see how the market will open as regards prices, and when that is determined upon there is generally a scramble for oil. At the present time it is almost a waste of time to talk about prices, as they are merely nominal in the absence of important business. At the same time so with crude, sales of crude are occurring daily but they are also nominal and are not to be accepted as indicating exchange prices, as there is really no business of importance being done on the exchange.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The butter market is of the same general character as it was a week ago. Sellers are not especially favored by prices, but they can find buyers without trouble and can get fairly good value for their butter. Good store-packed butter sells at from 13 to 15c., and 16c. is paid for fine dairy tub, but the quality must be prime. The receipts this week have been quite liberal but have been cleared up smartly. Two cars of June yellows were shipped last week. They were purchased on private terms, but as the sellers are willing to pick up as much more as they can get a hold of at the prices quoted above, it seems reasonable to assume that a paying advance on these prices was realized on the cars referred to. Low grade stuff, that holders would take 10c. for, is also a free selling line. The call for this from the manufacturers of a butter-substitute in New York, has been considerable since the decision of the United States Treasury to grant a rebate of 99 per cent. of all the duty paid on the material of such of this substitute as is exported. This makes the admission of low grade butter for this purpose practically free and a large quantity has been bought for this trade. A considerable quantity of butter of various grades is held in Montreal. There is a lot of creamery butter in store here, which the holders want 19 to 21c. for.

The jobbing price of cheese is firm at 9½ to 10c. The demand is not above the usual strength.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Interest has fallen off almost entirely. Prices are from 90c. to $1.20, according to quantity and quality.

DRIED AND EVAPORATED APPLES—Sun-dried are more firmly held at 4 to 4½c., the supposed shortage in the crop of green fruit causing an appreciation in the value. Evaporated are also more firmly held, though not quoted higher, 6½ to 7c. remaining the current quotation.

EGGS—The market is more favorable to sellers. The price is up to 11c., and is firm. Strictly fresh stock is not plentiful.

HONEY—The market is very dull. Prices are unchanged at 5 to 7c. for extracted, and 14c. for sections.

HOPS—Present indications point to a very small surplus of yearlings when new hops come on the market. Holders here are getting out of stock one by one. The price still quotes at 21 to 24c. for 1891 and 16 to 18c., for good 1890's. The new crop so far is promising.

PROVISIONS.

Thesigns indicate an exhaustion of smoked meats before the new cure comes in, unless the visible supply be increased before the year is over. Some houses are now out of rolls, breakfast bacon, and backs. A carload of hams was sold on Monday. An inquiry for a half car of assortments called forth the answer that the stock was not on hand.

BACON—Long clear is 8c., smoked backs are 11c., bellies 11c., rolls 9c.

HAMS—Are steady at 11c.

LARD—Pure is unchanged at 9½ to 10c. for tubs and pails. Compound is steady at 7 to 9c.

BARREL PORK—U. S. heavy mess is $13 to $14, Canadian $15, short cut $16.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef is 3½ to 4½c. in fore and 7½ to 9c. in hindquarters, mutton is 7 to 7½c. Lamb 9½ to 11c., mutton 7 to 8c., veal 7 to 8½c.

VEGETABLES.

New potatoes are now plentiful at $1.25 to $1.50 per barrel. The call is almost entirely for new stock now, old being only occasionally saleable at 20 to 25c. per bag. Tomatoes are $1 per basket. Watermelons are 20 to 30c. Canteloupes, otherwise musk melons, are very scarce at $2.50 to $3 per crate. Cabbage are $1.25 to $1.50 per crate. Celery is 50 to 60c. per doz. Egyptian onions are $2.50 per sack. Bermudas are done.

GREEN FRUIT.

The weather has cooled down sufficiently to make a perceptible difference in the demand for lemons, which had just taken a turn for the better under the stimulus of the hot spell. They are quoted now at from $4.50 to $6. Oranges are steady at $6 per box. Rodis are now about all there are to be had. Bananas are scarce at $1.50 to $2. The California fruits now selling are peaches at $1.75 to $2, plums at $2.75 to $3.50, pears at $3 to $3.50, grapes at 60c. to $1. Apricots are done. Some Canadian peaches, clingstones, are now in stock. The price is $1 to $1.25. Canadian pears range from 50c. to $1 per basket according to quality. Of local fruits, raspberries quote at 7½ to 10c. and are plentiful, gooseberries at 50 to 75c., huckleberries at 75c. to $1, cherries at $1.25 to $1.50, and very scarce, black currants at $1.25 to $1.50, red currants at $1 to $1.25.

FISH.

The fish market has little chance of improving just now. Dulness is as decided a feature as ever. Salmon trout and white fish are 6½c., lake herring are $1.50 to $1.75, salmon 14c.

SALT.

The demand is better, a considerable call for barrels and sacks having been developed by the hot weather. Haying gave an impetus to the sale of salt that is not entirely over yet. Prices are steady at quotations in Prices Current.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW.

HIDES—The basis is 4½c., the price of No. 1 green cows'. Cured are steady at 5c.

SKINS—Pelts are 35c., lambskins 45c., calfskins 5 to 7c.

WOOL—The price of fleeces is steady at 17c. for combing grades, 20c. for clothing wool. For pulled, super is 22c., extra super 25 to 26c.

TALLOW—Is unchanged at 2c., for rough 5 to 5½c. for rendered.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, Aug. 5, 1892.

GROCERIES.

The grocery trade at this point has shown a marked improvement during the week, all lines having a better feeling. Prices in heavies have advanced and the cutting noted from time to time has been stopped. Sugar is now in good demand and refiners are looking brighter. Molasses has advanced and is now selling at 33c. in a jobbing way. Rice has had a boom during the week. Coffees are firm, and the new departure in green fruit promises to give us a weekly sale of California fruit. The sale last week was such a success that it only lasted a half-hour bidding was so brisk. The wholesale trade say they have no fault to find with the state of affairs. They also say their men are doing well on the road.

SUGAR.

The sugar market has shown a better feeling during the week, this being largely due to the trade selling at steadier prices. The refiners here, say the demand although only of a jobbing nature, is good, and that quite a few small lots have been cleaned out. The wholesale trade are also doing a fair trade, and at larger profits. The old sugar war, is to a certain extent dropped, all the English houses selling for steady prices. It is still reported that the two rival French houses are still cutting, but it is hard to find-out definitely. We quote: Granulated 4½ to 49-16c.; yellows, low grade 3½ to 3¾c., and yellows bright 3¾ to 4¼c.

TEAS.

The tea market is very much firmer than it was last week, especially in Japans, which are meeting with good demand at steady prices. Advices from Japan report a short crop this season. This has the desired effect on buyers here who seem to be taking hold freer than usual. In blacks business has also been good.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There is only a small demand for syrup both in American and Canadian. Prices are held the same as cutting would not induce business. The molasses war is now over and dealers here are now selling at 32 to 33 cents. Stocks here are light and the demand fair, one wholesaler here says he is glad things have been fixed.

COFFEE.

Coffee is about the same as noted in our last weeks report. Stocks here are now very light and dealers talk firm. What stock of Rios that is held here has had good call, several small lots going during the week. We quote:—Rios 18 to 20c.; Java, 23 to 25c.; Mocha, 24 to 25c.; Jamaica, 19 to 21c.; and Maracaibo, 22½ to 23c, Santos, 17½ to 19c.

RICE.

The demand for rice during the week has been good. The mills have shipped several car lots to the west and provinces. The wholesale trade have been doing a good trade lately, and on the whole business is satisfactory to both miller and wholesaler. We quote standard $4 to $4.10, Japan $4.50 to $5, Patnas $4.50 to $5, and Carolinas $7 to $8 per hundred pounds.

SPICES.

The demand for spices is still the same, and the trade doing is still of a jobbing nature. We hear of some small sales during the week but that is all there is to note.

NUTS.

Nuts are still quiet and unchanged the business doing is purely local. Values rule the same. We quote as follows: Almonds Tarragona 14 to 15c.; almonds, Ivica, 14 to 15c.; almonds, common, 10 to 11c.; almonds, hard-shell, 7 to 8c.; walnuts, Grenoble, new 12 to 14c.; walnuts, French 10 to 10½c.; cocoanuts per 100 $3.75 to $4.00; filberts 9 to 10c. pecans 16 to 17c.; peanuts 7 to 10c.

DRIED FRUITS.

The trade doing in dried fruit at this point is small, this is owing to the light stock here. Enquiries for future delivery are plentiful and the prospects for business as soon as the new season opens up is likely lively. Advices from New York say both currants and raisins are very firm under very light stocks. We quote:—Currants, provincials, 4¼c. to 4½c. in bbls; do. 4½ to 4¾c in half bbls; do. 4¼c in cases; currants, Patras, 5c in bbls; do. 5¼c in bbls; do. 5½c in cases. Raisins, Valencias, 4½c.

GREEN FRUIT.

In green fruit the stir has been the Vipond McBride & Co.'s sale of California fruit which was a success so much so that it has been decided to hold a weekly sale as long as the season lasts. Oranges are very scarce and prices are high about $5.50 to $6 being the figure. In California fruit peaches, plums and pears are having good call as the fruit arrives in such fine condition. The banana boat arrived late last week but the fruit on board was too ripe in many cases and we hear of several over ripe lots being sold for 50 to 75 per bunch while good fruit brings a much better price. The stock of wasty fruit has been about all cleared off so that the stock on hand now is all good grade. We quote oranges $5.50 to $6, lemons $4 to $4.50 California peaches $2 to $2.50 per basket, plums $3.50 per crate, pears $3.50 to $4, bananas $1 to $1.50 per bunch, raspberries 65c. per pail, watermelons 20 to 35c., Southern peaches $3.50 to $4.

APPLES.

The apple business is still dull and stocks are so small that they are hard to find. Dried and evaporated fruit are also dull, the business doing is only for actual want. We quote regular $5.50 to $6 per barrel, evaporated 6 to 6½c., dried 4 to 4½c. per lb., and evaporated peaches 12 to 13c. per tin.

ONIONS AND TOMATOES.

Quite a large consignment of spanish onions have been received by one dealer here. They are in such good condition that they are sure to meet with the desired sales. Tomatoes have had good call during the week. We quote onions $2 to $3 per case and tomatoes 40 to 45c. per basket, and carrier selling at $1.35 to $1.65.

HOPS.

Hops are about the same as last week with only a small trade doing. We hear of a few lots of '91 stocks being turned over during the week. Pressed are selling in a jobbing way. We quote bulk 27½c. and pressed at 16 to 18c.

HONEY.

Honey is quiet and the trade doing is very small. There is a large lot of dark colored stock on hand, which can be had very low. We quote strained bright 7 to 8½c., dark 6 to 7c., comb bright 8½ to 10c., dark 7 to 9c.

FISH.

The season for Caspe salmon is now over the last sales, being made at 14 to 15c. British Columbia fish is selling at 13 to 14c. Halibut is moving freely at 10 to 12c., and cod and haddock at 2½ to 3c. Lake trout and white fish sell at 6 to 7c. Smoked Yarmouth bloaters, per 60 box, $1.00 to $1.10; St. John's bloaters, per 100 box, 80c. to $1.00; boneless cod, large boxes, 6 to 7c.; do. small boxes 7 to 8c.; finnan haddies 7 to 8c.

We quote No. 1 herring, per bbl., $4.50 to $4.60; lake trout, per half bbl., $4.00 to $4.25; sea trout, per bbl., $8.25 to $8.75; codfish, green, No. 1, per bbl. $4.75 to $5.00; do. No. 2, per bbl., $4.25 to $4.50; codfish, dried, per bbl., $4.25 to $4.50; salmon, B.C., per bbl., $13 to $13.50; do., Nfld., No. 1, per tee, $22.50 to $23; do. do., No. 2, per tee, $21 to $21.50; do. do., No. 3, per tee, $20 to $20.50.

EGGS.

The egg market is firmer. Receipts are liberal but a very large per centage are bad. Shipments too are larger than usual, and are said to be bringing better money. The range is now about 11 to 12c.

PROVISIONS.

There is no change in the provision market since our last report. Demand being only fair and prices remain unchanged. Lard and smoked meats are also quiet. Canadian short cut, per bbl. $16.75 to $17.50; mess pork, western, per bbl. $16.00 to $16.50; short cut, western, per bbl. $20.00 to $20.50; hams, city cured, per lb. 11c. to 11¼c; lard, Canadian, in pails 8¼ to 8½c; bacon, per lb. 9½ to 10¼c; lard, com. refined, per lb. 7 to 7¼c.

CHEESE AND BUTTER.

The cheese market did not present any striking change to-day, but the tone showed a shade more steadiness than was apparent on Saturday. This was probably due to the shopping around on account of the Liverpool boat which sails to-morrow. In this connection 9c. was the idea for what stock could be picked up under finest. Holders of the latter were firm at our quotations, and it would certainly take 9½ to 9¾ to move any Western colored, with white a shade less. At the wharf this morning 3,000 cheese from the French country sold, the bulk at 9c. with some a fraction more.

Butter was rather quiet to-day on spot, with nothing to note. From the country, however, comes news of further purchases of creamery at 21c., which basis certainly has not been established here in an actual way. Creamery, 20 to 20½c.; Townships dairy, 15 to 17c.; Western dairy, 15 to 16c.

GRAIN.

The grain market was quiet to-day locally with very little to note. Values rule steady.

The stocks in store show a decrease of 116,665 bushels of wheat, 14,685 bushels of peas, 11,393 bushels of barley, 2,967 barrels of flour, 175 barrels of oatmeal, and an increase of 164,520 bushels of oats compared with a week ago. Compared with a year ago there is an increase of 138,269 bushels of wheat, 137,810 bushels of peas, 652,661 bushels of oats, 84,158 bushels of barley, 3,174 bushels of rye, 2,199 barrels of oatmeal, and a decrease of 300 bushels of corn, 18,157 barrels of flour. We quote: No. 2 hard Manitoba 85c.; No. 3 hard Manitoba 74c.;

peas, per 66 lbs. afloat 78 to 78½c.; oats, per 34 lbs. 35½ to 36c.; corn, duty paid 65c.; barley, feed 35 to 40c.

The stocks of grain and flour in store in Montreal on the dates mentioned were as follows:

	July 30, 1892.	July 23, 1892.	Aug. 1, 1891.
Wheat, bush	393,675	510,340	255,408
Corn, bush	1892.	300
Peas, bush	222,427	237,112	84,617
Oats, bush	763,687	599,197	111,016
Barley, bush	107,427	118,820	23,269
Rye, bush	3,714	3,714
Flour, brls	41,774	44,741	59,981
Oatmeal, brls	2,199	3,374

DRY GOODS.

Dry goods during the week has been good, and all the travellers out are doing a nice trade. The retailers in the country have been taking hold more freely during the last few days. The retail trade, here, say business with them has been good. The lines that are having the best call are light summer dress goods and silks. Manufacturers agents say fall orders with them are fine, and prospects for future business is bright. Payments are coming in better.

ST. JOHN, N. B., MARKETS.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Aug. 4, 1892.

GROCERIES.

Trade in grocery lines has been rather quiet the past week. Farmers are all busy with their haying, which in part is the cause of slackening off in business.

SUGARS—Are still very low, though molasses is considerably firmer owing to recent advances in West India Islands. In fish there is a good demand, and prices are somewhat firmer for all kinds of dried.

RICE—The market is very firm and stocks are light. Some claim prices will advance. Present quotations are 3¼ to 3½c.

SUGAR—Is without any change, is in good demand, and no immediate change in values is looked for. Granulated is quoted $4.20 to 4½c., yellows 3¼c. to $3.40, extra C 3½ to 3¾c.

MOLASSES—Barbadoes is the sort of which most is selling, and as prices have advanced somewhat, the demand is less, and the price quoted is 30 to 32c.

FISH—Our market is very bare of all kinds of dry fish. Large Cod would readily sell at $4.75 to $5.25, and mediums are quoted at $3.60 to $4, Pollock at $2.30 to $2.40, smoked herring at 8 to 10c. Pickled fish are also scarce. A few mackerel are coming in, but in small quantities to make a market. Shad are selling at $4.75 to $5.50.

FLOUR—Steady demand for all grades of breadstuffs. Prices are about the same, though the market is inclined downward. Manitoba patients are quoted at $5.50 to $5.60; Ontario high grades at $4.65 to $4.80; medium patients at $4.40 to $4.50.

OATMEAL—The market is quite bare, and prices are somewhat higher, oatmeal selling readily at $4.20 to $4.30 for butts for roller and standard.

CORNMEAL—Very little is moving. It is quoted at $2.80 to $2.90.

W. R. Dack, who is serving a connection of 11 years with Sloan & Crowther, was on Saturday presented by the employees of the firm with a handsome gold locket. The presentation was made by J. Owen. Mr. Dack, in thanking them for this expression of their regard referred in very feeling terms to his pleasant relations with the firm and their staff.

DRY GOODS.

Wholesalers have been quite busy during the past week, despite the fact that the house trade has been almost nothing. The sorting trade has been meagre, and the rush is in filling fall orders. Repeats are beginning to arrive, but mostly in domestic goods, although a few repeats of early shipped English goods are arriving.

Fall and winter orders continue quite strong, and prospects are still encouraging. The crop throughout the Dominion bids fair to surpass the volume of last year. Especially in Ontario are the prospects brilliant; in Quebec, the crops will not be quite so heavy; while that of Manitoba and the West will be somewhat late, and liable to be attacked and made inferior in quality by early frosts. Still the feeling of the trade is very good, and no doubt the volume of goods turned over in Ontario will surpass that of previous seasons. Merchants need not expect that anything prodigious will occur, but if stocks are not too heavy, the retailers will find themselves with few fall and winter goods on hand at the end of the season. Overstocking is a standing evil with many dealers, and should be carefully and constantly avoided. Perhaps the best method of preventing it would be to make terms sixty days, and no renewals. This would bring the credit-man to a realization of his position and prevent many serious disasters.

Domestic manufactures are holding their own in the market. This is especially marked in dress goods such as tweed effects. The very cheap lines are not selling very well, but the better qualities are having a very strong market at fairly good prices.

NOTES.

McMaster & Co. opened, this week, one of the finest ranges of Scotch and Foreign tweed effects in dress goods ever shown in this city. For style and texture these will be found to surpass, in some respects, the domestic productions, and for a street costume or travelling dress cannot be equalled. Many of the patterns shown, were exclusively manufactured for themselves. They also show a full range of their celebrated Fast Dye Cheviots and Estimaines. They are also showing a large variety of ladies scarfs in Surahs, Pongees, and shot effects, also a fine assortment of the scarce and popular Point d'Irlande Laces, Boating shawls in plain and fancy honeycombs and fancy mixtures, Cheviot wraps in fawns and greys. One of these makes a very comfortable addition to the pleasure of a lake sail.

Gordon, MacKay & Co. are very busy sending out flannels, such as union greys, standard wool, St. Hyacinthe, Trent Valley, navys and militarys, wool druggets, flannel sheetings, and white and scarlet saxonys. In yarns they are showing a large range of domestic manufactured, in fingerings and saxonies, as well as a range of imported yarns. They have just received shipments of watered silk ribbons and moss trimmings. Their silk featherine is a beautiful trimming, it is shown in narrow and wide widths, and is intended for neck ruchings as well as dress trimming. It is shown in both German and American manufacture. Their dress goods in Bedford cords and tweed effects are worthy of attention. They are also offering a job line of sealette at a low price, in which they have secured a bargain and intend to give the buyer the benefit.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are meeting the demand of the season for large buttons, by showing several lines of large pearl, metal and celluloid fancy buttons. The novelties shown in the patterns are artistic and varied. Their stock of black and cream veilings has just been renewed; the patterns being mostly nets and spots. They are continuing to turn over large quantities of their domestic and imported knit underwear, for which they have had a strong demand. Fresh shipments of merino and wool half-hose have been received. In suspenders, they are showing some special makes of domestic and imported manufacture. Their line of shirtings shows a well assorted stock, still at the old prices. Their stock of wool and union blankets is immense.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence are showing a very choice lot of chenille curtains. These curtains have grown steadily in public favor, and this year some entirely new styles are seen. Ottoman plush for curtain material is also shown, this is sold by measure, and is a very suitable material for curtain drapings. They have also received among other new goods, a line of gauntlet kid gloves and also fabric gloves with gauntlets. It is not often that the style of glove varies, but at present the tendency towards a gauntlet glove is quite strong, but perhaps it may be but a passing whim and another season may find them again discarded.

A fine range of tartan dress goods is shown by W. R. Brock & Co. These goods are neat and attractive; while their line of French and German tweed effects is extensive and suitable. Their range of neck wear is very complete in knots of various shapes. These are shown in figured satin and sourah and fancy silks, with patterns running mainly into checks and broad stripes. The colors in some cases are quite brilliant and admirably combined, but darker shades are also shown. Their stock of Derbys or four-in-hands is very good, especially in point of prices. They have been offering a special drive in Paris quilts at about ten per cent less than regular prices.

Samson Kennedy & Co. report a strong run at present on men's furnishings. Already they have sent in and received some cable-repeats from across the ocean. Their dark fall and winter shades of knots have sold well, and the demand for tied-by-the-wearer scarfs is on the increase. In knitted goods such as infants caps, bootees, infantees and shawls they have a well-assorted stock. This is also the case with their handkerchiefs, both of Irish and Swiss manufacture; some of the latter especially are well-finished. A line of goods which they are pushing at present is fancy underskirts for ladies. These moreennes are shown in all colors and in different styles, such as braided skirts, feather-trimmed, fancy striped, etc. They have been much in demand the past season.

John Macdonald & Co. have just received shipments of white quilts and lace and chenille curtains. Another arrival is a repeat in a line of Canadian dress goods in Scotch tweed effects. This line comprises: checks, plain mixtures, wales, and novelties, and is of extra good value. They are showing some Bengaline Derbys in sporting spots; in other neckwear, they are showing some new shapes and styles in the Lombard, the Venice, the Berlin, the General, and the Army and Navy. The success attending the sale from the samples has warranted them in placing a very heavy stock on the market, in order to meet the expected strong demand. Their stock of haberdashery has been increased during the past week by several shipments

It is a well-recognized fact that no business establishment is complete without some cash carrier system. Attention is called to the Whiting Cash and Parcel Carrier. It seems in it impossible for anything to get out of order, as there are no cords or springs. Merchants throughout the country, who give it a trial, may satisfy themselves of its merits, feeling satisfied that where once introduced it would never be parted with.

SARNIA, Ont., June 8, 1892.

H. E. WHITING, Esq., London :

DEAR SIR,—I have been using your Cash Carriers for a long time, and must say they fill the bill in every particular, especially as to their keeping in order. It seems to me that they could hardly be improved on.

I remain, yours truly,

THE GIANT AND HIS CLUB!

Goliath was a mighty man,
A man of great renown,
He owned a wholesale grocery
In a big commercial town.
He posed as middle-man between
The manufacturers all,
And the retail dealer whom
He crowded to the wall.
When the retail merchant ordered goods
To feed his little flock
The answer that he got was this,
"We haven't it in stock.
It don't pay us to handle such,
We wouldn't if we could,
But we'll fill your order all the same
With something just as good."
"Please then, dear Goliath,"
The retail grocer said,
"Don't compete with us retailers
And thus chop off our head.
To sell in such small quantity
Your office you abuse;
Though you hold us in the clamps,
Please don't turn on the screws."
Then up spoke the manufacturer
And said, "I'd like a chance
To introduce my goods somehow
And thus my trade advance.
I'm willing hard my horn to blow,
But I no fish can sell,
So long as you're so selfish
You do not treat me well.
If you're a middleman indeed
Why not keep in the middle
And not the band attempt to lead
While I play second fiddle?"
Then spoke the great Goliath,
The giant in his might:
"If both of you don't come to terms
I am ready to show fight.
Now hearken, manufacturer,
Unto my stern commands,
You henceforth shall not sell your goods
Except 'tis through my hands.
And you, little retail dealer,
You pusillanimous cuss!
You'd better mind your P's and Q's;
If wuss should come to wuss,
We'll foreclose that mortgage
We hold upon your stock,
And you, oh manufacturer!
Your head right off we'll knock."
But the parties thus assailed
Did not scare worth a cent.
Full well they knew the middleman,
Goliath's strength was spent.
His club though labelled "boycott"
With which they had been bluffed,
Would do but little damage
Since the club was only stuffed,
"Therefore, proclaim it not in Gath
That the Davids in this strife,
Can not exist without you;
Of trade you're not the life.
If with us you cannot labor
And do the proper thing,
You may expect that we will use
The stones that's in our sling."
Thus spoke the manufacturer
And to Goliath says, says he "Go-liar go and tell your woe
To the Maritime Cavalree."

MAKE MORE OF RICE.

Dealers in rice would greatly increase the consumption of this food if, through the food expositions, or in other ways, they would show the American people in how many ways rice may be prepared for use. Wheat is our great cereal, and it enters into thousands of toothsome and delicious articles, while rice is made up in only about half a dozen different ways by the English-speaking peoples. It is, however, an elegant substitute for potatoes, with fowl, fish, and meats, and in India is made into the most delicious cakes and articles of confectionery. It is a staple food of hundreds of millions of the human race, and a little popular education as to its capabilities and value as a food would soon double its consumption in this country.—Am. It is reported that a line of tea is being sold in this country under entirely false pretences and appearances. It is of inferior quality, but has been faced and worked up so as to pass ordinary insight for a very acceptable Indian tea. It is put up in New York. The trade need to be on their guard against such fraudulent stock. Those who make it a rule to buy from none but reputable jobbers will usually find in that precaution ample security against any impositions of this kind.

* * *

The consumption of tea during the hot season has expanded very perceptibly since iced tea came into favor as a summer drink. July and August used to be rather an off-season in the tea trade. Even yet it is not a very brisk time for tea selling at retail counters, as most of the iced tea is drunk at restaurants and hotels, whose supplies are mainly purchased directly from wholesale dealers in tea. Whether or not the iced beverage is to continue or increase in consumption is of course dependent upon whether it continues to be agreeable or is proved to be healthful to consumers. The latter appears to be a debated point.

* * *

They evidently want more canned peas of Canadian packing in England. Grocers there are liable to prosecution under the Adulteration Act for selling canned peas that can be found to contain sulphate of copper in such quantities as to be injurious to health. Several have been fined recently. The grocers are helpless, as they cannot be sure whether a given stock on hand is so adulterated or is pure. It would serve to remove this uncertainty and cause for anxiety if the English trade could get pure goods, and their necessity should be our packers' opportunity.

* * *

The child-like Celestial is not always unresponsive to the examples of the western world. The idea of hanging together to uphold prices impresses the artless tea operators of Shanghai as a good one, and like Sancho Panza who invoked blessings on the man that invented sleep, they doubtless revere the memory of the unknown father of combination. This year the total outward shipment of Ping-sueys from that port are to be materially shortened, an agreement among the native guilds having been entered into for the purpose of limiting exports. They realize that it is not the biggest aggregate of sales that yields the biggest aggregate of value, and are keeping down the exports to about 85 per cent of last year's. Already the effect begins to be realized, and prices are going up, an advance of 1 tael having been made since the consummation of the agreement. It will be interesting to observe the course of prices in this class of tea, for the purpose of gauging the stability of a Chinese combine. The principle might thrive in the oriental soil to which it is transplanted. The Chinese are a conservative people, and are not possessed by the spirit of enterprise to nearly the same degree as the people of the west are. Hence it is probable, if the native character is not a little too wily to bind, that combination would flourish in China.

* * *

The Wolverhampton (Eng.) Grocers' Association allowed a test case to be brought against one of its members, for the purpose of settling the question whether wrapping paper might or might not be included in the weight of goods sold to customers, and the Stipendiary Magistrate ruled again that paper should not be included, and fined the grocer against whom the action was brought. A collection of parcels that had been bought under the weights and measures inspector's orders, were examined, and it was found that about 10 drachms had to be deducted for the paper in several cases. In the defence it was pointed out that customers never brought vessels to hold tea, coffee, sugar, raisins and such goods, so that they had to be wrapped in paper, and that since people did not wish to pay additionally for the paper, it had become an established usage, as convenient for the buyer as for the seller, to make the weight asked for include the enclosing paper. It was also shown that the practice was in the interest as well as for the convenience of the customer, inasmuch as it protected his goods from contamination, a thing impossible to avoid if sugar, salt, soap, tea, butter, cheese, fish, etc., were all weighed in the bare scale-pan. All this did not avail, and a fine of 5s. with costs was imposed. The case will be appealed.

It is natural that a trader should do his utmost to expose anything that he knows to be false in the representations of rivals, particularly if he sees that he is losing customers through general belief in these representations. He needs to be cautious, however, that he does not overstep the bounds of law in any attempt he thus makes to set the public right upon any matter of controversy between his irregular competitor and himself. It is not enough that the statements he makes are true and maintainable by sufficient evidence. They must be shown to be not calculated to do injury to the competitor's business. A case in point came up at the Derbyshire (Eng.) summer assizes a week or two ago. A provision dealer in Derby, goaded by the competition of a co-operative store, had circulated several thousand hand-bills, upon which were printed the prices paid for sixteen articles at the trader's shop and at the co-operative association's store. The comparison of the prices was strongly in favor of the trader. Below this exhibit of prices was printed the affidavit of a woman that she had made the above-mentioned purchases at both places, and had paid the prices as appended to each in the list. Twenty-five thousand of these sheets were distributed. The co-operative association brought an action for libel against the provision dealer. The plea was not that the statements were untrue, but that they were calculated to injure the association in the carrying on of its business, and to prevent customers coming to its shops. The jury brought in a verdict of guilty, and assessed the damages at £1. Law is a peculiar thing. The same trader could have done many other things calculated to injure plaintiff's business without rendering himself open to prosecution or liable for damages. He could have put down his prices, have stocked up with a lot of goods bought at low auction prices, he could have gone out and stopped people on their way past his shop to the association's store, and by any of these ways he would not only have calculated to do, but would have done, serious injury to the co-operative store with perfect immunity from the law. But he must not resort to publishing anything, in his advertisement or otherwise, that has the same tendency.

The Inspection of Weights and Measures and Gas for 1891 takes up Part 2 of the Inland Revenue Returns for that year. With relation to weights and measures it shows that a large amount of money has been spent to overtake a small amount of fraud. The total revenue was $33,662.23, the total outlay $72,305.22. Thus that branch of service falls short nearly $40,000 of being self-sustaining. The weights, measures of capacity, lineal measures, balances, steelyards, platform scales, irregular weights and measures, Troy weights, that were examined numbered 200,605, and of these 1,374 were rejected. But the rejection of these 1,374 false measures was not all the good that the $40,000 did. The inspection system has done much more to prevent the use of wrong standards than inspecting has done to discover such standards, and the general public could easily be cheated out of a dozen times this $40,000 if a lax system of inspection existed. The general existence of price-cutting and its attendant evil, deterioration in quality, warrant the belief that shortage in quantity would be also an accompanying condition, if the weights and measures were not very thoroughly looked after. A forty thousand dollar tax every year is a much easier burden than the loss in quantity that non-regulated, non-inspected means of measuring out goods would entail. It is material, moreover, that absolutely accurate standards should be in the hands of inspectors, but the Commissioner reports that many of the portable kits are out of adjustment. Many offices, he says, claim that the continued use of them does injury to the weights and weighing machines of the whole Dominion. The Commissioner urges that a competent mechanic be employed to adjust them. This should not be neglected. Traders do not want to be at the risk of losing their scales upon a test that is itself faulty. The Chief Inspector reports the working of the Act unsatisfactory in only one or two respects, but notably in the want of uniformity in the practice of inspecting officers, especially in original inspections at the manufactories where the scales, etc., are made. Makers of weighing machines, complain bitterly of this irregularity. They may gauge their scales according to a standard set up by one inspector, and may find it objected to by another. It is unpleasant to have a weighing apparatus, that has been approved by one inspector before it left the factory, complained of, probably returned by the merchant who bought it, on the ground that another inspector condemned it. A remedy suggested by the manufacturers and approved by the Commissioner, is to appoint a capable man to visit each manufactory of weights, measures, etc., and there explain to the local inspector what constitutes, as regards material, workmanship and finish, a first class article, and the mode of testing the same. Since there is inspection there should be no anomalies.

Part 3 of the Inland Revenue Returns of Canada for the fiscal year ending 30th June, 1891, has just come from the Government press. This volume of the Returns deals only with the adulteration of food. A considerable part of its contents has already received some attention in these pages in the notices we have given of the bulletins which from time to time have been issued by the Department. Of these bulletins, those setting forth in detail the results of the official analysis of pepper, coffee, tea, baking powder, sugar and syrup have been treated at some length in THE GROCER. Other bulletins in the series, not dealing with commodities sold by grocers, we have disposed of in a more summary way. Such are those relating to drugs, liquors, milk, water. The Commissioner of Inland Revenue in his report shows that of 924 samples of foods and drugs that were examined, 668 were genuine. This is not so bad a showing for a year that is taken out of a period supposed to be remarkable for adulteration. In the case of all articles of commerce the bulletin gave the names of the persons from whom the samples were bought and by whom they were manufactured. This practice, according to the Commissioner, fails as deterrent, and he warns offenders that prosecution will hereafter have to take the place of simple exposure. The difficulty of obtaining convictions for the debasement of certain goods, owing to the fact that no standard of purity exists, is adverted to, and the Commissioner submits and recommends the adoption of standards prepared by the Chief Analyst, Mr. McFarlane. Such of these proposed standards as relate to articles sold by grocers, should be considered by the trade. They are as follows:—Coffee. When coffee is sold as a mixture or compound, it shall contain only chicory and coffee; the proportion of the former not to exceed 20 per cent. —Lard when sold as compound shall not contain more than 10 per cent. of beef tallow. —Baking Powder shall not contain more than 20 per cent. of starch or flour, and be entirely free from substances containing alumina. —Butter shall not contain more than 15 per cent. water, 5 per cent. salt and 2 per cent. curd. —Mustard. The genuine article shall not contain less than 30 per cent. fixed oil, and the compound or mixture not less than 22 per cent. —Pepper shall not contain more than 8 per cent. ash. —Molasses shall not contain less than 40 per cent. cane sugar. —Syrups shall not contain less than 35 per cent. cane sugar. These standards appear to be reasonable. Being recommended by the Commissioner, it is probable they will be adopted, and as their purpose is to facilitate convictions, it is as well for the trade not to be careless about the quality of the stock they buy.

BRANDS AND PROFITS,

It is in the interests of the manufacturers of branded goods to provide for a liberal margin of profit to the retailer. It is good policy at the outset of an article's trade career, and it is good economy when the article's reputation has become of commercial value and is well established. Too commonly the trade have to complain that the manufacturers' guardian care of prices ceases when the goods have got a strong foothold upon the market. Prices are well looked after until that advantage is gained, and then they are very often left to chance. The case of the retailer in such a position does not rest upon any assumptions about the rightfulness of combination, or of authority in price-making. The retail trade has something of a claim upon the reputation of the goods. This is hardly socialism, inasmuch as no claim upon the goods themselves is pretended. But would the article have acquired such a momentum of reputation as to become self-selling, if the retail trade had not imparted the initial velocity, and had not also continued to keep the force of salesmanship operating upon it? The trade establish the branded article. Their reward is not only the money they make out of the profits secured to them during the up-hill period in the article's history, but an equal ratio of advantage from the article when its reputation is confirmed. If they had 25 per cent. of profit in the article's friendless days, they ought to have 25 per cent. in the heyday of its sale, and the manufacturers should be just as exact to protect the retailer's margin at one time as another. It is part of the retailers' right, as they have been instrumental, and mainly so, in establishing the commercial renown of the article in question. That reputation is partly their property. They have a vested right in it so long as they handle the article, and the revenue from that right should be the continuance of the original rate of profit. If 100 retailers have been selling an article for five years, and have raised the sales in that time 1000 per cent., they ought to be protected from the reckless cutting of some new-comer to the trade, who may wish to make a special run on the particular article so nursed by his seniors in the trade.

But manufacturers are sometimes ungrateful. Not only by allowing cutting do they neglect the retailers who have hoisted their brands into an assured position in the market, but they also frequently permit the sale of their brands by others than grocers, after the demand has become popular. This is as impolitic as it is ungrateful. The reality of the retailers' property in the reputation of the article becomes then apparent; they have made the reputation; they can unmake it. They at once take hold of a rival line, they at once drop the thing they worked into prominence, and soon the public cease to pronounce the name of the former brand.

The retailers' good offices render the most live and most effective advertising that it is possible to put before consumers. Salesmanship has an influence and a persuasiveness that are worth more than the owner of a brand usually pays for its services. It is a great thing for one man to make a million dollars by his ownership of a brand, while probably 10,000 men make only a quarter of a million among them for creating and cultivating the soil of the demand on which that million dollars grew.

There is many a flower born to blush unseen, that is fully as beautiful as that which basks in the admiration of thousands. Beauty in the case of the lonely flower is not less effective to win it admiration than merit in the case of articles of commerce. The merit may be unquestionable, and yet the article may be a failure. What the flower in the desert wants it wants, and that is prominence, in other words advertising. The retail trade, by showing goods, by offering them, by exposing them on their shelves, by putting announcements in the local press, keep goods in a hot house atmosphere of advertising. That does the work which entitles them to fair treatment by manufacturers.

OUNCES AND CENTS.

It is interesting to note how general the use of money units is to express the result of price-cutting. A trader always sells a thing, when he does cut, at a few cents less than the regular price. He never talks of giving an ounce or a pound more for the given price. The weight or measure is stationary, but the price is variable. For example, a trader will sell at 14c. a pound something of which the price is 16c. Here he loses the quoted price of two ounces, but he never puts it this way to the buyer. He says he gives the buyer 2c. on the price. Consequently, the traders who sweat profits the most prodigally from their prices are usually very particular not to give a hair's weight too much on the scales. It is the very irony of business that a man will take pains to secure a nice balance between the two sides of the scales, and will at the same time show himself regardless of maintaining a balance between the total cost with a fair profit added and the selling-price of the article so scrupulously weighed. Why is he more particular about the ounces than he is about the cents? Probably he would answer, if asked, that he cannot afford to be heedless of both. The weight must be all that it is pretended, the law looks after that, but it can be as much more as the dealer pleases, provided he expresses it in its exact terms. There is no relation of money's worth to weight established by law.

If the grocer would keep an eye to his cents in the same careful way he does to his ounces, he would seldom fail. The scales are present at every sale that is made, and their witness to the equality in gravity between the weights and the thing weighed restrains the trader from cheating himself.

If there were a similar mechanical contrivance to represent the year's balance sheet in process of formation, so that debit and credit side would move up or down according as delicate losses or gains were registered, the trader might be equally influenced to look after the cents. It is the thing which he can close his eyes to that finally swamps him. He does not cheat himself on the scales, but he does on the books. On them the grand aggregate of little differences comes up before him and makes him serious when it is too late to recall the lost cents. The scales keep watch over the grains and the tons take care of themselves. It's a pity that accounts would not haunt the retailer in the same way and look after the cents.

WHERE CREDIT DOES GOOD.

There are men who can date their reform from the condition of the ne'er-do-weel from the moment when somebody gave them credit. Many a young man needs but the steadying influence of somebody's confidence and of the sense of responsibility that such confidence begets in the right nature. The population abounds with men, particularly young men, who do not feel it incumbent upon them to save any of their earnings. They use their money to dress themselves, hire livery rigs, go to every description of entertainment, and after doing this thing for probably ten years they have no surplus to begin life seriously with. If some one could persuade them to put by a little each week in a savings bank it would be philanthropical act and one of public as well as private benefit, for each individual man of thrift is a factor in public and national progress.

But there are many people who cannot be reached by any appeal based on abstract considerations. They require something more tangible to enlist their enthusiasm. There is a well-defined difference between types of men who are wasters that may be reclaimed. One can be led to save by an inducement that is entirely prospective. He is persuaded to lay aside money for a year because a lot of land then is coming on the market that can be got hold of for a small initial payment, and somebody urges him to hoard up for it. Another spendthrift has not the will to keep on denying himself and accumulating for something ahead of him, and before a month has gone by the good intention dissolves, and his money is squandered. But probably the same man would have kept on economically if the object were retrospective, if he had been trusted with something and had been drawn into an engagement to pay so much per month. That engagement supplies what his will lacks, that is authority, and the young man submits to it.

Honesty is not at fault in either of the supposed cases. With one an object gained is an incentive, with the other it probably would not, though an object of pursuit would be. It is a matter of common remark that some men work earnestly and honestly to get money to pay for dead horses, but have not the enterprise to keep on earning, that they may have money in hand to buy live ones when they need them. Thus debt is the only thing that will make some men save money. They do not earn to buy, they earn to pay. Such people have to be trusted by traders, and they are worth trusting.

THE SPIDER AND THE FLY.

Grocer.—You are right there, sir, they have no use for the quiet, steady, honest grocer. The thing would get too monotonous altogether. They are something like the boy who was ashamed to walk down the street with his father, because the old man's clothes were not cut in the proper style; he was too old fashioned. But that old man had almost worked his finger nails off to put the young pup in the position he was now occupying. He would sooner walk down the street with an empty-headed snob who had not an ounce of brains in his head, but who had his clothes cut in the latest style, though not paid for. So the wholesale men are tired of the honest, hard working grocer, who has worked his finger nails off to put them where they are, and now they are tired of him and they want something new. The steady-going sort are all right enough, you know, but a change is wanted. Still, when the wholesalers have a note to meet and need the money badly, the old steady, hundred-cents-in-the-dollar grocer is the one they will fly to to get it to help them out. They say to the collector, "Run up to So and So; you are sure to get it there." Yet all the time they are backing up the other sucker who is cutting the honest grocer's throat and trying to disable him from paying the hundred cents in the dollar. When one of these stylish smart Alecks comes along dressed up to the nines and has plenty of blow and is not particular how many lies he tells, they catch on. This is something new, a mystery, there is something curious about it, let's try and find out what it is; and they find out. So do lots of other people to their cost. It is surprising that men who are supposed to be smart, intelligent men can be so easily magnetized by such bogus magnates. They must evidently be wanting to be caught. They say, "This man here is a smart man; he can sell lots of stuff." Rather he can give it away. He is a smart man; he can gull the public; he is not afraid to tell lies; he'll call things by anything but their proper name; he's not afraid to enter into any little scheme, whether it is all right or not, so long as there is money in it. Yes, that is where it is—money! Why, it sometimes seems as if money and position and influence ruled the world. Once get into a certain ring and you can do almost anything with impunity. Why, for money and position men are selling themselves every day. Once get into that ring and you could almost sink a nation. There are men walking the streets of Toronto to-day, who if they had been poor men they would have been in the penitentiary. Just look at the way the street car company have been killing their horses by overwork and nothing said. Where is your Humane Society? what keeps them quiet? They were some time ago fined a dollar and costs. What is that to such a company? It ought to be a hundred dollars, or the price of the horse. If it was a poor man that was doing that he would be fined, and very likely arrested before he had gone half a dozen yards.

C. T.—Well, sir, you are right. There is a great deal contained in what you say. The only salvation for the country is true Christianity at the heart, and the rest will be all right. Even in your churches how many real true christians can you find? Why, even some ministers preach to please more than anything else. They want to be popular. Some of them are afraid to preach the truth too plain, for fear of losing a good paying pew-holder. It's a bad sign to see a minister too popular. It is a sign that he resembles too many of the congregation. The most popular man is not the best man by any means. Why, it is an honor to be hooted by the majority, because the majority are on the wrong road. Even the most popular traveller is not the best man by any means. The most popular traveller is the one who can drink, smoke, dance and not be too particular at times—one of the boys. But say, Mr. H. we have been so busy talking that I had forgotten the time.

Grocer.—So had I. When once I get started I get so excited that I don't know when to stop. I get boiling sometimes when I think of it all.

C. T.—Well it does make you feel that way sometimes. It makes me boil sometimes when I see the inconsistencies of some people. But we can't expect to have everything all right here. It would be too much like Heaven, and we would not want to leave it and that would never do.

Grocer.—I suppose not.

C. T.—No, sir. By-the-by, Mr. H. how do you feel on the Wednesday afternoon half holiday question?

Grocer.—Oh, Yes. Ha, ha! the Wednesday afternoon half holiday. Ha, ha! well don't you see, there is M. across the street, the fruit man, he keeps everything in the grocery line, but a pinch of sugar, ha, ha!

C. T.—You don't say. Do you mean that fruit man on the other side of the road, that small place over there?

Grocer.—Yes. I don't see how you are going to manage it when he does that. Ha, ha!

C. T.—Well, we will try and get him to close too.

Grocer.—I don't think he'll do it, you know, ha, ha!

C. T.—I have an agreement here that I am getting signed by all those in favor of it, and if you don't mind, you being one of the leading grocers up here, I would like you to sign it.

Grocer.—Well, don't you see, ha, ha! how are you going to do it when he has everything but a pinch of sugar.

C. T.—P. has signed it and intends to close.

Grocer.—Has P. signed it?

C. T.—Yes, sir.

Grocer.—Well, if P. has signed it, ha, ha!

HEED THIS.

The merchant, either wholesale or retail, who allows his competitor to make prices for him is on the road to bankruptcy. By this we mean that the enterprising dealer while fixing his prices at fair market rates should not cut under these figures merely because some haggling customer tells him that his price for some particular article is higher than that of his competitor. In most cases such statements are without foundation when made to a merchant who understands his business and who aims to sell goods at fair prices. Concessions made to buyers of this class based on such assertions are usually thrown away, for, as a rule, similar concessions are asked for on the next occasion, and if not granted the customer is offended and withdraws his trade altogether. The best policy is to quote prices which will enable you to make a fair profit and not to deviate therefrom for fear of losing business. A small trade with profit is far better than a big business which brings no returns.—Grocer and Country Merchant.

HENRY GRADY'S ADVICE TO A YOUNG MAN.

Never gamble—of all the vices that enthrall men this is the worst, the strongest and most insidious. Outside of the morality of it, it is the poorest business and poorest fun. No man is safe that plays at all. It is easier never to play. I never saw a man, a gentleman or man of business, who did not regret the time and money he had wasted in it. A man who plays poker is unfit for every other business on earth.

Never drink—I love liquor, and I love the fellowship involved in drinking. My safety has been that I never drank at all. It is much easier not to drink at all than to drink a little. If I had to attribute what I have done in life to any one thing, I should attribute it to the fact that I am a teetotaler. As sure as you are born, it is the best and safest way.

Marry early—there is nothing that steadies a young man like marrying a good girl and raising a family. By marrying young your children grow up when they are a pleasure to you. You feel the responsibility of life, you avoid bad habits.

If you never drink, never gamble and marry early, there is no limit to the useful and distinguished life you may live.

You will be the pride of your father's heart and the joy of your mother's. I don't know if there is any happiness on earth worth having outside of the happiness of knowing that you have done your duty and have tried to do good. You try to build up. There are always plenty of other who will do all the tearing down that is necessary. You try to live in the sunshine. Men who stay in the shade always get mildewed.

HALIFAX GROCER'S ASSOCIATION.

The Halifax Retail Grocer's association held their annual meeting the evening of the 2nd inst., at St. Mary's hall. It was largely attended.

The reports of the president and secretary, which were unanimously adopted, showed the association to be in a flourishing condition as to the membership and financially. The following officers were appointed for the ensuing year:

President—Jas. H. Gass, re-elected.

Vice-President—Andrew Hubley, re-elected.

Secretary—W. C. Bishop, re-elected.

Treasurer—R. N. McDonald.

Guard—Richard Power.

Directors—Edward Donohoe, Edward J. Fenton, John Dence, F. H. Stephens.

At the conclusion of the meeting the members were entertained by the president-elect at a substantial repast, which passed off in a very enjoyable manner.

A TEA TRANSACTION.

A short time since a party was offered a sample of Japan tea representing about 250 packages at $11\frac{3}{4}$ c., but as he refused to give over $11\frac{1}{2}$ c. the tea was sold to another firm at the first named figure. The buyer then sent for a broker and instructed him to offer the same lot of tea at $14\frac{1}{2}$ c. to the party which could have bought it in the first instance at $11\frac{3}{4}$ c. but at the same time to say the tea belonged to the house the aforesaid broker represented. The broker accordingly offered the lot as directed at $14\frac{1}{2}$ c. on precisely the same sample that had been refused at $11\frac{3}{4}$ c., and the identical party who could have bought it a few days before at the latter figure actually took it at 14c. These facts go to demonstrate how easily people may be deceived in the quality of tea unless they are thorough experts and judges of the article. Here is an instance in which a well known member of the trade was so mistaken in the quality of a sample of tea offered him on two different occasions, of only a few days apart, that he was willing to pay $2\frac{1}{4}$ c. per lb. more for the last squint than the first. The joke eventually dawned upon the deceived purchaser, when he in turn offered the lot at 15c. to the party who in the first instance wanted to sell it at $11\frac{3}{4}$ c. The latter took the sample, examined it carefully and ejaculated:—"Why this is the same tea I sold to so and so, at $11\frac{3}{4}$ c. and you refused to give over $11\frac{1}{2}$ c. for. As soon as this flood of daylight burst in upon the innocent and astonished trader, he commenced to re-examine the sample, and at the same time exclaimed. "Oh! the devil it is!" and at once returned to his private office to cogitate upon the deceptive nature of samples of Japan tea.—Montreal Trade Bulletin.

SOME GOOD BUSINESS MAXIMS.

Every young man intending to follow mercantile pursuits ought to spend some years of preparation in a methodically conducted establishment. If he enters haphazard he becomes a haphazard dealer. He should be trained as to values, how to buy and how to sell, and also as to management, from the picking up of the string from the floor to the banking of his cash. It is a mistake for a mechanic, the professional man or the farmer to rent a store, furnish limited capital, and start "the boy" in business without his having had any training or having any knowledge of the quicksands, shoals and rocks on which he is going to launch his craft, says John Field.

In some instances, owing to the peculiar environments of the case, and by having secured the services of some competent clerk, he may succeed, but in nine cases out of ten the venture will prove a deplorable failure. This represents a class of people who are apt to overlook the difference between the gross receipts and the net profits of the cash drawer, and are, therefore, led into extravagant habits of life by the handling of so much money without proper training for its care-taking. Furthermore, they are the very kind of people who will be overpersuaded by the plausible salesman, and would be likely, therefore, to overstock themselves, in consequence of which the fatal error of slow payment is sure to follow.

Every merchant—wholesale and retail—should inscribe as a motto on his ledgers the old German proverb: "Lang krankheit ist sicherer tod" (long sickness is sure death). In these days of sharp competition, when a dealer cannot make his payments so as to secure cash discounts, the sooner he goes into liquidation the better it will be for himself and all concerned.

Of course, there are many instances where men, and women, too, of modest pretensions have commenced in a small way, and finally succeeded; but their training comes with the development of their business. They not only know how to make a little money, but also how to save what they do make. But in the broad field or higher plane of business life, if we look at the successful men of today, we find in almost every instance that they are well trained, intelligent men, who take an inventory and settle up in their business annually—men who know when, where and how to buy, and when, where and how to sell; men who know when and how to say yes and no, as the case demands.—N.Y. Grocers' Monthly Review.

Wholesale merchants generally and members of the Commercial Traveller's Association will be gratified in knowing that in future the rate for commercial travellers over the Canadian Pacific railway short line from Montreal to St. John, N.B., will be $2\frac{1}{4}$ cents per mile, and the same rate will apply to all points in New Brunswick.

IT PAYS TO BE PARTICULAR.

There is a grocer's clerk in St. Louis who was formerly a proprietor. He had capital and experience, but when his business was wound up by the sheriff he had lost all but his increased stock of experience. Two poor young Germans who started in a small way a block from his old stand have now a creditable store and stock and a balance in bank. An early caller at both stores found a clerk leaning on a broom lazily reading the morning paper at the old man's store. At the young men's store everything was already clean and neat, and the partners were busily picking over the stock of strawberries. The result of their labors was a long line of beautiful, blushing, firm fruit at two boxes for 25 cents and a small line of not undesirable "seconds" at a fair price of 10 cents a box.

Attention thus attracted to one exhibition of their faith in the idea that it pays to be particular, was bred in further observing the nicely arranged display of fruit and vegetables without their doors. This was one of the best advertisements this little firm ever had. It was one that cost them no money, only some time and trouble. They had arrived at the conclusion that to dispose of their perishable stock to the best profit to themselves they must display them in a manner most attractive to the passer-by. They found that there was good money in scattering their asparagus as they received it from the commission men, assorting it and retying it in shapely bundles with a little cheap cigar ribbon. Everything else was similarly handled. Celery was thoroughly cleaned, neatly bunched and tied with blue twine, contrasting pleasantly with the waxy white of the stems.

Not only were the vegetables thus treated until the whole array formed a picture that would win approval from an artist's eye, and tease the confirmed dyspeptic into healthy hunger, but the framing was not neglected. Leisure hours between noon and evening had been used in which to construct two neatly joined terraced stands, and well-fitted trays. This basis for their display was far in advance of the heterogeneous collection of boxes and upturned barrels, buckets and measures in use by their "experienced" competitor on the next corner.

The sidewalk in front of the old grocer's store after the customers had been there was strewn with waste and withered vegetable tops, resulting from his stock of green groceries having been pitchforked into a stack and aimlessly pulled to pieces as demands were made upon it. In front of the new firm's store there was a clean deck, because all the withered and broken leaves and stalks had been disposed of before the goods were displayed.

The old clerk can't see how it is that two greenhorns can make money out of a neighborhood that starved him out, but one of the reasons for their success was apparent to other observers.—St. Louis Grocer.

INDIA RUBBER IN CHEWING GUM.

A great many false statements have been made as to the composition of ordinary chewing gum. Of course where spruce gum is used, every one knows what the basis of it is, and the article is sold to-day pure and in good quality at from 50 cents to $1.50 per pound. Most of this gum is gathered in the Green Mountain regions of Vermont, and is sold through the west, as other kinds are more popular on the Atlantic seaboard. The gum, however, that is sold from candy stands and in drug stores to-day is of totally different origin and as a rule it is a manufactured product. To a certain extent this is a secret, as all Indian rubber compounds are secret to ordinary observers. What is known as Yucatan gum is made of gum chicle, sugar and a variety of flavors, with certain ingredients which are kept secret, but help to make a homogeneous mass. The flavors that are used are peppermint, winter-green, licorice, pineapple, and some few medicinal ingredients.

Experts in chewing gum manufacture can tell in a minute whether good flavors are used, whether the best gum is incorporated, and just what the quality of the compound is, but in order to tell this accurately they are obliged to test it by chewing. The gum has a certain quality of sugar added to it to sweeten and make it palatable. It will be noticed that in chewing gum, after it has been in the mouth awhile, the sugar and flavor is entirely gone, and what remains is the rubber-like product which is the chicle gum nearly pure. This gum is the sap of a Mexican tree which is called sapodilla. It grows in other countries besides Mexico, but that is the only country where a business is made of tapping it. It is collected like India rubber sap, by cutting incisions in the bark, between the months of November and April, and after the gum has been gathered, it is packed in sacks, 200 pounds to the sack. It is then a light-colored mass that appears to be about half way between gutta percha and India rubber. In the factories it is washed, dried and mixed much as India rubber is, only it needs no process of vulcanization, and when run off on the spreaders is cut into sticks, wrapped and packed ready for shipment. Within a few years the industry has assumed large proportions and the demand for it seems to be growing every day. This is the only part of the rubber business that seems to have no dull season, as one part of the year is just as good as another and chewers want their gum in winter as well as summer. It is a mistake to think that only shop girls and ignorant people chew gum, as the habit has invaded all classes of society and many physicians recommend it highly.

Tobacco chewers who are trying to give up their habit often take to chewing gum and find it of help to them. It is a curious fact that in England they do not chew gum but rather look down upon the habit as being vulgar, and of the small quantities that have been shipped abroad, but little has been sold. The time doubtless will come, however, when this democratic habit will overcome the prejudices of our cousins across the water, and when the Prince of Wales will be seen with a quid of the American gum in his mouth, chewing it with as much gusto as a Bowery boy. Already Australia has thrown up her hands, and decided that gum is a necessity, and American manufacturers are working that market for all it is worth.—India Rubber World.

THE RETAIL GROCERY CLERK.

"I could never understand why it is that the purchasing public thinks that anybody can make a good grocer's clerk," says a well known retail grocer of St. Louis in the "Grocer" of that city. "The popular impression is that anyone who can handle a broom, a scrubbing brush, make change, handle scales and tie up packages, is thoroughly competent to fill a clerical position in a well-ordered grocery. The truth of the matter is, it requires just as much tact, training and native ability to deal out groceries as it does to measure out ribbons or fit a pair of shoes on a customer. I doubt if the dry-goods merchant experiences half as much difficulty in breaking in a new clerk as we do. His stock is easier kept in order, and is less susceptible to changes in price. In the grocery there are so many different articles, and so many grades of each article, that it takes the new clerk considerable time, even with close application, to get the run of prices. Then, the desirable clerk must have some taste in the way of arranging stock. The matter of making a grocery as attractive as a dry-goods store has never received the attention it deserves, but I insist that it is just as possible to so display our goods that it will be as much of a pleasure for the consumer to visit the grocery as it is to visit the notion or dry-goods store. The very multiplicity of our lines, usually considered an impediment to a neat arrangement, are, in fact, only an aid to a diversified and artistic display. It requires hard work and attention, of course, but the clerk who will put his mind to it, and who is not afraid to exercise a little elbow grease, won't be in the business long until he will find himself commanding a much better salary than is paid the average clerk."

DRY GOODS.

During the past week the house trade has again been small, but orders received direct and through the travellers have been very encouraging, and every house is busy filling orders. The demand is quite general and has been spread over nearly all the available lines. This is due to the fact that retailers are adopting more and more the hand to mouth system and heavy season orders are becoming a thing of the past. There are no really small months as there used to be, but the trade is more regular and each month has a more or less continued demand for some classes of goods.

Collections last week were really good for their season. The retailers have very little chance to gather money, unless they are previously prepared for their August payments. Collections run from sixty to seventy per cent. of the accounts due. This is quite remarkable for this season. In fact, the last three months have shown a much greater movement for cash than last season with the same volume of trade, thus showing that retailers are booking less.

The Kerrs have brought out a spool called Price's (K.P.), which will be sold at the same price as Clark's Anchor, M. E. Q., and Chadwick's, all of which have recently fallen in price.

The combination among the manufacturers of rubber coats has been broken, and prices have taken a sudden drop amounting to over thirty per cent.

NOTES.

McMaster & Co. are showing a nice range of plain and fancy fittings. Among the newest are the Carnival, Girton, Ostrich, and Chiffon frillings, and cream, black and white Lesse frillings. In laces their stock is well-selected, and includes black and cream Spanish; Pointd' Irelande in white, natural, and two-tone effect; tattings; Torchon laces and edgings; and Valenciennes. Their stock of buttons is full, especially in jets, pearls, fancy metals, and pearlettes for jackets and cloaks, in all the leading shades and newest designs. The New Primrose, is a new kid glove which is said to be the best value shown for some time.

W. R. Brock & Co. are having a strong demand for fancy Jacquard dress goods. Their stock is almost depleted. Their stock of Canadian tweeds contains many very pretty designs, and for suitings the demand seems to run strong on these goods. Browns are selling well, but it cannot be said that the demand is for any particular color.

Gordon, MacKay & Co. are showing special lines of cashmere hosiery at $2.25 and $4.50. These lines are of especial value and are having a deservedly large sale. Their stock of domestic woollen hosiery is well assorted in both plains and ribs. A new thing which is selling well is the patent lock-stitch hose which has a ten-fold knee, warranted not to ravel when torn and especially suited for boys' wear. They have just opened up a large shipment of black and colored Oriental velveteen, which seems to be of first-class manufacture. They have just secured 200 pieces of 52-inch loom damask and 75 pieces of 58-inch, which were procured at a low price and will be offered as a special drive.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence are having a large demand for their tall tweed dress goods, due in part to the lines of match gimps and buttons, which they have had manufactured to accompany these dress goods. Ribbed cashmere hosiery of which they have a well assorted stock, is finding a strong market at present. Ladies' underwear in common wools and merino is one of their leading lines. Their stock of Japanese brocaded and plain silk handkerchiefs is diminishing very rapidly. Among other novelties are: an oak easel, which is cheaper than brass and more pleasing than bamboo, and an oscillating wooden bracket for suspending curtains.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are having a very strong demand for ribbed vests and pearl buttons. In black silk laces and veilings, they are showing some well made and artistic varieties, varied in pattern and quality, but all of good value. Their range of tablings is extensive, especially good quality being shown in loom damasks, turkey reds, and bleached. Table napkins in figured damask are shown in choice patterns.

The house of Samson, Kennedy & Co. is filled with seasonable goods at present, and never was business so prosperous with this firm. Every line of domestic and foreign manufacture is carefully studied and the best has been secured. Every department contains many new varieties well worthy of attention. In ribbons, faille, moire, double satin and baby ribbons are shown at very fair prices. A large stock of Windsor ties is seen, and the fall demand for these goods has been anticipated. They are shown in polka dots, shots, royal twills, surahs and pongees. In frillings, the ostrich and chiffons are the leading lines.

For the agricultural trade Jno. Macdonald & Co. are showing an extensive range of jute horse blankets, shaped, lined and unlined; and also fawn wool blankets in square and shaped and in all sizes. Their haberdashery department is well filled at present with well assorted lines and they are prepared to handle early buyers from all over. A British Columbia merchant has this week made some very extensive purchases from this department. Umbrellas, bathing suits and neckwear have been receiving special attention the past week. Four cases of American braces have been opened up; the last lot which was mentioned in these columns sold very fast and a repeat was necessary. Being a job lot they will be sold at special prices. A low line of faille ribbons is being shown, and is worthy the attention of shrewd buyers. Black silk velvets, from 18 to 27 inch, are being offered at special prices. The stock of tartan dress goods in all the new plaids is quite varied and attractive.

The St. Thomas grocers met on the first inst. to consider the holding of a picnic and procession. It was decided not to do so this year, owing to the lateness of the season, but to arrange one early next summer.

The grocers of London challenge the grocers of St. Thomas to a game of base ball to be played on Civic Holiday, Aug. 16th. The match to be for a quantity of flour, or something of that nature to be given to the poor.

At the Columbian Exhibition, canned goods, fruit, fish, meats, &c., will form in themselves a big exhibit in which canned fish, and especially canned salmon, will be made a prominent exhibit in the Canadian Court by the Department of Marine and Fisheries.

The Montreal Retail Grocers' Association held quite an enthusiastic meeting the other evening, when the prizes were distributed that were won at the pic-nic. After this Peter Gannon was elected secretary, pro tem, in place of Mr. Hurtubise, resigned, and the meeting was adjourned.

The retail grocers of Montreal who deal in dry groceries alone propose the formation of a separate association from the one now existing in that city, the majority of whose members deal in wine and spirits as well as in dry groceries. The membership of the new association would not include dealers in wet goods.

The Maritime Grocer and Commercial Review is the name of a new fortnightly trade paper published in Halifax. The first number, just to head, gives fair augury that it will be well buoyed up by the waves of that class and section of commercial favor on which it has ventured forth. We welcome it to our exchange list.

Jos. Coupland, wholesale produce and commission merchant on Water street, Vancouver, has sold out to Baker & Leeson, late of Douglas, Man. The new firm took over the business on August 1st. They were engaged in business as general merchants in Manitoba, and Mr. Leeson will not go out till the Fall.

F. W. Vanluven, traveller for Stuart Harvey & Co., Hamilton, favored us with a call last week. He was on his way east to the Thousand Islands, and left on the "Spartan" for Kingston on Wednesday. He is one of THE GROCER'S old friends, ideas of his having appeared in its columns on different occasions. He is on his well-earned holiday trip, and expects to put in a jolly three weeks.

It is understood that a new joint stock company is being formed to carry on the work at the Farnham beet sugar factory. Stock is now being subscribed, and it is hoped that work will be resumed in a comparatively short time. This will, if prospects are fulfilled, be of much importance to the farmers of the district, who have a large extent of land cropped with sugar beets, for which there will be no market if the factory remains closed.

Among the arrivals by the S.S. Miranda, we notice the name of Mr. P. G. Jeffry, representative of the well known house of Thurber, Whyland & Co., New York, who comes here to look after the business interests of the house. He brings with him, for the Relief Committee, a donation of eighty bags of flour from the firm, as well as a supply of clothing collected for the same purpose. A special from Digby says that mackerel have struck in along the shore of St. Mary's bay, and that traps and seines are taking from 50 to 100 barrels of No. 1 fish each tide. This is a great temptation to American mackerel men who are hovering suspiciously near the three-mile limit. In consequence the Dominion Government have despatched the cruiser Kingfisher to the scene of the alleged poaching, and some seizures may be looked for.

Grant & Co., pork packers and cheese exporters, Ingersoll, Ont., have made arrangements with William Mara to purchase his grocery business in Queen street west on Aug. 16. They intend selling the products of their pork factory with the groceries. Mr. Mara is going into the wine and mineral water agency business and has taken a store at 79 Yonge street, near King street, with vaults under 77 and 79 Yonge street.

The other evening, in broad day light, the store of Messrs. Kellerman, of Dashwood, was entered and the cash box, containing $127 and $1,700 in notes, stolen. The box was on the desk at the back door, and it is supposed that while the clerks were at the front of the store the thief stepped in at the back and carried away the box. Next day the box and notes were found in the ditch near Keacher's blacksmith shop, with five dollars in silver, the bills having been taken. There is no clue to the thief.

The Hamilton Retail Grocers' Association has decided to refund the money for the tickets held by people who were prevented from going to their picnic owing to the blockade on the street railway just before train time, which kept scores late for the train. This resolution makes some difference in the financial returns from the picnic, causing a small deficit where there would otherwise have been a surplus. Secretary Harvey met all claimants for refunds on this ground at F. F. Dalley's office last Thursday and returned them their money.

The celebrated case of Baird v Walker has been settled at last by a victory for Newfoundland. It arose out of the closing in 1890 of lobster factories on the French shore, owned by James Baird, by Sir Baldwin Walker, captain of H. M. S. Emerald, acting by instructions under the modus vivendi arrangement. Baird contended that the factories were in operation before the modus vivendi was concluded, and took an action against the captain in Newfoundland Supreme Court, claiming $2,500 damages.

The Hamilton Coffee and Spice Co. have just got out a very beautiful spice tin. The scenes on it are The Canada Pacific steamer leaving Vancouver, Niagara Falls, Quebec from the river, Ottawa Parliament Buildings, and a scene near Banff. The cover is very ornate and altogether it is a work of art and the most beautiful tin the grocer has yet seen. The Macdonald Mfg. Co., of Toronto are the manufacturers.

Casualties are not wanting to remind us that the seas of Japan are among the most dangerous in the world. The Kuro Shiwo, a black stream flows continually in a north easterly direction along the south-eastern coasts, but its rate of progress, and even its direction are liable to change according to the weather. Moreover, especially to the northward dense fogs prevail. These, apart from storms, have worked the ruin of many a ship. On the morning of the 29th of last month the steamer Haiphong, bound to Yokohama with a cargo of sugar from Formosa, was set by the Kuro Shiwo out of her course and in a thick fog ran ashore, within half of a mile of a light-house some eighty miles from port. All her crew were saved and the vessel and cargo have been sold.

THE PRICE OF SUGAR.

An article on the above subject in a recent issue of THE CANADIAN GROCER has attracted attention, and all parties interested in the matter seem to be in accord with its sentiments, and are ready to acknowledge its truth.

In it we pointed out the folly of all parties concerned in the existing practice of slaughtering sugars. Buying granulated at $4\frac{1}{4}c$ in Montreal, paying freight from that point to Toronto, and then selling it here at $4\frac{1}{4}c$ delivered into the retailer's store, less a trifling difference in discount, is indeed the height of folly. It cannot be expected that an immediate change in the condition of affairs will take place, nor that the whole-salers as a body will at once forsake a policy which is doing good to no one, and will pursue a more business like course. But the vista is clearing, and it is worthy of note that some are awakening to a sense of the position, and a beneficial change seems about to take place. Already we hear of two departures from the miserable state of affairs recently obtaining in Toronto. And it is altogether probable that the wiser will quietly drop out of the sugar trade and let others nurse the baby until this disease be mended, contenting themselves with that part of the grocery business which pays its way, and leaving the glory part to such houses as are doing trade for the fun of the thing.

PROVERBS FOR ADVERTISERS.

Spare the advertisements and spoil the business.

He is a wise man who takes a large space and puts little matter in it.

Whoso loveth a good business loveth advertising; but he that despiseth fame is an ass.

A good advertisement is like the merchant's ships; it bringeth abundance from afar.

He that payeth for advertisements with goods is a fool, for he raiseth up competition in his own market.

Every wise man advertiseth, but a fool speculateth on the stock exchange.

He that trusteth in a large circulation shall be wealthy, but he that believeth in cheap rates shall be busted.

The smallest circulation has oft the loudest tongue.

A big advertiser leaveth an inheritance to his children's children.

A small advertisement is better than a bad traveller.

There is no worse robber than a journal that does not circulate.

It is hard to get a forty-page catalogue into an inch column.

An advertisement is not a luxury, but a necessity.—"Wal," in London Fame.

NOTES TAKEN ON THE ROAD.

John McMurtry, Bowmanville, is preparing to handle large quantities of produce again this year. Mr. McMurtry attributes his past success in that line to his readiness at all times to sell at a fair profit.

John Lyle has been in the grocery business, in Bowmanville, for 25 years. He says it is not as easy to do business, now-a-days, as it was in former years, and for any one to start in trade now, without well-secured patronage, would be financial suicide.

Young & Co. were found at their old stand, and expressed themselves as believing that Bowmanville will pick up this fall. They are prepared to do their share of any increased business that comes to the surface in that town.

The partnership formed by Cawker & Tate, Bowmanville, has proved very satisfactory. Mr. Cawker was formerly with John Lyle. Mr. Tait is a young man whose experience in life has been wholly in the grocery trade, his father being an old grocerman of 25 years' standing. The firm are doing well, and have a fine large store.

John Morrow, Colbourne, is one of the wide-a-wake business men of that town. Our representative seeing a number of boxes of lemons that had just come in, asked if they were bought before the rise. Mr. Morrow answered yes, sir, and that he did not often get left at such times.

CANADA'S GREAT FAIR, SEPT. 5th TO 17th, 1892.

The citizens of Toronto have voted $150,000 to the Toronto Industrial Fair for improvements to be made on the grounds for this year's Exhibition, which is to be held from the 5th to the 17th Sept. next. About 50 acres have been added to the present grounds and a new race track and new grand stand to seat twelve thousand people is being built and many other improvements are being made. Consequently this year's Fair promises to be greater and better than ever. A large number of fine special attractions have been arranged for and several new features are promised. The exhibits in all departments will be larger and better than at any previous Fair and will include many that have been prepared for the World's Fair next year. Cheap excursions will as usual be run on all railways and the attendance of visitors will no doubt be as large as ever. All entries have to be made on or before the 13th of August, but most of the space in all the buildings for the exhibit of manufactures has already been applied for. For copies of the prize list and programmes drop a post card to Mr. Hill, the Manager, at Toronto.

MEW CANNING FACTORY.

E. G. Dailey, of Detroit, Mich., and E. E. Harris, of Kingsville, Ont., have started a canning factory, under the style of The Kingsville Preserving Co., at Kingsville, Ont. Mr. Dailey is the head of the firm of E. G. Dailey & Co., Detroit, packers of the celebrated "Boy" brand of canned goods, the company averaging a pack of 60,000 cases each year. On that market their "Boy" brand is recognized as of first quality. The company have also a Chicago office. At Kingsville the same kind of seed has been planted as is used in the States, and that produces corn and tomatoes unexcelled in flavor and merit. The labels to be used on the Canadian pack are to be from the same dies and stamps as those used on the American side, and if the "Boy" brand of corn and tomatoes has the call that the merits of the goods deserve, the company's success is assured. Samples of the pack now to be seen are exceedingly fine.

Following is the list of passengers from Montreal to Liverpool by the "Lake Ontario," Beaver line. Miss Adams, Miss K. Brunsdrit, Dr. Felix Cornu, Mr. D. Cornu, J.B., Madam L. Cornu, Dr. C. L. TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, Aug. 11, 1892.

GROCERIES.

The trade is better than it seems. Some very good business has been done since the month opened, and it is not falling off as we get away from the first. But there is no stir in the transaction of it. Groups of traders are not a frequent sight in the salesrooms these hot days, but quiet letter orders that count for just as much come in steadily. Nor is the warehouse necessarily much more active than the sample room, for a very considerable amount of the sugar that is bought is shipped directly from the refinery. This is generally the case with carloads, and carloads, whether for individual buyers or collections of buyers in the same town, are quite numerous. The business done is still unsatisfactory in the matter of profits, though there are gleams of improvement visible in this respect. The sugar trade still makes business very one-sided. Such other trade as is done is miscellaneous in character. It is now a transitional period, new goods either arriving or being looked forward to. New teas are continuing to come forward, and the various new canned goods, and dried fruits are beginning to interest wholesale buyers.

COFFEE.

The firmer tone in Rio coffees noted in last week's report, has not been modified by any subsequent advices. Wholesalers are not keen buyers at the present, as the demand for stock from retail sources is not urgent, and the state of the market does not invite purchasing ahead of trade requirements. Jobbing prices are unchanged at $17\frac{1}{2}$ to 21c. All other coffees remain as they were. Porto Ricos being 22 to 25c., Padang 26 to 28c., Mochas 28 to 32c., Javas 30 to 35c.

DRIED FRUIT.

Current business is fairly good, Valencia raisins having a moderately strong call at $4\frac{3}{4}$ c. upwards, but chiefly at 5 to $5\frac{1}{2}$ c. for off stalk. Currants are becoming scarce, with $4\frac{3}{4}$ c. the lowest quotation. Prunes are dull at $5\frac{3}{4}$ to 6c. Dates are in very light demand at 5 to $5\frac{1}{2}$ c. Peels are unchanged, lemon being 16 to 17c., orange 18c., citron 26 to 28c. The market for the raw material of candied lemon peel is very strong in Italy. Nuts are steady. The probabilities of the new fruit crops are thus outlined:

Valencia Raisins—Prospects continue good. Scaldings are likely to be later than last season.

Malaga Fruit—Mail advices report raisins to have suffered from warm weather, but that for some days the temperature has been very favorable. Crop is not so far advanced as last season's. Yieldings will probably be somewhat under 600,000 boxes. Prices will likely open high, owing to bareness of market. Jordan and Valencia almonds are turning out very short.

Sultana Raisins—Crop is estimated at 27,000 tons against 23,000 last year. Drying is now commencing. Prices will likely open low.

Eleme Figs—Weather has been most favorable. There is a large crop, and the probability is the trees will have enough strength to mature the whole.

Currants—Advices are that crop is progressing favorably, and is estimated at 145,000 tons. Quality, so far as can be judged at this period, will be much superior to last year's, though a great deal depends on weather during vintage and drying. Heavy rains on 23rd July caused some solicitude

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

The market develops slowly. Time makes but little difference in it, the conditions being very persistent in their sameness. Traders send in their orders and get their supplies, but the market shows no outward difference as the result of steady selling. If orders were more frequent and of greater volume the same remark would probably be applicable. The supply may be depended on, so far as appearances can be taken as evidence, to furnish all the stock that will be wanted before new pack goods come into trade. There are none of the signs that go in advance of early depletion. Prices are not rising, are not even hardening, and this goes to show that the demand is not likely to outlast the supply. Prices are $1 to $1.05 for staple vegetables. In new pack goods, jobbers are not showing special eagerness to make contracts for future delivery. They have bought assorted cars in a few cases at 85c. Some retailers are reported to have done a little in this way, however. Fruits are very dull, as they always are at this season, but cherries, plums and peaches of the old pack are held more steadily on ac-

To Canning Men.-OUR CYCLONE PULP MACHINE

For making tomato pulp and preparing pumpkin and squash for canning is very well known to all the canners in the United States, and a few of them are in use in Canada. The high tariff has prevented their being used extensively heretofore.

We are now manufacturing these machines at Oakville, Ont., to enable our Canadian friends to obtain them without paying a heavy duty; but we shall make only a few of them unless ordered. Those who contemplate purchasing, should send their orders promptly to insure the saving of duty, as late orders will have to be filled from stock in the United States which will be subject to a 30 per cent duty.

MONTREAL.

There is nothing new in canned goods, as there is only a small hand to mouth trade doing. The trade here are only buying what they actually require, and we have no big deals to note. It is reported that salmon will be scarce as The Fraser river catch was not up to the standard.

about rot. Shipments will commence about 20th inst.

Turkish Prunes—Cable advices are that crop is smaller than last year, and that in consequence of speculation prices now named are very high.

RICE AND SPICES.

Rice does not play a very prominent part in the business now being done, though some good sized orders have received attention this week. The price of B rice is $3\frac{3}{8}$ c. to 4c. Conflicting reports come from Japan, but the latest is rather adverse. The favorable weather and consequent advancing prices are the news that comes by latest reports.

In spices the market affords nothing new to say. Trade is quiet and prices remain at quotations given in Prices Current.

SUGAR.

It is obvious that the season's sales will not aggregate so many tons as preserving requirements called for last year. The lower price cannot stimulate the demand to any over-exertion. The limits of the fruit crops have a more determinative effect this year than the prices of sugar have. Cherries have been a failure, and hardly any fruit crop has been as full as the corresponding crop of a year ago. Sugar still sells at low prices. The trade still refer to the sugar business in language expressive of disgust at the foolishness of everybody who is taking a hand in the business upon the basis of cut prices. There are signs of amendment observable in some quarters, but they are far from general. The refiners now ask $4\frac{1}{4}$ c. for granulated, and wholesalers are still prepared to sell car loads at that price at the refinery. The price of yellow is from $3\frac{1}{4}$ c. upwards, that quotation being the one holding for car-loads. There are some houses that prefer to be spectators of business in granulated at $4\frac{1}{4}$ c., and decline to take any orders at so low a figure, wanting at least $\frac{1}{8}$ c. more than this. These do not hunt orders for sugar. The prices that receive the sanction of greatest usage are $4\frac{3}{4}$ c. for granulated and rather more than a cent lower for yellow, shipped from Toronto.

Willett & Gray, New York, in their weekly sugar Statistical say : The stock in all the principal countries, at latest uneven dates, 1,045,536 tons, against 1,017,704 tons at the same uneven dates last year. Stock in Havana and Matanzas, by cable, 110,000 tons, against 117,000 last week. Centrifugals have been quiet and steady, at $3\frac{3}{8}$ for 96° test, at which moderate sales have been made. Sugars for shipment from Cuba are still withheld from sale except at an advance. The market is somewhat governed by sentiment, and it is possibly that Cuba may weaken again when European sugars begin to arrive. Muscovados declined 1-16c. to 2 11-16c. European markets are quiet and steady, at 13s. 3d, cost and freight, for 88° analysis beet sugar. The demand for refined has been large during the week, and meltings have increased, but the American Sugar Refining Company have met the demand fully and freely, and their capacity is fully equal to any sized demand that may come, however large it may prove to be during the immediate active months of the year. A notable feature is that the production and consumption are now equal, while last year at this time a very considerable amount of refined remained in stock unsold.

From F. O. Licht's July report : The weather during the past month was warmer than the two preceding years, but with too little rain for the last sowings, which, however, are now developing rapidly. The dry weather favored field work. Thinning out was finished the third week of June, and the soil kept continuously clear of weeds. There were complaints of the beet fly and the gamma owl. The latter insect increases rapidly, and may do damage the coming month. The beet fields generally in Germany look well, and have made considerable progress in leaves and roots as well as in contents of sugar, being, by tests, slightly ahead of last year at this time, giving prospects of a good middling crop. In Austria-Hungary the beets have grown well, and the fields are satisfactory and justify the best hopes. In France accounts are still contradictory and partly unsatisfactory, and rain is much needed. Belgium is like France, or worse. Holland is mostly favorable. Of the European crop, as a whole, no correct judgment can be formed now, as the weather after the end of August will decide the agricultural yield and the contents of sugar.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrup is locally out of demand. At the refineries there is an unusual scarcity of stock, owing to some big purchases made recently on Maritime Province account. The price from which quotations range upwards on spot is 2c.

Molasses has had a quiet week of it. West Indian descriptions are steady at the recent advance. Prices are 35 to 37c. for Trinidad in puncheons. Porto Rico hogsheads are 38 to 40c. New Orleans barrels are 30 to 32c.

TEAS.

The strength of the market as reported last week has been confirmed. Later cables report a very strong tone in Japan. Locally, wholesalers are not buying freely. They do not need the tea particularly at the moment, and they are reluctant to pay in advance of needs. There have been some sales made at 16 to 18c., seven or eight hundred parcels having been placed at those prices, and are now on their way forward. Mail advices from London, England, under date of 30th of July, report that market over supplied with common to medium Ceylons, and prices on these grades rather weak, fine Ceylons in good demand, and a limited quantity offering. Common kinds of Indian teas are very cheap, but finer grades scarce, and very stiff prices had ruled at the auction rooms. Javas show slight improvement over recent prices. China Congous are without change. The new season's Kaisows were expected to arrive on the 2nd of August. Young Hysons are strong, and low grades scarce and dear. Monings showing good value, and prices are likely to strengthen.

MARKET NOTES.

[Importers, wholesale merchants and manufacturers should send any items intended for this department so that they may reach the head office not later than Wednesday morning. The editor will always welcome such information.]

Importers are sending forward orders for September shipment of dried fruits.

There are enquiries for canary seed in round lots. Holders ask 4 to 5c. as to quantity.

Advices as to the French sardine catch are still very unfavorable, and it is stated also that the Portuguese catch has fallen off lately.

The regular Dutch sale of Government Java coffee is reported as going $\frac{3}{4}$ florins above valuation, and good ordinary quoted at 55 $\frac{3}{4}$ florins.

The first shipment of new Valencia raisins for this market will be made from Denia the first week in September. A shipment for New York will leave about August 25.

Perkins, Ince & Co. have a cable from Shanghai saying: "The agreement in regard to the total export of Pingsueys has been settled, and they have advanced 1 tael. The total export decided upon is about 15 per cent. short of last year's.

Reports as to the Japanese rice crop are of a promising nature, the weather being all that could be desired, and a good and early harvest is anticipated. The quotation of rice has fallen in consequence, and it is expected to drop lower than $6 per koku.

Perkins, Ince & Co. have received the first samples of new Young Hyson tea, representing a shipment which arrived a few days ago at Vancouver by the Empress of India. The prices quoted are about the same as those of a year ago.

Davidson & Hay have received a large lot of medium and low grade Japan teas, which are now in store. Prices range from 12 to 17c. Exports of this class of teas are short, and shippers are prophesying that Canada will be buying in New York before the end of October.

The steamship Hankow, the first tea vessel of the season via Suez Canal, has arrived. She left Yokohama May 18th and Singapore June 18th, and makes a passage about in accord with calculations. Her tea cargo consists of 84,261 lbs. old Japans 823,569 new Congous, and it is expected the latter will attract attention as soon as ready for negotiation.—N. Y. Commercial Bulletin.

J. Lockhart Watt & Scott, Toronto, have received an advance sample of the new crop Sultana raisins. In quality it is fully up to the level of former seasons' fruit, and has a very bright appearance. No shipments have yet been made. The sample left Smyrna on the 23d July.

The N.Y. Commercial Bulletin says: Some little time ago we noted the inauguration of contract dealing for future delivery of pepper on some of the European exchanges, and there is evidence that the influence is commencing to be felt here. On the first of the present month our local accumulation was some 6,000 bags less than at the corresponding date during the previous two years; the London stock was reported about 1,000 tons short, and the latest advices from primal points lead to an impression that shipments will be light for some time to come. These features, in conjunction with the fact that exceedingly low rates are leading to steady full consumption of the pure article to the exclusion of adulterations, attract attention, and there is a speculative itching in some quarters.

The British Columbia Commercial Journal says: The run in the Fraser river is very poor, almost a total failure, and it is not at all improbable that the canners will not put up one-quarter of their usual pack. The Beaver and Richmond canneries are reported to have so far put up about 250 cases each. There is still another month for fishing, and although the cannery men hope to put up a half-pack, which is all they are allowed by agreement, the prospects are rather disappointing. The run on the Skeena river is very good, and all the canneries are sure of putting up the full three-quarter pack. The Balmoral and Inverness canneries at last reports were getting on nicely, and are expected to pack their full limit of 11,250 cases each. It is believed the other canneries on the Skeena will have no difficulty in packing up to their limit, as reports state that the run on the Skeena is one of the best for years. The last reports from the Naas were very favorable. The fish were still running, and the canners were expecting to pack up to their limit. The run at Alert Bay has been very fair, and at last advices 1,200 cases had been put up. Last year the fishing here was a complete failure, only 600 cases having been put up. The limit for the Alert Bay cannery this year is 5000 cases. At Rivers Inlet the run up to last advices was only middling well, but this may increase later, and it is yet uncertain how the pack will turn out. The Barbara Boscowitz, which arrived July 22, brought down the first of the new sea-

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

Inquiries for flour are not so numerous as they were and actual business is of smaller volume. Prices are the only thing that has not lost ground. They remain as they were, with a slight tendency to weakness. The falling off in the eastern demand has a natural tendency to lower the tone of prices, but shipping is expected to take a start in the early future. Feed is in good inquiry and is firmly held at the mills.

FLOUR.—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.95 to $5; strong bakers', $4.50; white wheat patents, $4.80; straight roller, $4.40; low grades, per bag, $1.25 to $1.50.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.80 to $4.90; Manitoba strong bakers' $4.25 to $4.40; Ontario patents, $3.90 to $4.20; straight roller, $3.65 to $3.75; extra, $3.20 to $3.25; low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.50.

MEAL—Oatmeal is $3.80. Cornmeal is $3.50.

FEED—Bran is $11.50 to $12, shorts $13 $14, mixed feed $22, feeding corn 50 to 52, oats 33c.

HAY—Is fairly active at $10.50 for No. 1 new timothy and $9 for new.

STRAW—Is steady at $6.50 to $7.

MONTREAL.

A quiet local trade in straight rollers and strong bakers is reported at quotations: other grades are neglected; very little doing for export account, as buyers' limits are below spot prices, which range as follows:—Patent spring, $4.70 to $4.85; patent winter, $4.25 to $4.65; straight roller, $4.00 to $4.15; extra, $3.40 to $3.60; superfine, $3.10 to $3.25; fine, $2.75 to $3.10; strong bakers, $4.25 to $4.40.

Oatmeal quiet, sales confined to home wants. Granulated, bbls $3.90 to $4; rolled bbls., $3.90 to $4.00; Standard, bbls., $3.85 to $3.95; granulated in bags, $1.90 to $2.00; rolled in bags, $1.90 to $2.00; standard in bags, $1.80 to $1.90.

Bran and shorts are in fair local demand. Mouille is quiet. Quotations are as follows: Bran per ton, $12.50 to $13.50; shorts per ton, $14.00 to $14.50; mouille per ton, $19.00 to $22.00.

son's pack from the northern canneries, consisting of 300 cases; 200 cases were landed on the Fraser river, and 100 cases of Naas river spring salmon from McLellan's cannery were delivered to a Victoria jobber, by whom these are quoted at $5 a case of four dozen. Advices received from the Columbia river state that the pack there is about the same as last year in quantity, but is of an inferior quality, because of the small quantity of Chinook salmon packed. On account of the shortness of the Chinook run, the canners have substituted large numbers of steel-heads and bluebacks, which are as well known, inferior fish.

PETROLEUM.

Business is backward. No very large orders have been submitted this week. The daylight is now very considerably curtailed, but trade has not correspondingly expanded. Prices are steady, Canadian refined being unchanged at 14 to 14½c.

The Petrolia Advertiser reports: Petrolia crude $1.26¼ per barrel; Oil Springs crude $1.27¼ per barrel. Oil matters this week are rather at a standstill, nothing of any particular importance having occurred since our last to make any change in prices. The wells are still holding the production to its requirements and new ones are continually being struck that will prove sufficient to cover all decreases. Owing to the smaller quantity required for refining purposes at this season of the year, the stocks in the banking companies' charges will be considerably increased by the time the fall season opens. Prices for both crude and refined may be quoted as above, there being no change since our last.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The great heat has been a hindrance to shipping, so that receipts have fallen off and prices have risen. Good dairy tub butter is worth 15 to 16c., and medium brings about 14c. Store tubs are worth about the same, if they contain really prime stock. All the low grade butter obtainable finds ready sale at 11 to 12c. It is as scarce as any other description. No creamery tub is moving on this market. There was a sale of two cars of straight yellows made on Monday. The butter was sold to a Montreal buyer. The improved tone of the butter market may not outlast the hot spell, but the strong shipping demand that is coincident with this shortage indicates that butter will find ready sale in any state of weather, so that an increase in the supply is unlikely to affect materially the butter market.

Cheese is very firm at the moment at 10c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Holders profess to see profit in the holding on to stock, as they claim the coming crop will need to be helped out by the surplus of '91. The price is unchanged at from $1 for cars and $1.10 to $1.20 for small lots.

DRIED AND EVAPORATED APPLES—Prices are the same, that is, sun dried are 4 to 4½c., according to quality, and evaporated are 6½ to 7c.

EGGS—The market is not well supplied with strictly fresh stock. The price now going is 11½ to 12c.

HONEY—Extracted is 5 to 7c., sections are 14c.

HOPS—There is little to base any estimate of yield or prices of new hops. Old are dull at 21 to 24c., and 90's are 16 to 18c.

PROVISIONS.

The provision trade is active, but in some lines there is a want of stock that impedes business. No movement in very large lots is reported. Prices are firm but unchanged in quotation.

BACON—Long clear is 8c., smoked backs are 11c., bellies 11c., rolls 9c.

HAMS—Are steady at 11c.

LARD—Pure is unchanged at 9¾ to 10c. for tubs and pails. Compound is steady at 7 to 9c.

BARREL PORK—U. S. heavy mess is $13 to $14, Canadian $15, short cut $16.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef is 3 to 4½c. in fore and 7 to 8½c. in hindquarters, mutton is 7 to 7½c. Lamb 9½ to 10½c., mutton 7 to 7½c., veal 6½ to 7½c.

VEGETABLES.

New potatoes are plentiful at $1 to $1.25 per barrel. Tomatoes are 50 to 60c. a basket. Watermelons are up again, quoting now at 30 to 35c. Muskmelons are plentiful at $.250 per crate. Cabbage are $1.25 to $1.50 per barrel. Celery is 75c. to $1 per crate, or 50c. a dozen. Egyptian onions are $.250 per sack.

GREEN FRUIT.

Another hot spell has forced up the demand to unusual strength and the sale of lemons has been brisker than it was at any former time this summer. Prices have developed also under the genial influence of warm weather, and now lemons are $6 to $7 per box. Oranges are not materially higher, $6 to $6.50 representing the range of quotations. Rodis are the only description in stock. Bananas are firm at $2.25 to $2. California peaches are $1.75 to $2, plums $2 to $2.75, pears $3 to $3.50. Georgia grapes are 90c. to $1 per basket. Canadian peaches are 90c. to $1. Canadian pears 50 to 65c. Raspberries are nearly done, and are 7½ to 10c., huckleberries 75c. to $1, black currants $1.40 to $1.60.

FISH.

The fish market is entering upon its active season. A good steady demand is now keeping up a pressure that proves at moments too strong for the supply. There are occasional delays for arrivals. Prices are higher. White fish and salmon trout are 7c. per lb., lake herring are $2 to $2.50 per hundred (count), British Columbia salmon are 17c.

SALT.

The demand for salt keeps up to its usual midsummer mark. Prices are steady at quotations in Prices Current.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, Aug. 11 1892.

GROCERIES.

The grocery trade at this point is about the same as noted in our last. There is nothing new to note outside of the enterprise of one of our leading fruit houses who are holding auction sales of California fruit. At first it was thought that one sale a week would do, but the late sales were carried through with so much snap that it has been decided to hold two sales a week. Sugar is firm with a fair trade doing. The same may be said of all other heavy lines, with the exception of molasses. This line after being held at 33c. for some time has been slashed by the usual cutters, and is now offered at 30½c. It is really sickening to see the big houses trying their best to cut the trade up so. Payments are as good as usual, and in all lines outside of molasses prices are now firm.

SUGARS.

The sugar market at this point still maintains the firmness noted last week. The refiners claim to be doing a nice trade at steady prices. The wholesale trade have settled down to business in the way of price and unless one of them breaks out things are likely to remain firm for some time to come. We hear of several jobbing lots cleaned off. One dealer has an inquiry for a round lot but will not accept the price offered. If all dealers was like this one prices would be held firm. We quote Granulated 4½ to 4 9/16c.; yellows, low grade 3½ to 3¾c., and yellows bright 3¾ to 4¼c.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.

Syrups are still scarce and firm, but the demand is very slow, there being only a small trade doing. Molasses has again taken a drop and is now held at 30½c. There is one house here who is responsible for the cutting and no sooner than the price is settled they start to back it up. Stocks here are not heavy but will soon be recruited as a boat with 1000 puncheons will be in this week. In talking to some of the wholesale dealers about the cut, we find out that it is started by the would be molasses kings, and when it is likely to stop is not for us to say. The majority of the trade would like to be back to the old combined prices, and a meeting is likely to be called soon.

TEAS.

In Japan teas the market is not so good as it was last week. Prices are still held firm under light stocks, as there has not been many Japans come forward as yet. One large broker here says there is not likely to be many more of this grade of teas to come to this market. Advices from Japan state that the market is firm under light stocks. In blacks the usual business is being done. The new stock has come to hand and dealers are now working on samples. The new stock is very fine and in good shape.

COFFEE.

The usual jobbing trade is being done in coffee. Stocks here are not heavy and prices are firm. Rios are in good demand, but stocks here are light. We quote—Rios 18 to 20c.; Java, 23 to 25c.; Mocha, 24 to 25c.; Jamaica, 19 to 21c.; and Maracaibo, 22½ to 23c.; Santos, 17½ to 19c.

RICE.

The trade doing in rice during the week has been of a steady nature, both in a jobbing way and to the wholesale trade. The mills here have done a nice trade lately and are satisfied. We quote as follows.—Standard $4 to $4.10, Japan $4.50 to $5, Patnas $4.50 to $5, and Carolinas $7 to $8 per hundred pounds.

SPICES.

Spices are still in fair demand. The trade doing is of a jobbing nature, there being no big deals put through. Business on the whole is considered fair and the trade has no cause to complain.

NUTS.

A steady local trade to the wholesale trade is all there is to say regarding nuts. Prices are the same and stocks here are fair. One dealer here says the duty on nuts is to high to admit of any large trade being done. The following are the quotations:—Almonds Tarragona 14 to 15c.; almonds, Ivica, 14 to 15c.; almonds, common, 10 to 11c.; almonds, hard-shell, 7 to 8c.; walnuts, Grenoble, new 12 to 14c.; walnuts, French 10 to 10½c.; cocoanuts per 100 $3.75 to $4.00; filberts 9 to 10c. pecans 16 to 17c.; peanuts 7 to 10c.

DRIED FRUITS.

The market here is bare of good fruit, and there is a good demand for prime Valencias, which cannot be had. The stocks on spot are very poor, and until the new stock arrive there will not be much done. Advices from abroad state the crop is large, and if got in safely will be one of the best for some time. A cable quotation has been received to-day, viz., 16s. for prime off stock fall delivery free on board. We quote: Currants, provincials, 4¼c. to 4¾c. in bbls; do. 4½ to 4¾c in half bbls; do. 4¾c in cases; currants, Patras, 5c in bbls; do. 5¼c in bbls; do. 5½c in cases. Raisins, Valencias, 4½c.

GREEN FRUIT.

The late California fruit sale has had a good effect on the green fruit market. The business done during the week although not large was steady, all lines having good call. There will be another auction sale of fruit to-morrow, and Messrs. Vipond, McBride & Co. are now going to have two sales a week, starting next week. We quote: — Oranges $5.50 to $6, lemons $4 to $4.50 California peaches $2 to $2.50 per basket, plums $3.50 per crate, pears $3.50 to $4, bananas $1 to $1.50 per bunch, raspberries 65c. per pail, watermelons 20 to 35c., Southern peaches $3.50 to $4, Western peaches 75c. to $1.

APPLES.

Some new stock has been received, but it is not over ripe and does not meet with a very good demand. Dried and evaporated fruit are dull and quiet. We quote regular $3.50 to $4.50 per barrel, evaporated 6 to 6½c., dried 4 to 4½c. per lb., and evaporated peaches 12 to 13c. per tin.

ONIONS AND TOMATOES.

Both onions and tomatoes have advanced but the business doing is about the same as last week. The local tomatoes are now beginning to come in but they are not very good. They to some extent hurt the market for good stock. We quote onions $3 to $3.50 per case and tomatoes 50 to 65c. per basket, and carrier selling at $1.35 to $1.65.

HONEY.

The demand for honey is light and confined to retail wants. Some dark colored stock has been moved during the week at a shade under our figures. We quote strained bright 7 to 8½c., dark 6 to 7c., comb bright 8½ to 10c., dark 7 to 9c.

HOPS.

Hops are unchanged and the demand confined to home wants. Pressed are in fair demand at old prices. We quote good samples of last years stock 25 to 30c., while old are hard to place pressed are selling at 16 to 18c., in a jobbing way.

FISH.

Gaspé salmon is now over while British Columbia, fresh stock is selling at 14 to 15c. Other fresh fish are in their usual steady call. We quote as follows: Smoked Yarmouth bloaters, per 60 box, $1.00 to $1.10; St. John's bloaters, per 100 box, 80c. to $1.00; boneless cod, large boxes, 6 to 7c.; do. small boxes 7 to 8c.; finnan haddies 7 to 8c.

We quote No. 1 herring, per brl., $4.50 to $4.60; lake trout, per half brl., $4.00 to $4.25; sea trout, per bbl., $8.25 to $8.75; codfish, green, No. 1, per bbl. $4.75 to $5.00; do. No. 2, per bbl., $4.25 to $4.50; codfish, dried, per bbl., $4.25 to $4.50; salmon, B.C., per bbl., $13 to $13.50; do. Nfld., No. 1, per tee, $22.50 to $23; do. do., No. 2, per tee, $21 to $21.50; do. do., No. 3, per tee, $20 to $20.50.

EGGS.

The local egg market is dull with heavy receipts, prices are unchanged to-day. The percentage of loss is heavy and with only a fair demand, prices are as follows. We quote 11 to 12c.

PROVISIONS.

The local demand for pork and other hog product is small, but the feeling is very strong, and choice brands of short cut at a fraction over our figures. Lard and smoked meats are in their usual demand, but are not very bright at the best. We quote Canadian short cut, per brl. $16.75 to $17.50; mess pork, western, per brl. $16.00 to $16.50; short cut, western, per brl. $00.00 to $00.00; hams, city cured, per lb. 11c. to 11¼c; lard, Canadian, in pails 8¼c to 8½c; bacon, per lb. 9½ to 10¼c; lard, com. refined, per lb. 7 to 7¼c.

CHEESE AND BUTTER.

Cheese is firm enough to-day. That is high prices are being paid for the last half of July by exporters, but whether they are profitable figures is another matter. In fact, it is hard to give the actual spot basis, but that 9½c. was paid at the boat for the 3,000 cheese offered, with 9½c. for some of the best, is undeniable. On this ground it ought to be a market over 9½c., but it is not so yet. Mail advices from the other side are encouraging as regards the position there a week ago, and the assumption is there will hardly be much decline now on really finest goods with the season so far advanced and the country so well cleared up. At any rate to move finest Western, white or colored, to-day would certainly take 9¾ to 9½c., and these are low figures in view of country cost. The cable is unchanged at the advance, 46s 6d.

Butter remains about the same. Creamery is dear but firmly held, and it is claimed to be possible by some holders, but we doubt if it has been made in a general way yet. However, we quote it as an extreme. For dairy stock we note business in Western at 16 to 16½c.

There are more strictly fresh eggs coming in, but the receipts still show a large percentage of shrinkage, and prices hold steady at 11 to 12c under a good demand.

GRAIN.

Wheat is nominal on spot with little offering. Peas and oats are firm, the former being higher in sympathy with the firm cable advices. There is demand for both, stocks being very low.

DRY GOODS.

The feeling in dry goods is about the same as noted in our last. The city stores are not doing as good a trade as if the people were all at home, but the country merchant is benefited by the out of town customer. The French section is about the same as the English. All the travellers out are doing a nice tidy business in all lines. Payments are good now, that is as good as can be expected Winnipeg grocers and butchers are commencing to talk of their annual excursion and picnic, and it is likely a meeting will be called at an early date to perfect arrangements. From the fact that already two large picnics are announced for the middle of August, and the grocers and butchers not desiring to conflict with other interests, it is probable the latter will not hold their excursion till the latter end of August or early in September. As yet no place or date has been selected.

CANADIAN

CHEESE WINS ENGLISH PRIZES.

Advices have been received by Prof. Robertson, dairy commissioner, of the results of the judging of the agricultural show held at Liverpool on 28th, 29th, and 30th July, under the auspices of the Royal Manchester, Liverpool, and North Lancashire Agricultural Society. The dairy commissioner had superintended the sending forward of same cheese to be entered for competition in the class open to the cheese of American or Canadian manufacture. The Canadian cheese carried off all the prizes which were offered. The society's gold medal and first prize went to Canadian cheese of September make exhibited by a local shopkeeper in Liverpool. The society's silver medal and second prize went to a lot of cheese from Messrs. L. C. Tilley & Son, of New Brunswick. The third prize was awarded to cheese of the "Empress" brand from Messrs. A. A. Ayer & Co., Montreal. "Very highly commended" was the ticket placed upon the exhibit from the "Palace Road Cheese Factory" exhibited by Mr. J. Gerow, Napanee, Ont. Another lot from the dairy station at Perth, Ont., was awarded the ticket "Commended."

At Irish Creek, Ont., Christopher Richard's general store and a large stock of goods in it were destroyed by lightning on Tuesday night.

At a meeting of the Hamilton council of the Board of Trade held on Tuesday, J. M. Lottridge was appointed president and H. N. Kittson vice-president.

H. N. Bate & Sons, wholesale grocers, Ottawa, are talking of putting travellers on the road. Heretofore they have done business without a travelling staff.

W. H. Ruby, of the firm Ruby & Hilker, general merchant, Port Elgin, Ont., was found drowned off the breakwater of that town on Tuesday morning. He had been attending a meeting of the school board the previous evening, and never got home from it. It is supposed that he was making his way to a tug to send a message to his son up the lakes when the fatal misstep was made in the darkness. His gold watch and chain, however, were missing. Mr. Ruby has been 37 years in business in Port Elgin, was for years chairman of the public school board and was a member of the high school board. He was a very highly respected man.

A meeting of cigar manufacturers was held at the office of Eichorn & Carpenter, Toronto, on Tuesday evening to consider the proposed change in the mode of collecting the inland revenue. John Taylor took the chair and John Spilling acted as secretary. It was moved by Mr. Schaeffer, seconded by Mr. Eichorn and carried: "That the system of collecting the inland revenue should not be changed." It was moved by Mr. Kell, seconded by Mr. Cohn and carried: "That the resolution adopted by us be sent to all cigar manufacturers in Ontario, and that a convention of the trade be held here on Tuesday, September 13."

SUGAR BOUNTIES AND PRICES.

The following, from the London Produce Markets Review, shows how the bounty system develops sugar production in France:

The Journal des Fabricants de Sucre thinks our estimate that the French Bounties cost the nation £6,000,000 a year to be a fantastic one. On inquiry in Paris, we find that the price of loaf sugar in that city in the shops exceeds one franc the kilogramme. It is thus about $4\frac{1}{2}$ d. per pound. Identically the same French sugar, made by the chief Parisian refiner, is being this moment sold in London at 2d. and $2\frac{1}{2}$ d. per pound, an average of $2\frac{1}{4}$ d. per pound. After paying freight and landing charges, French sugar is thus sold in London at just one-half what it costs the French consumer. Such a difference in price on a consumption of 500,000 tons a year means that the French system of crushing duties, accompanied by extravagant bounties, costs the French nation, not £6,000,000, but £10,500,000 a year. How much of that sum reaches the Treasury net and is spent in the public service we do not know, but the whole of the amount is obviously drawn from the pockets of the people. In addition, the production and consumption of sugar are checked to incalculable degree by the high price caused by the bounties and duties. On the English scale, the French consumption would reach 1,300,000 tons, or some 800,000 tons more than the present amount. Taking 800,000 tons as worth £16 per ton retail, the French farmer, manufacturer, distributor, and consumer lose between them £12,800,000, a year on sugar that might be grown and used in France, and is not made there. Adding this to the £10,500,000 surcharge, paid by the French consumer for his sugar at present over what he need pay under a system of free sugar, the much vaunted French system is costing that country £23,000,000, or 575,000,000 francs a year. Our contemporary the Journal will reply that, on the other hand, a grand national industry has been saved; but, taken on the basis of figures, its salvation is a terribly dear bargain for the French taxpayer. Besides there was nothing to prevent the grand national industry from saving itself. It was surely unnecessary to bribe it in such an extravagant way, in order to induce it to buy its seeds of a German seedsman instead of a French one, and to adopt German methods of cultivation. It has now certainly done both, but necessity would have compelled it to do so, without the aid of the national exchequer.

THE NEW MAN.

The new man is generally obtrusively anxious to get business. He no sooner registers at the hotel than he makes a bee-line for the dealer. He isn't deliberate in his manner, like the veteran, who has very little to say for himself, and goes about his work without hurry or excitement. The longer a man is on the road the more matter of fact he grows, and the more he does his work as if it were a regular, everyday occurrence. The new man is apt to be in a hurry to finish up his work in a town, and get out of it as soon as possible. In this he is likely to make a mistake. It never pays to attempt to force things. It must not be forgotten that the dealer is called upon to give up a great deal of time to travelling men, and is, indeed, sometimes considerably bored by them. The traveller must not always calculate on finishing his customer at the first interview. He must study his mood, and if this doesn't strike him as favorable he shouldn't stay too long, but, having personally paid his respects, promise to call around later. It is unwise to attempt to force business at an inopportune time. Better miss a train than to intrude on a dealer who is out of humor, or who is busy with customers. The new man is very apt to reveal his newness through a disregard of these necessary precautions. He has an exaggerated estimate of his own importance, and is apt to regard any apparent indifference on the part of the dealer as a piece of rank impertinence. Isn't he a travelling representative of Rich, Gold & Co., the wealthiest and most ancient and aristocratic firm in the country? This intimation, therefore, of the upstart dealer of Podunk, that he should wait until a horde of country bumpkins have been served, is a piece of unpardonable effrontery. He has a very good mind to pick up his traps and leave the place without giving this rude fellow a chance to even look at his samples. He may think better of it, however, and smother in its very infancy this rash resolve, but he cannot conceal the air of irritability that has been aroused. The old hand never allows little things like this to disturb his equanimity. The same old hearty greeting and pleasant word fitly spoken, the same unruffled demeanor, the same bonhomme, secure for him a successful interview on the morrow. The new man is very likely to reveal his freshness on the way from the front door to the office in the rear of the establishment. One of the most difficult things for a young actor to master is said to be the walk across the stage, but the achievement can scarcely be more difficult than for the new man to walk the length of the store, on his first call, without arresting the attention of the clerks. His studied air of indifference to his surroundings, and his supercilious enquiry for the proprietor—nothing short of the proprietor for him—are a clean giveaway. His carriage differs from that of a veteran. The latter slights no one in the establishment. He has a pleasant "good day" for every man and boy in his way, and the respectful smile he has for the girls makes him "perfectly lovely" in the quick-discerning optics of the fair ones. Before he has reached the office he has captured the whole institution. It doesn't do to slight the clerk, for it may turn out that he is the very one to be consulted in making up an order. While it is a good plan to learn the proprietor's name, and to become acquainted beforehand with the lay of the land, this knowledge can never excuse an omission of the little amenities to which I have referred. The new man will not be very old in the service before this lesson will have impressed itself indelibly on his mind. But when he has mastered all of these little details of the craft he will have shed his outer skin and ceased to be "the new man."—The Travelling Salesman.

IMPROVED BOOK-KEEPING.

Some improvements are always being made in book-keeping, but the old day-book, journal and ledger still remain nearly the same old time-honored articles. But the Barber & Ellis Co. are now manufacturing a line of ledgers and a mercantile register which are well adapted to work a revolution in book-keeping. The mercantile register, invented by a gentleman named Hill, is a new thing and well worthy of attention. It is adapted to last for six years in any business. It shows in a very simple manner the amount of business done each day, the amount per week and the amount per year in all the various departments. It shows at a glance the actual worth of the firm at any time, the aggregate amount of the liabilities and the aggregate amount of book accounts and bills receivable. It shows the amount of cash received, how received, and how expended. It shows when an insurance policy expires. In fact, it tells a man everything he desires to know about his business at any time of the year. It is not complicated, but the necessity of having the various parts and departments correspond to each other prevents mistakes. This is especially useful in the cash department. No progressive book-keeper should fail to see this new expedient.

Hill's Wholesale Ledger, which can also be used by retailers, shows at a glance cash payments, discounts, goods returned, past due accounts; contains monthly statements of all invoices, notes and drafts maturing, and shows when and how each are paid. This ledger is specially adapted to the needs of retailers by a man who knows exactly what they need, and has spent years of work in attaining perfection in these books. Anything which shows a business man what he is actually doing and where he is standing is greatly beneficial to him, as business men very seldom know this, and when a man does not know he is sick, how is he going to apply a remedy. If men knew exactly, twelve times a year, what their financial position is, there would be fewer failures and a more tranquil business world.

Every line of goods embodies a history and a science worth years of study to understand

If you want books, it is rarely wise to pay double price for them to a travelling book-seller

The neglect to look after minute details in the factory is a source of great loss to many producers.

Competition is keen and active, and the only way to meet it successfully is to buy from the best houses, and at lowest prices.

AN OLD LEGEND.

Once there was a man—so the legend runs—who had on his hands for many years some goods of which he could not possibly dispose. He grew weary of seeing them, until it seemed to him that they were a heavier burden than the Old Man of the Sea, and that he was in sorrier straits than Sinbad. When the burden became greater than he could bear, he shifted it to the shoulders of the auctioneer, a resource from which poor Sinbad was debarred. A few days later, walking up the street and wondering with what he should fill the space left by the sale of his goods, his eye lit upon a shop window which impressed him as containing a choice selection of articles of exactly the quality and quantity suitable to his purposes. And he went within to secure them, but found to his chagrin and amazement that they were his own despised wares arranged with some sense of appreciation and harmony.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Leon Labonde, for the past 10 years, one of the best known travellers and tea salesmen on the road from Port Arthur, Ont., to Victoria, B. C., and in the N. W. States of the U. S. and Wash., is open for engagement to travel on salary or commission in any part of Canada or the U. S. Mr. Labonde's residence is now at 109 St. Denis St., Montreal, P. Q., Canada, having removed from Winnipeg last February. The highest references will be furnished from mercantile houses, bankers, etc., to any house requiring his services, who may happen not to know him, and if you require a traveller with the most successful of records, acknowledged ability, a spotless reputation, and the finest connection in this country, address as above. 38

AN IMPROVEMENT IN CHECK BOOKS.

There are few merchants of standing in the commercial world who do not use and appreciate the counter check book. In many cases by adopting the rule of giving to each customer a bill of goods purchased on credit, and retaining a copy thereof, a system has been established which has been the means of saving hundreds of dollars every year to the merchants adopting the system. That counter check books more than pay their cost every day of the year, is the testimony of all who use them systematically. Thousands of merchants, nevertheless, lose money daily by a neglect to charge goods sold on credit. To avoid such loss the adoption of the check book is a necessity. It saves losses by thoughtlessness or carelessness. Cash sales are recorded and the duplicate placed in the till; while the credit duplicate is placed on the charge file. The salesman thus gets into the habit of recording every sale.

A new style of check book is now being placed on the market, which has an advantage over the old kind, in that no carbon leaf is required, yet every page copies to a duplicate bill with neatness, clearness and permanency. It often happens with the old style that parts of the black leaf are worn out or torn off, or the leaf may be misplaced or left out, and thus the copy is imperfect or wanting. This new check book obviates all such difficulties, and it is impossible to have an imperfect copy, while no placing of leaves is necessary, thus saving much time and trouble. The carbon paper is discarded and the record is made with a printed heading and duplicate alone. This counter check book is entitled the "Happy Thought," and is handled exclusively in Canada by the J. K. Cranston Store and Office Supply Co., Galt, Ont. This book is cheaper than other counter books and must eventually displace the older kinds. Wide-awake merchants would do well to examine it carefully. Another strong feature of the book is the tally sheet, which is placed on the cover opposite to the writing pages, and can thus be easily used by the salesman to enter the amount of each cash or credit sale. These when added up give the total of each clerk's sales, and thus prove an incentive to them and produce a good-natured rivalry as to who can sell the most. Also, when these sales are added up the total amounts should correspond with the sum total of the checks, and thus an accurate result is obtainable. Any merchant can procure a sample of the book by writing J. K. Cranston, Galt, Ont., whose advertisement appears in another column.

WHERE THE JOKE COMES IN.

Mother—"Did you take good care of the parrot when I was in the country, Tommy, and not let it learn any bad words?"

Tommy—"Yes'm. I always took it out of the room when pa was sewing on a button." —Jester.

Miss Smithers—"What's become of your brother Tom? I haven't seen him for an age."

Miss Titters—"Pa got a letter from him written at Sing Sing. Tom said that he had forged ahead so successfully in business that he was sent up there to rest."—Exchange.

We have noticed that when you tell a woman her daughter is just the image of her when she was that age, the mother looks pleased, the daughter looks scared.—Achison Globe.

Housekeeper—"How's this? You promised to saw some wood if I gave you a lunch."

Tramp—"I recall no such promise, madame."

"The idea! I told you I'd give you a lunch if you'd saw some wood, and you agreed."

"Pardon me, madame. Your exact words were: 'I'll give you a lunch if you saw that wood over there by the gate.'"

"Exactly. That's just what I said."

"Well, madame, I saw that wood by the gate as I came in."—N. Y. Weekly.

"When love's well-timed, 'tis not a fault to love."

Thus spake the lover; from the hall above
This answer came: "Young man you're good and right,

And love's well-timed that quits at ten each

—"The larger the show windows I have to build, the greater panes are taken with them," remarked the contractor, when asked what constituted his most careful work.

Of the food preparations recently introduced, none is deserving greater attention than Highland Brand Evaporated Cream, which is not only an article of great merit to the consumers, but which also opens to the dealer a new source of revenue, as it enables him to supply families regularly at all seasons with delicious, natural, uniformly and perfect milk or cream, an article often difficult to obtain from the usual sources. It is simply pure cows' milk in a concentrated and improved form, put up in tin cans and sterilized. It retains its relishing properties for an indefinite time in all climates. If mixed with about two times its volume of water, it yields an excellent cream for ice cream, table use, or other purposes, and mixed with three times its volume of water, it yields milk in its natural state. While the article is a great convenience in every household, it is of special value for infant feeding, as it is absolutely pure and free from all microbic elements which often cause serious trouble to weak digestive organs. The article is prepared by the Helvetia Milk Condensing Co., of Highland, Ill., and as it is handled with scrupulous care and cleanliness, it is fit for use on the table of the most fastidious. Adv.

OUR NEW Fruit and Preserve Jar

(PATENTED JULY, 1891.)

These cuts represent our new Fruit and Preserve Jars which we are now introducing to the Canadian Trade, and in doing so, desire to draw your attention to the advantages they possess over those made of glass and other material.

The Jars are manufactured from a mixture of English and Pennsylvania clays, making a stronger and better article than can be produced from any other combination.

We use only a pure Bristol Stoneware Glaze, which is free from Lead or other Metallic substances readily attacked by all acids. We guarantee the body to be thoroughly vitrified and absolutely acid proof.

These Jars will be found superior to all other articles in use for the preservation of Fruits, etc. Being non-transparent, the action of light cannot fade the color or ferment fruits kept in them, as is the case where glass is used, and being a non-conductor of heat, preserves are kept at a more uniform temperature than in either glass or tin, and will be free from the unpleasant metallic taste so frequently noticed where tin is used.

They are made in various sizes and are for sale by all Crockery and Grocery Dealers in Canada.

The new city by-law, reserving certain streets in this city from the scope of pedlars' licenses, will be established or quashed tomorrow (Friday) as the test case referred to some time ago comes then before the High Court of Justice. In the meantime, pedlars hold their licenses subject to the issue of that case. In accordance with the suggestion of plaintiff's counsel in the test case, the city has consented to regard the pedlars as not yet acquiescing in the clause of their licenses that limit them to certain streets, and promises not to prosecute until the case now before the courts is settled, though holders of licenses proceed upon the assumption that the law is ultra vires.

The cigar manufacturers who met in this city last week, objected to the substitution of customs duty on the raw material for excise on the finished product, upon the ground that the change would be damaging to the smaller manufacturers. The customs duty recommended by the petitioners for the change is 35c. a pound on the leaf. The payment of this in addition to the cost of the tobacco before it got into the factory at all would call for a preliminary expenditure of capital that some manufacturers could not stand. The present tax amounts to $6 per thousand on the cigars. That proposed is equal to $7.70 per thousand. But the fighting ground of the cigar manufacturers' opposition is the great additional expenditure in advance of sale that the change would call upon them to make.

The letter of Mr. Weatherill, published in THE GROCER of the 15th of July, has been copied by several contemporaries of both the general and the trade press in this country and the United States. It deserves all the approval that is implied in the numerous reprints of it that have appeared, for as a statement of the best way for the country merchant to buy butter nothing that has yet been submitted can equal it. It deserves more than the favorable reception and wide publicity the press has given it. It is worthy of incorporation into the practice of every trader who buys butter. It is recurred to again in this issue because it is deemed too important a letter to be allowed to drop into the background of traders' memories. Merchants who read the letter approve it, but approval will not benefit themselves while imitation will, and will be much more flattering to the originator of the scheme than passive admiration can be. One hundred merchants in good dairying districts where there are no butter factories, could, by the adoption of Mr. Weatherill's method, enormously raise the standard of quality and of value in butter of domestic make. We continue to look hopefully to the country merchants as an agency of great reforming value in butter production.

The people of Victoria, Australia, will have to pay 6c. a pound, or about 15c. a tin, more for their canned fruits on account of the action of their government in putting on that amount of duty. The object of the duty is not generally alleged to be the development of domestic canning, but retaliation against the United States for the shutting out by that country of the wool of Australia sheep-raisers. The people of Victoria will probably continue to consume imported canned fruit, but certainly in a considerably diminished quantity. This does not affect Canadians very materially at the moment, as canners had not done any important shipping to the Australian colonies, but in the near future it was hoped that they would. We in this country are interested in seeing every market for canned goods kept as open as possible, for we have the goods to sell. Any barriers to this class of trade, even when those barriers directly affect only a country that competes with Canada in the production of canned fruit, is a drawback to us, for every competitor that is turned away from one market meets our canners in another. Dearer canned fruit to the people of Victoria colony probably means cheaper canned fruit to the United Kingdom, for more producers will be diverted there to sell their goods. There are in California, orchards, groves, and canneries that were brought into existence solely upon the strength of an Australian demand. Their products will now probably meet those of Canadian canners on the other side of the Atlantic.

The general understanding between buyer and seller that butter-packages go with the butter without additional cost, appears to be giving way in some parts of the country, and sellers want to be paid for their butter tubs. It is remarkable that they find country merchants complaisant enough to allow them such a claim, but it is a fact that they do. The merchant gets nothing for the tub, the commission merchant or wholesale produce dealer gets nothing for it, and if the butter changed hands a dozen times on its way to consumption the package would go free throughout the whole series of changes. Then why does the country merchant pay for it? Not because he gets his money back again, not because the butter trade is so satisfactory that he can afford to lose a little in this way, but simply because the storekeeper is inordinately eager to get people's trade. It's the old 'life of trade' again; it is competition. The merchant who buys butter-tubs and gives them away, is a type of a too numerous class of traders, who have such a hazy idea of enterprise that they think recklessness is but another name for it. The butter may be bad, and may have to be sold at 2 or 3 cents a pound below what the trader pays. It is probable also that the customer who brings it is able to buy all the goods she gets for it at greatly reduced prices. The eagerness for business that gives something for nothing makes these suppositions appear reasonable. Not only is it foolish to pay for what you have to give away, but it is disloyal in this particular case to the usages of the trade. A merchant should respect what is established as a trade-custom, if it is founded on right.

At the Congress of chamber of commerce of the British Empire which met in London at the beginning of last month it was resolved that the interests of the Empire called for a uniform system of weights, measures and currency. If such a system were established throughout the Empire, it would be of vast benefit in the aggregate of results; therefore, it would be many times more beneficial if it were adopted by all the civilized peoples of the earth. The saving would be enormous. The salaries now paid to clerks for converting the weights, measures and values from one mode of expression to another constitute a big tax on commodities. The diversity of standards and units causes endless confusion and bewilderment. The matter is made more complicated by the growth of tariff duties all over the world. The primary cost of any commodity expressed in foreign terms of weight and value is to be increased by the duty of so much ad valorem on some unit of weight different from that named in the quotation. If there were but one way of quoting all over the commercial world, business would be wonderfully simplified. The decimal principle is of course the easiest to base uniformity upon, on account of 10 being the radix of the numeration in use all over the civilized world. The metric system is perhaps the most scientific that could be devised on the basis of the decimal principle. It is extending in use and much more in favor. If it were established everywhere, not only should we have uniformity in all expressions of weight, measure and value, but we should have a huge mass of vague terminology—as boxes, barrels, bags, etc.—done away with, or converted into parcels of definite magnitude.

* * *

Commercial education is looming up among the realities of our time. It has a place in the work of all our high schools and collegiate institutes, and a greater number of pupils are taking it every year. But it should have more prominence in the earlier studies of boys and girls. Only a small percentage of those who go to school ever proceed farther than to the high school entrance examination. The great majority have therefore no opportunity to become acquainted with the rudiments of book-keeping and business practice. There is a value to this sort of education quite apart from the knowledge it puts the pupil in possession of. Of course it is imparted for the sake of its future direct use to the pupil. But it is an excellent means of disciplining the intellect and of educating to orderly mental habits, and without these habits, no matter how much special knowledge a man may have, he need not look for success in business. Arithmetical operations should be applied earlier than they are to fictitious commercial transactions. Very young boys and girls can be taught arithmetic more easily by such a concrete process, while at the same time they are taking the first steps in systematic business. The writing, spelling, calculating, expression and arrangement in such exercises, if particularly well supervised, give opportunity to bring on a boy's or girl's education very equably in several subjects at the same time. The trouble is that education is not simultaneous enough. It is apt to be too one-sided, too grammatical, too orthographical, etc. The teacher needs a centre around which all other subjects group, and the best central idea to a system of elementary education is commerce. If the people generally had the advantage of a good schooling on this basis up to the age of 12 years, there would be sounder practical economy abroad, and we should not hear of such quack attempts to regulate relations between buyer and seller as are illustrated by the Patrons of Industry, Grangers, etc.

If these bodies would give their attention to the school system instead of the commercial system, their members might live long enough to see the enlightening fruits of the more enlightened agitation. The true significance of the Patrons of Industry is to be found in what the ideas of that order reveal as to the low state of business education among the farmers.

Retail trade in the cities of Toronto and Montreal is just now considerably upset by the civic works that are being pushed through on the main trading thoroughfares. In the latter city the merchants and other business men on Notre Dame street are incensed at the delay shown by the corporation in laying the new roadway. They complain that no precautions have been taken to protect them against loss and serious inconvenience, both sides of the street through its entire length having been ripped up at once, the force of men at work being ridiculously small to complete it in even a moderately long time, and the side streets being closed at their intersections with Notre Dame. Sales have fallen off from 30 to 50 per cent. as a result of this virtual blockade. The merchants made an unsuccessful protest against this, and some are now talking of suing the city for the loss they have suffered. They want the business tax, at least, remitted for this year. In Toronto there is a similar disturbance of local trade and traffic, the main streets being torn up all over the city in the work of putting down new tracks for the electric street railway. Advantage is taken of the general convulsion of the highways to make other changes and both sides of the streets yawn with deep trenches along which are high banks of the earth that has been excavated. Along some of the business streets the cars have ceased to run for the time being, and therefore no longer do the up town buyers find their way to the stores on these streets. Trade is greatly impeded and curtailed, and deputations of merchants have waited on the council to have the matter ameliorated. In the case of Toronto, there appears to be no cause of complaint on the ground of delay, probably excessive haste is more to blame, as the railway company are operating at many points at the same time and fairly crowd the streets with workmen. But the business men of cities should have representation in the council adequate to protect them from what seems to be the mere inconsiderateness of that body. On those streets very high rents have to be paid, and taxes, always high, are made higher, to pay for the improvements that destroy so much trade during their progress. Alterations have to be made, but they can be made with a minimum of inconvenience.

* * *

Among the difficulties in the way of opening an export trade with the United Kingdom is the British tendency to misapprehend terms used in representations or descriptions. Buyers on the other side of the water are prone to be mistrustful of anything new, and when it is introduced to them there must be nothing equivocal in the language of the advices or announcements. The use of the word "refrigerator," in connection with the transportation of the California fruit of which a trial shipment went to England a fortnight ago, did not benefit the sale of the fruit, as it was intended to do, but did it serious harm, English buyers associating the idea of "frozen fruit" with "refrigerator." Of course they did not want frozen fruit, and buying was far from spontaneous. We on this side of the water differ from the people of the old countries in our general system of business, and consequently in our business expressions. If we lose sight of this fact we admit into our export trade with England a cause of difficulty. We should be at the pains to give an unmistakably English form to all our representations. Of course there cannot be the same impediments to the opening up of an export trade with Britain as there would be with a country in which an entirely different language is spoken. The translation of commercial language is often extremely difficult, the term which passes in one tongue as the equivalent of something in another very often conveying an imperfect and misleading idea of the true meaning. Still the identity of our language with that spoken in the United Kingdom is likely to betray us into neglect of the differences that must be incidental to our separateness, and we take less pains to make our commercial phraseology render the exact meaning to English ears than we do to foreign ears. A foreign term is usually a selling catch-word in this country, a strange term is a drawback to selling in England, unless that term has acquired certain associations that really make it no longer strange.

We have been favored with a copy of the programme of the St. Louis Retail Grocers' second annual pic-nic, held on the 7th inst. Its twenty pages are crowded with the advertisements of St. Louis' business houses.

THE DEMAND RULES THE QUALITY.

TORONTO, Aug. 11, 1892.

EDITOR OF THE CANADIAN GROCER.

DEAR SIR,—On looking over your issue of the 5th I see a letter from Stephen Hustwith, in answer to which, as secretary of the Retail Grocers' Association, I would like to say, in justice to the Association and myself, that the tea he refers to was noted and spoken of nearly two months ago. Anyone taking a handful of that tea called "The Mermaid" and smelling it could not help but be struck by its fragrant aroma. It might nearly do you as much good as going down to the seaside; it smells so of the briny. I myself tried it, and one trial was enough. It has earned its name without a doubt. The man who has it stuck outside of its door for sale is a ten times bigger fool than the people who buy it, for the deception is so glaring that once tasted it will never be forgotten. Those who buy it could not help but feel insulted, and their first impulse would be to spit it out and call the seller a downright fraud. The bait is such one nibble is enough. They will never come back. The customers who would return after being caught once like that are worthy of all they get.

In regard to package teas they have been brought up in the Association and discussed, and acted upon to a certain extent. I know that I myself have spared no pains to show the retailers where they were wrong in buying them. I have shown them the immense profit there must be in them to enable a wholesale house to pay a man a large salary and expenses to do nothing else but sell these package teas, let alone all the bill posting, advertising, tea lead and labels, and labor in putting up. That tea lead itself is quite an expensive article. It is not the same as the common tea lead. When you take all this into consideration you can easily see what an enormous profit there must be in it to allow for all this. It would pay the retailers better to put up their own package teas and do their own advertising. The smartest men in the business are doing that and saving what the others are losing. After being told all this, if the retail grocers have not sense enough to see where they are being robbed it is time they were out of business. But then you see if you were to tie fig leaves together and advertise them under some big high sounding name people would buy and imagine they had a bonanza. The excuse the grocers have made to me is, that these teas are advertised and people ask for them, and they have to keep them. A great many grocers don't care what the stuff is so long as the people call for it. They have got tired advertising and pushing other people's goods, and they let them advertise. They will keep the article, whatever it is, so long as the people ask for it. They don't even care what it costs. If the people ask for it they will pay the price, and it is the people they are standing behind the counter to please. It is by pleasing them that they build up their business and make money, not by dictating to them, for directly you begin to dictate to them without their asking your opinion, if they don't just tell you to mind your own business they will go where they can get what they want and leave you to learn by experience what that means. Why, I've had grocers return pure coffee over and over again, because their customers would sooner pay the same price for a mixture of coffee, rye, peas and chicory. They have been so trained to adulteration that they don't understand what pure goods means. They would spit purity out of their mouth, as if it were poison; their taste has become depraved. Why, the majority of people don't know what the finest tea means. Give them a good strong tea, one that would almost knock you down, and they would tell you that was the best tea, and laugh at you if you tried to tell them different. So what are you going to do so far as quality is concerned? It's a hungry crowd, give them something to fill up, and lots for the money, and they don't care for the quality in most cases. Of course there are exceptions. In fact some grocers have become so accustomed to goods being sold as pure that are not pure that they would tell you the pure goods were not half as good as the adulterated. That is a fact, and I can prove it. If an article is adulterated well and the people want it they will have it, if they hunt all over the city for it. They will go through fire and water to get it. The harder it is to get the more they will try. If the customers would only leave it to the grocers it might be all right, but they won't. They will go away for a month's holiday without paying their bills and let you wait till they come back, and never ask you whether they may or not. If the grocer were only independent and did not have to study them it would be different, but it is the same all through. The wholesaler has to sell the retailer what he finds he sells best, and just what the wholesaler likes. If he did the retailer might have it sticking on his shelves for a year or two. And so it is with the retailer; if he thinks he can sell his customer just what he likes, perhaps he'll find that he will have to gaze wistfully upon at the end of the year.

When you have to make your living by the public you have to please the public, not yourself. They will go to dry goods stores or hardware stores or drug stores or any other stores to get what they want, independently of grocers or anyone else. Mr. Hustwith is a gentleman I know well, and a man who thoroughly understands what he is talking about. In fact I question whether there is a better tea traveller on the road, or one who thoroughly understands teas better, and I think that he will agree in what I say. It will take too long for one or two men to change the tastes of the public in this matter. They have been too long trained to adulteration and to do as they please.

Yours most respectfully,

R. M. CORRIE.

DRUGS IN BUTTER.

A nefarious system of butter manufacture is exposed by the Chemist to the American Department of Agriculture. What is known as "gilt-edge butter compound" is advertised in the States, with the tempting assurance that if a small quantity of it be added to a pint of milk and a pound of butter, the whole being churned together, the operator will get two pound of butter, all the milk being incorporated. There is no doubt, the Chemist says, as to the truth of this statement, as it was verified by trials in the laboratory of the Department. The directions of the advertisers were followed, and the milk disappeared, two pounds of butter being produced, which resembled a first-class butter, except that it was softer. It does not keep well, but for immediate consumption passes easily as a genuine article, although analysis shows that it contains 49.55 per cent. of water and only 45.45 per cent. of butter fat, as compared with 15.92 per cent. of water and 80.53 per cent. of butter fat found in a sample of genuine butter. On the compound by means of which the trick is performed being analysed, it was found to consist of 70.48 per cent. and of anhydrous sodium sulphate 29.52 per cent. of organic matter, afterwards proved to be pepsin. Experiments tried with pepsin showed that it produced an emulsion which enabled butter to incorporate an equal quantity of milk in its substance without materially altering its appearance. The same result was produced with pancreatin, trypsin, or rennet. The sodium sulphate appears to be used simply as a carrying material, and to be of no assistance in the emulsifying process.—Ex.

QUEER ACTIONS OF A FRENCH BARON.

The recent failure of the Farnham Beet Root Sugar Factory, located at Berthier, Quebec, brings to light the rather sensational history of a certain scion of French nobility known as Baron Raymond Sellers. From all accounts the baron was originally the possessor of great wealth, having been bequeathed the sum of 4,000,000 francs. He made his first appearance in America in 1888, and although he was with us but a little over two months he managed to visit nearly every prominent city in the country and in that short time succeeded in spending something over $20,000. He finally landed in Montreal where he was taken sick, and upon his convalescence was removed by his relatives to Paris and confined in an asylum for the insane.

When released, an examination of his affairs disclosed the fact that his entire fortune had been dissipated and he was sent to America with only a few thousand francs in his possession. He visited Canada in 1889 and returning to France promoted a company with some $5,000,000 capital, to carry on the beet root sugar industry in the province of Quebec. His sister, the Princess Sagan, and several of the nobility invested in the baron's venture. He acquired the Farnham Beet Root Sugar Factory at Berthier, persuaded the government to allow a bounty of 1 3/4 cents per pound on sugar, and started the business. The factory did well for awhile, and last year the baron drew $8,000 profits. In the meantime, however, he had met a wealthy New York widow, Mrs. Livermore, whom he married after which he established a residence in Paris and henceforth his solicitude for the beet root industry declined. The Farnham factory was run in the name of Baron Sellers and Alfred Musey, who was sent from France to represent the interests of the syndicate.

It is claimed that it was the failure of the baron to advance the money necessary for the operations of the factory that caused the collapse of the company, and it now turns out that the other members of the firm are not responsible for the liabilities, as they were not incorporated nor registered as doing business in Canada. The baron and Musey alone are responsible, and suits have been entered against the baron personally for $4,000 rent of the factory, $700 on a note on a bank in Quebec and $500 for office rent in Montreal. The baron is said to have $25,000 invested in railway securities in Canada, and has a considerable sum to his credit in one of the Montreal banks, all of which will be attached to satisfy the claims. The disruption of the company ruins the beet root sugar industry of the province of Quebec, which the government had vainly tried to promote.—Chicago Grocer.

THE CORNER GROCER.

It was one of those warm sultry mornings, and the heat fairly danced on the granitoid sidewalk in front of the little corner grocery of which the subject of my sketch is proprietor.

A wide board laid into an open window served as a counter upon which there appeared for sale an apparently endless lot of vegetables, over which Schmidt had just finished sprinkling water from a wine bottle by means of the thumb of his right hand partially inserted into its neck.

Down the street, less than a block away, there appeared a loaded huckster's wagon, the driver of which lustily yelled: "Appoles! appoles! green corn! tomatoes! potatoes! nice new potatoes! 20 cents a peck! Get ep."

This worried Schmidt, for the price was low and he at once registered a vow to do something to ameliorate his condition. He lowered the awning and went into the store just as a "kid" who had been playing ball on the "lot" passed by and with a deft stroke of a knife cut two bunches of asparagus in two, and left a large gaping wound in the upholstery of a squash that chanced to be in the line of march on Schmidt's improvised window counter.

"Herman," said Schmidt, "git me once dem constitushn und laws fon dem Retail Grocer's Association. I like to read of dem fellers can come yoost on my block und yellor about dair shstuff."

Herman got the constitution and by-laws, and Schmidt sat down on a soap box to read them over. Officer Tooley dropped in at this moment to tell Schmidt that he had found his delivery horse with his foot over the halter at the side of the store and that he had promptly righted the animal. He also asked for some water to wash his hands with which necessitated adjournment to the rear of the store, where the bar is located.

"Say officer," said Schmidt as he rinsed the glasses out, "you know may be vot I likes to found out. I pin reading here in dis books yet I don't can read so fast English, does dey be a law vot makes hucksters vair on dere coat oder dere hat a badge or wie you call it?"

"Yes," said the officer, "there was a law of that kind went into effect on June 1 in this city. Every huckster must wear a badge on his hat band."

"Vell, vy den don't dem fellers poot em on?" asked Schmidt.

"Oh! dey are 'in de push,'" said the officer with a sarcastic smile.

"De poosh! Who's dot?"

"De push! why," said the officer, "that's the gang that runs the city up at the City Hall. You see, these fellows—these hucksters—they help elect those fellows up there, and then when they are pulled for selling things on the street without a badge they go up to the City Hall and Jim Brennan puts the mayor's rubber stamp signature on a piece of paper and then these fellows don't have to pay any fine. See!"

"So! oho!" said Schmidt, "now youst see," then as he smothered a sigh, he turned around and wiped some bran off the surface of a side of bacon. "Don't dat beat allus? Say, officer, look vonst here—Now I bin a pooty good merchant don't it? Yell, efery time vot my license ish oop, I got to go right away up by dot court house und pay." Schmidt kept time with every word spoken, by tapping on a case of canned goods with his index finger. "Den here coomes dese schnoosers mit a shkinny und bone horse mit a vaigon und dey bin not havin to pay dot poosher, or vot you call him. Now, Officer Tooley, so shure as I shtand here, it ish time ve raise oop in a mighty beeg way und protecting us. I bin already two weeks belonging to dot St. Louie Retailers Grocers' Associon, und I don't git no good fon it. Dese hawkeyes, vot you call 'em?" Hawkers! Well, dese hawkers dey coom on my block und holler away so I get no peesness, und dey bin in de poosh und don't pay. Now yoost look on dot feller, he don't got no piece brass on his hats. Vy you don't arrest him, Tooley? You bin on longer a friend von mine. I bet you I learn something or two. I go now und see of I doan can shtop his monkey-fooling, god-dory."

Schmidt's face grew red as a beat as he almost ran up stairs to get his coat. At the turn in the staircase he paused, and as he rolled down his sleeves he gave his clerk, Herman, instructions to "lock open the shtable so mine dog can shtay in der bar vile I bin gone."—W. E. Robertson in Interstate Grocer.

HINTS TO ADVERTISERS.

"Eye-catching" is the first thing. A good picture will usually do it. Everybody knows that, but doesn't seem to know what follows.

"White space" has come to be an expensive luxury. With the majority of advertisers paying for it, better let them pay for yours.

Put three inches of compact reading matter almost anywhere on the page of a country weekly, and it will be well framed for you by other people's white space.

A good head-line will sometimes prove an effective eye-catcher; but if it fails to catch the mind also it is useless. So is the best picture.

A poor picture is worse than useless. It drives people away. The better they can see it the worse they hate it.

What is a "good" picture or a "poor" one depends on the taste of the people you want to reach. If a monkey hanging by his tail and wringing a cat's head off induces a large number of people to buy your goods, that—for you—is a good picture.

If those people only laugh and say: "That is funny as blazes!"—then go and buy somewhere else—that picture is a poor one.

The same with a catchy head-line or anything else about an ad. which merely amuses people. The end of advertising is to sell goods. That is a better ad. that makes a few people buy than the one which only makes everybody laugh.

These humorous pictorial effects are supposed to serve their purpose by attracting attention, while the reading matter "does the rest." A man can draw a crowd by standing on his head, but how much reading matter would it then take to convince them that he was sane enough to trade with?

It is a handicap to have to use half your space persuading people that you are not such a clown as you appear.

A really good picture is pertinent to the subject of the advertisement, is an argument in itself, or an illustration of the argument that follows. Then, if funny, the humor all goes the right way—toward selling goods.

Anyway, the picture should be attractive, bright and airy; if it must be a pun—not too far fetched. Don't be as funny as you can.

Head-lines shouldn't be screech-lines. They are out of date, only used by the Rip Van Winkle advertisers. Readers are tired of the "Stop There!" "Say You!" sort of appeal. After ten years of being yelled at it grows monotonous.

To cut a wide swath with the least money, three inches of "pica" without a heading, followed up "everlastingly" in weekly papers, will usually show good results, when the thing to be sold will bear talking about.

But there must be a "head" in the office where the ads. are written. Don't write your own ads. if you can help it. But have them well written, even if you have to do it yourself.

Better hire a writer and tell him your ideas; if he agrees with you entirely discharge him. If not, argue the matter over, then give him his head, and the chances are he will do better for you than you could for yourself.

You are almost sure to be wrong on some important points; so is he. Between you you will come nearer to it.

Tell buyers the things they want to know about your goods and the things they ought to know, which they will find out after they buy.

Answer—in your advertising—the questions that would be asked if you were selling the goods over the counter.

Don't waste words explaining some technical matter of no practical account, but explain very carefully everything that is of consequence, no matter whether people know enough to ask about it or not.

Try to sell your best goods first. Talk more about the goods than the price. Most people will pay for what they want. Make them want it.

Have an advantage of some point over your competitors, and advertise that point. Don't claim what you haven't got.

Don't say yours is the cheapest when some one else undersells you. Don't say it is the best when a better is made. But advertise yours as the only one with a blue stripe, or the only one with sugar in it, or the only one with a brass handle.

Add some particular thing worth having to your goods, and let people know it.

Immense capital may be required to sell the best or the cheapest, but it only requires a little brains or gumption to sell something different from others, and a little better in some respect.

No matter how humble the business, it can be distinguished in some way, so that people will favor it. So small a matter as white wrapping-paper or a pink string will influence a majority. That is good advertising. —W. Dixey in Printers' Ink.

WHEN TO SELL WITHOUT A PROFIT.

We notice in one of our exchanges an interview with a large merchant in which he makes the assertion that it is the policy of his house never to sell anything, unless a profit is made upon it. This sounds very well, but we do not believe that it is possible for any house to conduct a business consisting of the sale of a great variety of articles, where any such course is possible. Such a method of doing business, of course is the ideal way, but like many another ideal, it can never be reduced to practice.

We believe it is the experience of all merchants, that there are times when it is best to sell goods for less than cost. One of the most difficult problems of the store-keeper is to prevent accumulation of old stock, and in cases where merchants have failed, and an inventory has been taken of the stock on hand, it is generally found that the stock is worth very much less than anticipated, simply on account of the old goods on hand, whose value has been reduced to a mere fraction of their cost. Now, would it not have been better for that merchant to have cleaned out his stock of goods by a reduction in price, even below cost, than to allow them to accumulate.

It is hardly necessary to give examples of when it is profitable to sell goods, without profit, or even at an absolute loss. Take the case of the merchant who purchased a large supply of 4th of July goods. Is it not better for him, when he finds he is liable to carry over some stock, to reduce prices to any point at which he can close out, than to carry the goods over for another year? By that time the stock may be practically worthless. In cases of changes of fashion in goods, it is much the wiser plan to sell at any reasonable figure, than to keep the goods on the shelves, where they will soon become worthless, and while carried in the assets as a thing of value, they really are worth nothing. Then there are goods in many lines carried in a general store which deteriorate when kept for any great length of time. If a dealer finds himself over-stocked in any such article, it is the best thing to reduce the price even below the cost, to close them out, for his first loss will be much less than if he keeps them in stock. It is hardly necessary to further enumerate instances where it is better to sell without profit, than to carry the stock.

But this method of reducing prices does not constitute "cutting" which is an entirely different matter, and no doubt is often confused with the plan of reducing prices. We do not consider it cutting prices to sell things at less than cost, when it is better to do so than to keep them in stock. It is possible for a dealer to do business without cutting, and this may be what the merchant had in mind to whom we referred in the beginning of this article. We are aware that cutting is practiced by some dealers with the idea that with the goods so sacrificed, other goods can be sold, which will yield the dealer an extra profit sufficient to cover the loss on the cut article. This may be true but consumers have become very sharp in this matter, and when they find there is a staple article being cut in price, they are apt to purchase that staple only, and get the balance of their goods from their regular dealer, so that the cutter makes nothing whatever.

We do not believe it a good thing to cut prices, but we think it is a wise method many times to sell goods without profit, or at an actual loss considering the purchase price.—Grocers' Bulletin.

Soap and water are cheap, but soil on goods is expensive.

THE EASY-GOING STORE.

Did you ever think of it—the easy-going store? Well it's a fact; there are easy-going stores, and they are in the majority, too, in every city, town and village in the Union.

The proprietor is always a good fellow, and his wife is just as nice as can be, and if he has children, why, of course, they take after their father and mother; so the whole combination is of the most desirable order.

He never puts on airs; he is purely and thoroughly American; his employes are his equals. For him to assume a manner of distance, reserve or dictatorship, even in his own store, would be, to his mind, an outrage against the native, inborn principle of American freedom and citizenship—equality and the rights of man. So he is always on good terms with all his help. So life goes along smoothly and pleasantly in the "easy-going store"—to the employes.

But the business is not increasing; in fact, sometimes you can catch a look in Mr. Easy's eye indicating that there is a sore spot somewhere; possibly in the money department, a leakage or a tying up, or, well—something that we can't just get at; but then, he is a fine fellow and we must not damage his business by incautiously saying to a friend, "Easy looks worried; do you think things are going against him?"

Such a suggestion, repeated from friend to friend, would soon be so changed that it would be a common rumor that poor Easy's finances were in a bad condition; then the best houses in trade would begin to draw in their lines of credit, and soon Easy would be in bankruptcy, or fighting out a long, hopeless, slow fight against misfortune; so we must be careful what we say.

Good nature is all right, but unlicensed good nature does not pay; it produces the "easy-going store." When you go into an easy-going store, really you are not expected to buy. The proprietor and his clerks would feel absolutely hurt if you insinuated that they were trying to force a sale upon you. No, they want you to feel at home in their store. Come in as often as you can and look round and price the goods. Some day you will see just what you want, and then they will be glad to sell, when you have found the article you want to buy. They are so used to people not buying that it is no surprise to them when you walk out, and they open the door and pleasantly say to you "Call again."

It is not at all uncommon in Mr. Easy's store for some of the men to go to his little office and refer some question to him that has been under discussion at the counter; anything from baseball to politics, or from religious to serious business matters, such as whether "antique" should be spelled with a "k" or not.

Mr. Easy often sits at the counter and indulges in pleasant, sociable chats with his young men, his idea being that they will thus see that he is a good fellow and, of course, do all they can for him in pushing business; and that if he enjoys the good will of his clerks, business will show better results.

Mrs. Smith comes in and Mr. Jones waits upon her with the utmost attention, patience and good will; talks church, Sunday school and the latest social gossip of the town, but fails to sell her anything. Mr. Easy does ask Mr. Jones what Mrs. Smith wanted—that would be questioning Mr. Jones' salesmanship; he goes into his little office and looks again at his "bills payable" and at his "bank account," and wonders what he must do to turn some of his stock into money, even only a little, and he sits and thinks.

Mrs. Easy and the children are passing, and they come in, and for an hour or so pleasant little Mrs. Easy makes a nice little visit among the young lady saleswomen; an air of brightness and cheerfulness is diffused over the whole place, and the happy (?) Mr. Easy goes home to dinner for about two hours or so; but that night, when figuring up his sales, he looks again at the "bills payable" and at the footing of his "bank account" and wishes he could find some way of reducing stock or selling out, so that he might try again in some other town better (?) adapted for business.

Poor Easy! With all his good nature, he is secretly carrying a burden of worrying distress, and the way is growing dark before him.

What do we find in Mr. Easy's store? Well, we find that his help are all good, nice, polite fellows; perfectly candid, well-bred and gentlemanly, plainly believing, as Mr. Easy does, that "window dressing," "department dressing" and ticket writing are all accomplishments requiring special natural gifts. So we find goods hung up on lines and against the wall and in the windows in a manner that is a cross between what would be expected from a washerwoman and a young lady with embryonic and chaotic ideas of home decoration. There is nothing in these displays attractive to us or anyone else.

While he is rubbing the wrinkles into his brow in his little office we find his men sitting idly round the store. The stock shown to Mrs. Smith is still lying about, just as Mr. Jones left it—mussed, tangled, and looking fearfully like a mess of stuff from a second-hand junk store. There is a tradition somewhere in the air that confusion indicates business, so confusion goes on, growing rapidly until no man knows the stock and no man feels responsible for it. Mr. Easy is the buyer and owner, so it is all right, and that is why we find in "the easy-going store" so much stock going to waste by bad management. The amount of stuff that is jammed up, spoiled and absolutely ruined in an "easy-going store" is appalling to anyone with the slightest idea of what proper handling of stock means.

No doubt Mrs. Smith came in to buy, and may have seen just what she wanted, but she wanted it nice and neat and fresh; possibly she wanted a new dress, and would not buy a thing that would need hours at home to fuss and bother over to make it look new.

An old saying has it that "The good-natured man is the beggar's brother." It is worth Mr. Easy's attention to think about: He need not be a fool, nor an ass, nor a hog; all he wants to do is to realize that he opens his store in the morning and keeps it open all day purely for business; that he hires his help purely for business, and that he must have attention to business in business hours.

Let him select his best man and spend an evening with him in his little office; show him the record of last year's sales for the month corresponding to the approaching month; impress upon him the absolute fact that that record must be beaten; show him that the store has degenerated until it has now become a cross between home life and an infant debating society or social club, and that a change must be made.

Then, let Mr. Easy take a vacation, not to New York for more goods, but to the towns similar to his own that have smart, clean, aggressive, progressive stores; let him study methods, their manners and their styles; it is the education that he requires.—Exchange.

QUEER ENTRIES

Many retail merchants have queer notions about keeping accounts. The entries on their books are intelligible to themselves, but no one else could understand them. The books of a bankrupt English retailer showed charges against patrons as follows: "Woman on the key, Jew woman, coal woman, old cold woman, fat coal woman, market woman, a man, old woman, little milk girl, candle man, stableman, coachman, big woman, lame woman, quiet woman, egg man, little black girl, Jew man, old Irish woman, Mrs. in a cart, woman in Corn street, a lad, man, in the country, long Sal, Mrs. Irish woman, Mrs. feather bonnet, blue bonnet, green, blue britches, green coat, big britches, the woman that was married, and the woman, that told me of the man."—Merchant Sentinel.

DRY GOODS.

Trade during the past week has been quiet in the houses, shipping being still the only work. Next week the house-trade will begin to pick-up, and the following week will be brisk.

Letter orders are coming in more freely and travellers, orders increasing in bulk now that the time is drawing near when the goods will be consumed. Travellers still reporting very bright prospects. Retailers are buying fairly heavily but not speculatively.

Last Friday Coate's 200 yards 6 cord dropped to $3.50 to meet the cut in the other cottons, which has been mentioned in previous issues. Chadwick's is down to $3.20 to meet a cut made by Clark's M. E. Q., Brook's, and Clark's anchor which is being sold by the Central Agency for $3.20. These cuts have unsettled the trade in spool cotton to such an extent that people will buy only from hand-to-mouth, and the market has no bottom. The trouble extends only to the Canadian market.

NOTES.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have just received eight ranges of flannelettes in stripes, checks, fancies, spots, etc., which are well worthy of special attention. A shipment is just to hand of men's rubber coats in Edinburgh manufactured goods, which are considered to be the best on the market. They are showing a well-assorted range of umbrellas for the fall trade. Light tweed dress goods are shown in great variety and the movement is quite brisk.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence have opened up heavy shipments of hosiery and underwear. Cashmere hose is being more generally sold than formerly especially in ladies' plain and children's ribbed. Black is the only color sold for fall and winter trade. A large quantity of cloakings are to hand. Beaver cloths are selling well in cheaper grades; chevots are selling well especially in diagonals; while fancy camel-hair cloths are a novelty, and astrachan curls in blacks, greys and browns are in good demand. Oak screen frames and oak easels are a new thing, and give promise of a strong demand.

Samson, Kennedy & Co. report a large sale of dress trimmings, running strong in astrachans, silk ruchings, braids and gimps. They are showing some very strong lines of Pearlletta buttons, which come in very pretty designs and are equal in effect to pearl buttons, while costing about one-half. They have in the printer's hands a very effective fall circular, which will be accompanied by a large sheet of fashion plates, showing the new styles of trimmings. A large shipment of ties has just been received and the contents of some forty cases will at once be distributed.

W. R. Brock & Co. are showing a line of all-wool Kongo, which is the latest novelty for ladies' and children's wrappers. It is shown exclusively in stripes, and is a German-made fabric. Wool popelines are selling well just now. A large variety of shades and patterns are shown. Blue beavers are moving very fast and promise to be strong in public favor for overcoatings. Blacks are selling for the finer trade. Their special import lines of tweeds and trouserings are moving quite freely and sale is up to expectations. Though these goods are fairly high in price but by no means dear, as the quality is very fine. They have two special lines in blankets, in which they have sold out all their first delivery. They have sold very freely a line of 26-inch grey flannel which is being turned over at job prices.

John Macdonald & Co. have two ranges of grey flannel, for which they are having a strong demand, as well as a run on the Campbellford. Their lines of tapestries and Brussels are selling strongly and the goods are turning out well. They are just receiving a large shipment of new jet trimmings for the autumn trade. They also show an extensive line of mantle ornaments, barrel buttons, large pearls, smoke and white, and black and colored dress cords. They have a larger range of silks than ever before, in millinery and staple silks. They show special makes at special prices in black gros grains, peau-de-soie, faille Francais, satin Luxor, satin Merveilleux, satin de chene, pongees, pongors, Bengalines, and brocaded silks. In colored silks they make a special run on pongors, pongees, Bengalines and faille Francais. Their lines of 15, 18, 22, and 24 inch silk plushes are very complete, with a range of twenty-five colors in each width, specially suitable for the millinery trade.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are showing a full range of flannels, with special devices in flannelettes. They have a special line of all wool grey flannel which they are selling at 17½c. Their range of light colored dress goods is quite complete, and moving freely. They are showing some special value in colored kid gloves with two push fasteners and spearpoint backs. These gloves are also shown in black and white goods in different qualities. Their stock of driving gloves is well assorted in imitation and real buck. These are desirable goods. Tweeds are being shipped very fast, and the value of goods turned over has been quite surprising, and the month's business in tweeds has been larger than usual. Brown beavers and meltons are selling well and promise to be in favorite shades with some classes of the trade. Freizes are selling well. These Irish goods are having a very strong demand in England, and will no doubt lead in overcoatings in this country. The Irish mills are full of orders at present. Light shades are the predominating features.

Hamilton merchants are complaining of the work of clever thieves who are robbing from the cases of goods consigned to the city from outside places.

The Nanaimo B. C. soap factory is now in operation.

The employes of D. S. Perrin, London, Ont., held their annual picnic at Port Stanley on Saturday of last week.

James Wallace, representing Taylor Scott & Co., has left on a trip to the Pacific coast. He will work the towns on the way out.

A thief entered the house of Geo. E. Bristol, ex-president of the Hamilton Board of Trade, and member of the firm Lucas, Park & Bristol, and carried off jewelry to the value of $175.

The A. C. Miller Company, of Picton, the other day shipped 10,000 baskets of raspberries to the canning factory at Sodus, New York, and a week earlier a shipment of 8,000 baskets was made.

The assets of the Farnham Beet Sugar factory, consisting of $8,700 in machinery and stock, and $1,294 in book debts, were sold at auction last week by Marcotte Bros. to Gault Bros. & Co., at 33½ cents on the dollar.

Victoria merchants are interested in the project of George Lycurgus, the Honolulu fruit merchant, who proposes to put on a line of British steamers between British Columbia the Sound and Honolulu in the fruit and passenger trade. Mr. Lycurgus is confident a good trade can be built up.

The horse attached to Fitzgerald & Scandrett's grocery wagon, London, ran away in the East End the other afternoon. It collided with another rig and then struck and demolished an iron lamp post. The horse was uninjured, but the wagon was considerably smashed.

Victoria merchants, or at least several of them, are endeavoring to have their revenge for Vancouver quarantining them, by refusing to purchase any goods from Vancouver merchants. The merchants here have determined to retaliate, and they will soon be brought to their senses.—Vancouver News-Advertiser.

H. Peterson, the well-known fruit exporter of Port Colborne, Ont., has issued his annual circular giving an estimate of the apple crop in Canada for 1892. He estimates that Ontario has 10 per cent. more than last year, but the apples are not of so good quality, many being spotted. In Nova Scotia, it is said, the crop will be 20 per cent. larger than in 1891. With the exception of the New England states, where the crop is large and of better quality than last year, the various states of the American Union show light crops, New York having but one-quarter to three-eighths of a crop, while Ohio, Michigan, Southern Illinois and Missouri will all have light crops.

B. M. Rudy, of the Vulcan Iron Works, San Francisco, has just completed a cold storage system at Cunningham's cannery on the Skeena River. When Mr. Rudy left the Skeena, 6,000 salmon had been frozen, and were being prepared for shipment. The fish, upon being taken, are put in a room where the temperature is 20 degrees below zero and left there 6 or 7 hours, when they are removed to another and a larger room, 30 degrees below freezing, where they are kept for a couple of weeks. Then they are placed in hermetically sealed cases and ready for shipment. It is claimed that they will keep for years. Other northern canneries are negotiating for similar systems.

This is what the London Advertiser says about the chief event of one day at the Western Fair, (Sep. 15 to 24): On Tuesday, however, there will be assembled perhaps the largest society gathering ever witnessed in Canada, when it is expected by the grand officers that from 5,000 to 10,000, or probably more, Patrons of industry, headed by their bands, carrying banners and bunting, will meet at the Market Square and march to the Fair grounds (where arrangement have been made for seating accommodations on the stands), there to be addressed by the grand officers and prominent officials of the order, and enjoy the full programme of special attractions. The object of this meeting is intended to be one grand rally, for the purpose of showing to the world that the Patrons of industry are neither dead or sleeping, as some suppose and venture to assert, but on the contrary are a live and great organization.

It is a well recognised fact that no business establishment is complete without some cash carrier system. Attention is called to the Whiting Cash and Parcel Carrier. It seems in it impossible for anything to get out of order, as there are no cords or springs. Merchants throughout the country, who give it a trial, may satisfy themselves of its merits, feeling satisfied that where once introduced it would never be parted with.

SARNIA, Ont., June 8, 1892.

H. E. WHITING, ESQ, London :

DEAR SIR,—I have been using your Cash Carriers for a long time, and must say they fill the bill in every particular, especially as to their keeping in order. It seems to me that they could hardly be improved on.

I remain, yours truly,

FIRE AT THE MORSE SOAP WORKS.

The Morse Soap Works, at Front and Beach streets, owned and operated by John Taylor & Co., were discovered by the watchman to be on fire at 11 o'clock on the night of the 11th inst., and for a time it seemed that the entire plant was doomed to destruction. As it is the loss will exceed $20,000. When the firemen arrived on the scene the new annex, in the rear of the main building, was a mass of flames, which caused such an intense heat that they could scarcely approach it. The flames originated, it is supposed, from spontaneous combustion in the oil room on the second floor; though how this could have occurred Maurice Taylor, who was early on the scene, was at a loss to understand. All the cotton rags used to strain the oil were kept in an iron-covered room, to which none but the foreman had access. The floors of the room were not saturated, as is usually the case where large quantities of oil are stored. The flames found their way to the upper floor, through a short wooden stairway, into the boiling room. In this room were large vats of soap in process of manufacture, and other stuffs of a highly inflammable nature; besides a quantity of valuable machinery, which it may take weeks to duplicate. Considering the combustible qualities of fats and oils, the firemen did excellent work. In less than an hour they succeeded in getting the blaze under control to such an extent as to permit of an inspection of the ruins. The floors were not burned thoroughly and all of the heavy machinery remained in position, but was irretrievably ruined. The annex was separated from the main building by double iron-sheeted doors at each floor, excluding the flames, but the entire establishment was flooded with water. In the front building was stored $60,000 worth of manufactured soaps, half of which was damaged to such an extent as to make it unmarketable. It will have to be boiled over and re-scented. The company were some weeks behind in their orders, and were considering the advisability of running night and day in order to catch up and accumulate some stock. The works were totally destroyed twice before—the first time in 1882, and the second time five years later; and the members of the firm were surprised that total destruction did not occur last night. The building and stock were both fully insured.

NOTES TAKEN ON THE ROAD.

J. F. French is successor to the firm of French & Gorman, Renfrew, Ont.

Miller & Co., Trenton, have their large canning plant at this point, and will be running full head in about a week. They have capacity for a very large pack, and prospects are good.

Walbridge & Clark are prominent grocery and liquor merchants of the city of Belleville. They have three large stores stocked with the choicest of everything in that line and do a very large trade.

Wamsley & Co., Belleville, are now wholly in the wholesale and jobbing trade in the grocery line, and report a healthy present and future outlook for the business for that city and surrounding country.

Conger Bros., Belleville, are now in the flood tide of their fruit trade. Bartlett pears, Crawford peaches, blue plums, etc., from California's choicest orchards, always find their way into their store in season.

H. M. Spafford, Trenton, has been in business twenty-five years, thirteen of which have been in the grocery line in Trenton. He had moved into a new location, but a short time before the late fire, which cleaned out his old business completely.

Campbell & Co., Renfrew, are among the successful merchants of that town, and with the exception of boats and shoes, confine themselves to the grocery trade. They are young, pushing men, and have made their mark in this place in the last five years.

J. F. Smith, Napanee, has watched the market closely on sugars for some time, and is convinced that his stock of two carloads is laid in at bottom prices, and he proposes to make some more on it, or he will have it to inventory for some time to come.

W. A. Carson, Picton, has sold out his grocery business in that town and is now one of the firm which constitutes the Belleville Canning Co., Belleville. Mr. Carson's experience in the grocery business will be valuable to him in the sales department of that concern.

Saylor & Weston, Trenton, have worked up a large produce trade. Last week they shipped over 3,000 dozen of eggs, to Montreal, at a handsome profit. They pay 8 to 9c. for strictly fresh stock. They are also heavy shippers of dried apples. Last year they sent a shipment to Germany.

The canning industry in the Bay of Quinte District is booming. A. C. Miller & Co. of Picton, are putting up a large plant at Brighton. The new Lakeport branch at Trenton is in full running order, and the Belleville Canning Co. have started under very favorable conditions for the season.

J. Young, Belleville, is well satisfied with his past year's business, and the last two years have been prosperous ones for him. He did not hesitate to say to me that when he moved into his present store it seemed like going into the last ditch, but it has proved to be the business move of his life.

D. Pitceathly, wholesale grocer, Belleville, has the oldest business in his line in the Bay of Quinte district. It dates from 1861, and has been prosperous from the start. His trade is in standard goods, and includes corn and oatmeal. Mr. Pitceathly is a genial off-hand business man who makes friends of all who deal with him.

R. Evlin has been in the grocery business in Belleville for 46 years. He has a good city trade and is located favorably for farmers' trade as well. His store has double frontage, one front being exclusively for flour, meals, feed and grain. There are so few grocerymen nowadays, though they may be abundantly able to relax a little from the arduous duties of the trade, yet are not willing to do so. It is refreshing to find in Mr. Evlin one who is satisfied to oversee the business and enjoy a little comfort as a purchased right of 46 years of toil in his store.

Editor—"How is it that in your report of the fire last night you used the expression, 'They socked it to the flames.'"

Reporter—It was because the fire department had only short hose to use.

"Man's religion," says Uncle Mose, "shouldn't be worn like a cloak—all on de outside. It dorter be mo' like a porous plaster. De world may not see it, but de man knows it's dar, an' his family knows it's dar an' a doin of him good."

Sea Captain—Yes, I want a boy, but I think you look like a runaway. Now ain't ye? Didn't you run away from home.

Boy—Ye-ye-y-e-s, but I couldn't help it. They was going to send me to a dentist to have six teeth filled.

"They was, was they? Well, I'd run off too. I don't believe in fillin' teeth."

"No sir; I don't either."

"Of course not. You come on board with me, and if anything's wrong with your teeth th' carpenter can take 'em out with a monkey wrench."

Boy went home.

Some years ago a duel, which was much talked about, took place between Mr. G—and Mr. S—. The former had only one eye, the latter was short-sighted, and, to make matters worse there was a dense fog at the time. The first ball killed a bird, and the second a rabbit. The witnesses put a stop to the proceedings declaring that honour was satisfied.

"How was that?" enquired A—.

"Faith, they began to be alarmed for their own safety."—Le Figaro.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, Aug. 19, 1892.
GROCERIES.

Trade is no worse. It might be safe to venture the statement that it is better. The turnover, judged by what each house has to say of its share, must have been fully equal to that of last week, notwithstanding that Monday was a holiday. Orders came in on that day the same as on any other, and Tuesday's mail supplied the power for a considerable stir in the shipping departments. Stocks in the country had got pretty well sapped and a favorable turn was sure to come, and probably we are feeling the first throbs of the autumn revival. The state of trade can hardly be gauged by its volume, for that is an unknown and merely conjectured quality, but the temper of the street is more sanguine and expressive of satisfaction. The sugar trade may be a shade less disheartening, as transactions at prices that would not go ten days ago have been brought to a close this week. This would naturally improve the feeling, if such a condition is general. As to payments, they are the subject of little comment, being of ordinary character.

COFFEE.

Firmness in the market for Rios is a decided condition. Local stocks are on the short side, but there is no strong run on them that is likely to bring about depletion before receipts come to hand that are now on the way. Prices are steady at from 17½c. up. Fine Rios are still scarce. Mocha coffees are quiet at 28 to 32c., Javas are firm at 30 to 35c., Padangs at 26 to 28c., Porto Ricos at 22 to 25c.

DRIED FRUITS.

Good off-stalk Valencia raisins are getting into small compass, are in request and are firm. The inside price for anything ranking above poor in quality is 5c., and there is more selling at 5¼c. than below it. The stock of old raisins is not yet exhausted. Boxes can still be had at 90c. to $1. Just now that class of fruit is neglected. The offerings of new crop Valencias for shipment from Denia this week have not called forth much purchasing power among jobbers. The price is expected to open at about 7c. to retailers. London layers are offered at $1.50 and black baskets at $2.50. The market for currants has undergone a very improving change. Half-barrels are nearly out of stock. All currants are scarce and jobbers on the street are calling upon one another for supplies. It is hard to buy any fruit now at so low a price as 5c., and 5¼c. is the price generally quoted. What adds to the strength of the market is an enactment that the Greek government has just brought into force for the good of the national industry of currant growing and the currant trade. It forbids any shipment being made before the 28th of this month. The currant trade was being injured by exporters who packed and sent forward stock in an immature condition. The same measure forbids the mixture of dust, sand, stalks, etc. with the fruit, and prescribes a penalty for the branding as Vostizza of fruit that is not shipped as Vostizza. All this tends not only to delay the receipt of new fruit, but to raise the quality, both effects being on the side of firmness in price. The coming prune crop promises to be a good yield in large sizes, but in small fruit it is likely to be of small volume. The quotation for prunes on spot is 5¼ to 6¼c.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.

Syrup shows no improvement locally. Recent purchases have recruited one or two stocks with a western supply. The Montreal refineries are still reported to have very little

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

There is less life in the market but no abatement of steadiness in quotations. Assortments of staples are unchanged at $1 to $1.05. The price is kept even by quotations on new pack goods. If these were lower than they are there would probably be a lower range of quotation for stock on the market, as there appears to be quite enough of it. Retailers show indifference to offers for new goods. Prices are not expected to be high, and expectations that they will settle down below what they are now held at are strongly entertained. The call for carloads of stock on spot has not played any part in this week's business, nor have any inquiries been reported. The lots that have gone out were of ordinary jobbing dimensions, and were but fairly numerous. In fruits the main change is the exhaustion of cherries. Pineapples quote 5c. higher, or $1.50. Salmon to arrive is offered at $1.45. Stocks on spot are run down and held at $1.50 upwards. A strong demand continues. Lobsters are firmly held at prices given in Prices Current.

The British Columbia Commercial Journal says: Fishing on the Skeena River has been good, and all reports agree that the canneries have all secured a three-quarter

To Canning Men.-OUR CYCLONE PULP MACHINE

For making tomato pulp and preparing pumpkin and squash for canning is very well known to all the canners in the United States, and a few of them are in use in Canada. The high tariff has prevented their being used extensively heretofore.

We are now manufacturing these machines at Oakville, Ont., to enable our Canadian friends to obtain them without paying a heavy duty; but we shall make only a few of them unless ordered. Those who contemplate purchasing, should send their orders promptly to insure the saving of duty, as late orders will have to be filled from stock in the United States which will be subject to a 30 per cent duty.

pack. The B. A. P. cannery finished on the 20th July and the North Pacific cannery on the 22nd. The Windsor, Balmoral, and Inverness canneries are reported as having a full pack of 11,250 cases each, and the latest advice gives the pack to date of the Skeena Packing Co. at 10,869 cases and the Standard Packing Co. at 10,800 cases. The Naas River canneries also report a good run and a full three-quarter pack is assured. McLellan's cannery has secured its full limit of 11,250 cases, and the Naas River Fishery Co. a full pack of 7,500 cases. The last report gives the pack of the Cascade cannery as 5,096 cases, but with another week of fishing they are expected to fill up to the limit. The Alert Bay cannery is reported to have closed down with a short pack, but definite word is not yet to hand. The Lowe Inlet Canning Co., Lowe Inlet, have so far put up 7,633 cases, but are expected to fill to the limit, as there is still another week of fishing. Reports from Rivers Inlet are unfavorable so far as received, but fishing will continue until the middle of this month. They have only a quarter pack to date. The clear water is against successful fishing, and the canneries do not expect to fill their tins. They will probably get a half pack all round. The Wannuck Packing Co. have advised a pack of 2,287 cases, but it is reported that they have about 4,400 cases up. From all accounts the pack on the Fraser River is going to be light. Fish so far have been very expensive, and fishing has been so bad that some of the canneries took off all their day boats, and only the contract fishermen were at work. Thursday night, 4th inst., showed some improvement, and Friday night it was maintained. Saturday night, it is reported that at the lower fishing stations the boats hauled in on an average about 200 fish to the boat with a slight decrease further up the stream. There are 23 canneries on the Fraser River, but only 15 are in operation this season, and it is said that their pack at the present time is somewhere between 25 and 30,000 cases. The total for the season is expected to be between 50,000 and 75,000 cases. Reports received give the following packs of canneries to date: Wellington Packing Co., 2,047 cs; Delta Canning Co., 1,801 cs; Laidlaw & Co., 1,191 cs; Harlock Packing Co., 2,085 cs; Beaver Cannery, 1,500 cs; Richmond Cannery, 1,500 cs; and it is believed by the best informed that the canneries will only be able to put up one half of what they prepared tins for, i. e. the amount mutually agreed upon—7,500 cases for each cannery. Such a shortage in the celebrated brands of Fraser River salmon is bound to have a strengthening effect on the market. The pack is mostly sold by canners who expect to have difficulty in filling orders already received.

MONTREAL.

The canned goods trade is still quiet and uninteresting with local prices unchanged. Some wholesale houses want salmon, and are anxiously waiting for the new pack. Other lines are quiet as the trade only buy as they require them.

stock on hand. Purchasers on retail account are few and far between, and tiny lots suffice. Prices are firm 2c. upward.

There is no news to indicate any change in the molasses market, which can be studied only at a distance by local merchants, as the trade here is of such small account that nobody takes a live interest in the market. Prices are reported firm at the Islands and in New Orleans, and are unchanged here.

RICE AND SPICES.

Rice is unchanged either in price or demand. A very fair call is kept up for small parcels. The probable stiffness of new Japan rice leads to somewhat freer buying of spot stock, which is firm at 5 to 5½c. Common is steady at 3½ to 4c.

Spices show no new tendency and are without special feature. The demand is limited.

SUGAR.

There have been some sales made this week in car lots at figures that could hardly have been obtained a fortnight ago, and enough business has been done on this improved basis, and it has been sufficiently distributed among the houses, to warrant the belief that a steadier feeling is now controlling the wholesale sugar trade. Profits are nothing to boast of yet, and it is far from probable that they figure at all in some transactions, but these latter are fewer than they were, and it looks as if they would soon be exceptional. No house is quoting below 4¾c. for granulated on spot, and the best possible price from refinery is 4¼c. for car lots. Yellows are a cent lower. A lull in the buying is now generally reported. There is nothing like a suspension of the demand, but it is not so active as it was. This itself is an improvement, and wholesalers profess to be rather pleased with it. At the prices giving a short time ago, the most lucky man was like the winner of a slow race, the less he sold the better his chances of not losing money. Money saved was money made, and people who sold no sugar saved money. The trade is just now in the period of transition between the early and late fruits. Peaches, plums, pears, apples, etc., will come in next, and until they are nearly ready the demand for sugar will be less active. This may give wholesalers a chance to recover completely from their demoralization. Sugar is firm intrinsically, and advanced ¼c. some days ago in New York.

Willett & Gray, New York, in their weekly sugar "Statistical" say: Total stock in all the principal countries, at the latest uneven dates, 1,018,788 tons, against 1,006,834 tons at the same uneven dates last year. Stock in Havana and Matanzas, by cable, 105,000 tons, against 110,000 tons last week.

Raws—The market is strong for Centrifugals at the advance of 1-16c. to 3-16c. for 96° test, with many holders asking a further advance. Muscovados have remained quiet and unchanged, at 2 11-16c. for 89° test. Cuban holders are very firm for balance of crop. European market is steady and firm, with an improvement of 3d for the week.

Refined has been in good demand, at unchanged quotations for hards and a slight reduction on a few grades of softs on round lots. At close the demand is on the increase, as anticipated would be the case after the first two weeks of August, and an advance in price is more than likely. A large consumption must result from the present extremely hot weather.

The following are McMeekin & Co's notes for July on Indian and Ceylon teas: Indian—The offerings were 32,000 packages, against 48,000 packages in the same month of 1891. In both years only a small proportion consisted of old season's parcels. The great bulk of the offerings had thin and undesirable liquors with little strength or quality, and, considering their poor character, they were well taken by the trade. The very few good teas with dark liquors and fine quality, or with exceptional appearance induced strong competition and some very high prices were recorded. The demand generally during the month was of the most meagre description, business being much interrupted everywhere by the general election. It is evident that the low prices have influenced producers in favor of finer plucking, as the quantity shipped from India up till date is rather behind that at same time last year. The quality is, on the whole, rather better, there being a fair quantity of very desirable teas now arriving or afloat; but latest telegrams from Calcutta report a general falling off in what is now being shipped. The average of public sale prices for the new season's teas sold during the month was 9½d. per pound, against 9¼d. per pound for the corresponding month last year. The imports were 4,743,852 lbs., and the deliveries 7,648,098 lbs., leaving in stock on 31st July 20,096,022 lbs.

Ceylon—The offerings were 74,000 packages, against 64,000 packages in the same month of 1891. Although individual marks here and there showed a decided improvement the general level of quality was unsatisfactory. However, quality considered, the teas sold readily and there was little variation in prices during the month, the lower quotations recorded being merely for inferior teas. The average of public sale prices for the month was slightly over 8d. per pound, against 9d. per pound for the corresponding month last year. The imports were 5,736,178 lbs. and the deliveries 6,166,080 lbs., leaving in stock on 31st July, 17,950,786 lbs.

The earliest of the new season's China teas arrived during the month, and, although the quality was fairly average, they attracted little attention, and prices mainly ruled very low. Even at the low costs they are said to be moving very slowly.

Some 5,000 packages Java teas sold during the month, for which there was good competition at steady prices.

TEAS.

Japan teas lose none of the strength which they started out with. Last week's prices were more favorable to buyers than this week's prices are. Within three weeks prices of consigned teas have moved up 2c., and this fairly reflects the general condition of the market. What tends to stimulate the interest of buyers is the shortage up to date of shipments to Canada, 4,253,111 lbs. less tea having been shipped direct from Japan ports to Canada this year than were shipped in the corresponding part of last year. The report that 7000 packages were damaged upon the Empress of Japan is taken generally with a grain of salt, as jobbers believe that selling capital is being made of an accident that is not known yet to have destroyed more than some cotton that formed part of the cargo. They remember the reported loss of the Hecla a year ago. Private advices from Shanghai report the arrival there of new Moyune and Timkais, which are described as of indifferent quality, and of generally inferior make. The opening tael prices are 5 per cent. above those of a year ago. Ping Suey's are said by the same correspondent to be very active and firm. Common China teas are now being shipped, though reluctantly, as prices are from 1 to 1½c. higher than when the settlements were made.

Mail advices from London, dated 6th Aug. say the principal feature of the week has been the arrival of first shipment [new season] Kaisows. As a whole the quality of the crop is perhaps not quite so good as last year, but some of the teas have more strength and body, particularly in "Saryunes" and "Padraes." Prices paid for the new crop Kaisows are very good, and better than last years. Demand for Indian teas has been fairly strong, and prices are fully maintained. Ceylons are slightly firmer. Green teas are scarce and dear.

MARKET NOTES.

[Importers, wholesale merchants and manufacturers should send any items intended for this department so that they may reach the head office not later than Wednesday morning. The editor will always welcome such information.]

Homeopathic Cocoa is quoted 2c. higher in this week's Prices Current.

Smith & Keighley are offering a choice line of Sphinx prunes at 6 to 6½c.

Davidson & Hay have a lot of cheap syrups arriving. The season for these is now at hand.

W. T. Harris, Chatham, N. B., dealer in general merchandise, offers 200 cases canned lobsters, also dried cod of finest quality.

Macurquardt's Worcestershire Sauce, for which H. P. Eckardt & Co. are the agents here, is giving satisfaction to consumers, as the demand has been so active that supplies have run short.

Sloan & Crowther the other day made one of the largest purchases of canned pumpkins ever made on this market. It comprised 400 cases. The goods were put up by the Aylmer Canning Co.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. have been appointed selling agents here for the Commercial Milling Co's. (Detroit) granulated cornmeal. Though not heretofore sold on this market, this meal ranks in quality second to none.

The advertisement of the St. Lawrence Starch Company in its wonted place on the first page of THE GROCER'S cover calls attention to Ivory Starch. This starch is becoming more firmly entrenched in trade favor every day and makes headway solely by the force of its own merit.

Eby, Blain & Co. report arrival of second consignment of Morton's kippered herrings in flat oval tins.—The superiority of these goods is such that their first order was exhausted quicker than anticipated, necessitating cabling for a larger order, now just in.

The Seely Manufacturing Co., Detroit and Windsor, draw the attention of the trade to their celebrated flavoring extracts on page 25 of this issue. The merit of these goods needs no higher testimonial than the increased demand that they are continuing to receive.

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

Sellers' ideas are beginning to conform to those of buyers, and the prices asked for shipments of flour are from 5 to 10c. lower than those acceptable to holders last week. This spirit of concession has not been productive of any improvement in business, the disposition to buy contracting as symptoms of weakness develop among sellers. Feed is quiet and subject to fitful changes.

FLOUR.—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.95 to $5; strong bakers', $4.50; white wheat patents, $4.80; straight roller, $4.40; low grades, per bag, $1.25 to $1.50.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.80 to $4.90; Manitoba strong bakers' $4.25 to $4.40; Ontario patents, $3.90 to $4.20; straight roller, $3.65 to $3.75; extra, $3.20 to $3.25; low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.50.

MEAL—Oatmeal is $3.80. Cornmeal is $3.50.

FEED—Bran is $11.50 to $12, shorts $13 $14, mixed feed $22, feeding corn 50 to 52, oats 33c.

HAY—Is fairly active at $10.50 to $11 for old baled timothy, and $9 to $9.50 for new.

STRAW—Is steady at $6.50 to $7.

MONTREAL.

The flour market continues quiet, there is little doing in grades other than strong bakers, and straight rollers, for which a moderate local demand is reported. We quote: Patent spring, $4.70 to $4.85; patent winter, $4.25 to $4.65; straight roller, $4.00 to $4.15; extra, $3.40 to $3.60; superfine, $3.10 to $3.25; fine, $2.70 to $2.90; strong bakers, $4.25 to $4.40.

Oatmeal is quiet, with only a small demand for home wants. Values are unchanged. Granulated, bbls $3.90 to $4; rolled bbls., $3.90 to $4.00; Standard, bbls., $3.85 to $3.95; granulated in bags, $1.90 to $2.00; rolled in bags, $1.90 to $2.00; standard in bags, $1.80 to $1.90.

Feed is in fairly active demand for local wants at steady prices as follows:—Bran per ton, $12.50 to $13.50; shorts per ton, $14.00 to $14.50; mouille per ton, $19.00 to $22.00.

We are now booking orders for fall delivery for the following goods: John Gray & Co., Glasgow—Lemon, Citron, and Orange peels, Marmalade in Glass, Stoneware, and in Tins. All kinds of Jams in Glass, Stoneware and Tins. Peterson's Essence of Coffee in Bottles, Sauces, Vinegars, Fruit, Wines, etc., etc. John Jamieson & Sons, Glasgow. Lochfyne Herrings in ½ Kegs, Kegs and Barrels, and Ling Fish.

MARKETS—Continued.

PETROLEUM

Refined oil is having rather a better time of it, a somewhat smarter demand ruling since daylight began to wane perceptibly. Prices are unchanged. Canadian refined is steady at 14 to 14½c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The supply rallies in cool moments but can never get even with the demand, which rapidly absorbs every package that finds its way into the hands of dealers. Choice dairies are worth 15 to 16c., and a very fine article will bring an exceptional 17c. The best grades below those entitled to these prices are taken at 14 to 15c. Good store-packed is 13 to 15c., but the offerings of it are not so free comparatively with dairy butter as they usually are in hot weather. Storekeepers understand that butter is stiff in hot weather, and try to get forward their stock if possible in that season to catch the market, while good dairy makers place more store on the selling merits of appearance than on opportunity and hold back during the heated spell. This year the merchants are apparently acting on the same policy, or they are getting less butter than usual in crocks and baskets to make up tubs from.

Cheese is very firm at 10c. The English market retains its strength.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Small lots are all that are handled. They go at $1.20 to 1.30.

DRIED AND EVAPORATED APPLES—Sun dried are steady at 4½ to 4¾c. for ordinary quantities, with 4c. now the inside price for round lots.

EGGS—The supply is not over-abundant, but the demand is rather moderate. Prices are 11 to 11½c.

HONEY—New extracted in small lots goes at 8 to 10c. For old the price is 5 to 7c. Sections are scarce at 12 to 14c.

HOPS—The stock is shrinking into small compass. Prices are steady at 19 to 23c.

PROVISIONS.

The provision trade is not at all exciting just now. Buying considerably in advance of needs effected a great deal of distribution before the season for consumption came in, and reduced stocks in packers' hands to limited proportions. Hence they are satisfied with a tranquil trade now. Prices are firm and advanced.

BACON—Long clear is 8c., smoked backs are 11¼ to 12c., bellies 11c., rolls 9 to 9½c.

HAMS—Are steady at 11½c.

LARD—Pure is unchanged at 9½ to 9¾c. for tubs and pails. Compound is steady at 7 to 9c.

BARREL PORK—U. S. heavy mess is $15 to $16, Canadian $16, short cut $16.50 to $17.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef is 3½ to 4½c. in fore and 8 to 9c. in hindquarters, mutton is 7 to 7½c. Lamb 9½ to 10½c., mutton 6 to 7½c., veal 7 to 8c.

VEGETABLES.

Potatoes are unchanged at $1 to $1.25 per barrel, and are selling in bags at 60 to 75c. Cucumbers are easy at 15c. a basket. New cabbages are $1 per barrel. Watermelons are 25 to 30c. Muskmelons are $2 to $2.50 per crate. Celery is 75c. a crate. Egyptian onions are unchanged at $2.50 a sack.

GREEN FRUIT.

Oranges are nearly out of stock on spot, and are held at prices that are expected to be soon covered up by a heavy advance. Rodis are now $6 to $6.25 for 120's and $3.75 to $4 for 100's. The former would now cost $7 laid down here from New York. Lemons partake in the improvement. They are stiff at $7 to $8 and are scarce. Bananas are plentiful at $1.25 to $2. Apples are $2 to $3 per barrel, peaches $1.25 to $1.50 per basket, pears 50 to 60c. for common, and $1 to $1.25 for Canadian Bartlett's. Plums are $1 to $1.25.

FISH.

The scarcity of stock still holds trade back. With returning holidayers the demand is growing fast, and supplies of fish to jobbers are readily taken up. Prices are firm at 7c. per lb. for white fish and salmon trout, $2 to $2.50 per hundred for lake herring, and 17c. per lb. for B. C. salmon.

SALT.

The salt trade is active. Prices are not affected, but are re-quotable at figures in Prices Current.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, Aug. 18, 1892.
GROCERIES.

The tone of the grocery market is pretty much the same as it was last week with no new interesting feature to note. Sugar is selling fairly and in fair quantities. It is reported that the wholesale trade will have a meeting in the near future to definitely settle the price of heavies. Green fruit has been moved in good round lots during the week, this is owing to the California fruit sales which two of our leading fruit houses are having every week. Dealers in dried fruit are waiting patiently for the new pack, and when it comes business will no doubt be brisk. All other lines are in fair demand.

SUGARS.

The local sugar market is fairly active and the firm tendency is still maintained. The refiners are selling at 4¼c. for granulated and yellows at 3¼ to 4¼c. according to quality. They report business good, and with firm prices it no doubt will improve. The wholesale trade are doing a fair trade in both kinds, and if the combine is arrived the trade here will one and all benefit by it. The green fruit for preserving has had a good effect on our local trade, and the retail trade are doing a good trade. The wholesale men also benefit by this, and during the local business has been large. We quote granulated 4½ to 4 9/16c.; yellows, low grade 3½ to 3¾c., and yellows bright 3¾ to 4¼c.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups both Canadian and American are dull and the only business doing is a small one for requirements. Molasses are still selling at 30½ to 31c. for single puncheons. Stocks here are very light and the boat that was to arrive early this week has not showed up yet. This is owing to the rough weather in the Gulf. Stocks in store in Quebec are heavy and the big dealers there are in the cut. We quote Barbadoes 30½ to 31c.; American 28c.; syrups are quoted at 25 to 28c. for medium bright, 30 to 45c. for choice; amber 40 to 45c.

TEAS.

The Japan tea market is quiet but firm. Stocks here are still light and likely to be for some time to come. A telegram received by a local paper says that a large lot of Japans consigned to this market were damaged on the steamship Empress of India. To sum up the market here it may be placed as quiet and very firm. In Blacks the new samples are meeting with good success as the samples shown are so fine in quality. Quite a few have been sold.

COFFEES.

A good steady movement is reported in coffee at firm figures. Quite a few lots have been moved during the week. Advices from New York report the market there as strong, and advices from primary points are generally stiff:—We quote as follows:—Rios 18 to 20c.; Java, 23 to 25c.; Mocha, 24 to 25c.; Jamaica, 19 to 21c.; and Maracaibo, 22½ to 23c.; Santos, 17½ to 19c.

RICE.

The same steady trade is being done in rice, and although the lots moved are not large the demand is steady. The wholesale trade as well as the mills are doing a nice trade all round. We quote as follows:—Standard $4 to $4.10, Japan $4.50 to $5, Patnas $4.50 to $5, and Carolinas $7 to $8 per hundred pounds.

SPICES.

Spices are still in fair demand and the manufacturers here report a fair business doing. The lots sold are small but orders are received often so that makes up for the small orders.

NUTS.

A steady trade is being done in all kinds of nuts. The business doing is purely local. Grenobles are very scarce in this market and very much sought after. Prices are unchanged. The following are the quotations:—Almonds Tarragona 14 to 15c.; almonds, Ivica, 14 to 15c.; almonds, common, 10 to 11c.; almonds, hard-shell, 7 to 8c.; walnuts, Grenoble, new 12 to 14c.; walnuts, French 10 to 10½c.; cocoanuts per 100 $3.75 to $4.00; filberts 9 to 10c. pecans 16 to 17c.; peanuts 7 to 10c.

DRIED FRUIT.

Our local market is practically bare of fruit. Valencias are in good demand but hard to get as stocks here are so light and in the hands of one dealer. The shortness of stock in this market ought to make the market lively when the new stock arrives. Prices here

GREEN FRUIT.

The green fruit market has been very active during the week there having been or will be three auction sales of California fruit during the week. Oranges are very scarce and what stock there is brings good prices. Lemons have been very active during the week and the market is now almost bare of good fruit and before the week is out they will be selling for $7.50 per box. The market is crowded with Southern fruit which comes via Boston but under fair demand. The prices of over ripe fruit is from 35 to 75 per bunch. The banana boat that was to arrive here this week had to put back and is now laying in the dry dock. Peas are steady and firm prices are being asked. The Southern peas are now in and selling well. The demand for peaches has only been fair people no doubt are willing to wait till our own peaches come in when the prices will be right. Prices in both California and Southern stock is purely nominal. Raspberries are pretty well cleaned out and prices have advanced, blackberries and gooseberries are selling well. We quote as follows:—Oranges $5.50 to $6, lemons $5 to $6.00 California peaches $2 to $2.50 per basket, plums $3.50 per crate, pears $3.50 to $4, bananas $1 to $1.50 per bunch, raspberries 75c. per pail, watermelons 20 to 35c., Southern peaches $3.50 to $4, Western paches 75c. to $1. Southern Bartlett's pears $5 to $5.50 per keg, blackberries 13 to 14c., gooseberries 80c. to $1 per basket.

APPLES.

New apples are in good call and prices have eased off during the week. Upper Canadian apples sold in the early part of the week as high as \$4.50 to \$5 per barrel, but since the receipts have been large, especially in native stock the prices are now as follows: Regular \$3.00 to \$3.50 per barrel, and in baskets 65 to 75c., evaporated 6 to $6\frac{1}{2}$ c., dried 4 to $4\frac{1}{2}$ c. per lb., and evaporated peaches 12 to 13c. per tin.

HONEY.

Honey is quiet with only a small local trade doing. Holders would no doubt make concessions to move the bulk of dark-colored stock. No sales worthy of note have transpired during the week. We quote strained bright 7 to $8\frac{1}{2}$ c., dark 6 to 7c., comb bright $8\frac{1}{2}$ to 10c., dark 7 to 9c.

HOPS.

Hops locally are quiet, as the brewers will not pay the prices asked. One of our papers has been quoting hops at $26\frac{1}{2}$ to 30c. under good business. This report makes growers think the market here is lively, and they are asking more than jobbers can get from the brewers; 25c. is the outside price for choice stock. Pressed are selling in small lots at 18 to 19c.

FISH.

Fresh British Columbian salmon is selling at 14 to 15c. Haddock is now getting scarce and 4c. is what it sold for in wholesale lots during the week. Whitefish and trout are still selling at 6 to 7c per pound. We quote as follows:—Smoked Yarmouth bloaters, per 60 box, $1.00 to $1.10; St. John's bloaters, per 100 box, 80c. to $1.00; boneless cod, large boxes, 6 to 7c.; do. small boxes 7 to 8c.; finnan haddies 7 to 8c.

We quote No. 1 herring, per brl., $4.50 to $4.60; lake trout, per half brl., $4.00 to $4.25; sea trout, per bbl., $8.25 to $8.75; codfish, green, No. 1, per bbl. $4.75 to $5.00; do. No. 2, per bbl., $4.25 to $4.50; codfish, dried, per bbl., $4.25 to $4.50; salmon, B.C., per bbl., $13 to $13.50; do. Nfld., No. 1, per tee, $22.50 to $23; do. do., No. 2, per tee, $21 to $21.50; do. do., No. 3, per tee, $20 to $20.50.

EGGS.

Eggs are unchanged and the local market holds steady at 11 to 12c. both for local requirement and export.

PROVISIONS.

The local provision market is about the same as noted last week. Short cut is selling well at steady prices. There is a fair seasonable trade for lard and smoked meats. We quote Canadian short cut, per brl. \$16.75 to \$17.50; mess pork, western, per brl. \$16.00 to \$16.50; short cut, western, per brl. \$00.00 to \$00.00; hams, city cured, per lb. 11c. to $11\frac{1}{4}$ c; lard, Canadian, in pails $8\frac{1}{4}$ to $8\frac{1}{2}$ c; bacon, per lb. $9\frac{1}{2}$ to $10\frac{1}{4}$ c; lard, com refined, per lb. 7 to $7\frac{1}{4}$ c.

CHEESE AND BUTTER.

Nominally $9\frac{3}{4}$ to 10c. is the way to put it, and we heard of a lot of Brockville white changing hands at $9\frac{3}{4}$ c., but if a buyer went out into the market to fill an order for finest Western it is doubtful if he could do so at such a figure. The offerings at the wharf from the French country do not make matters much plainer. They aggregated 2,800 and sold around $9\frac{1}{2}$., a fraction more being made in some cases.

GRAIN.

The local grain market was dull and neglected.

FLOOD TIDE.

The world is awaking from a sleep of ages. The oppressed of all lands are bursting the chains that have bound them in error and darkness. Thrones totter, kings tremble, and fossilized institutions that have stood for centuries are crumbling at their foundations. Political, moral and commercial powers are developed on a scale of magnitude unsurpassed by any period of the world's existence. New discoveries crowd in upon us so remarkably that we have almost ceased to admire what would have filled with amazement the ripest minds of the last century. This is a rapid age, the age of progress; the electrical age; it is the age of acquisition as well as of activity. He who falters or pauses to look back is left behind.

Shakespeare says:

"There is a tide in the affairs of men which taken at the flood leads on to fortune."

Now is the flood tide of opportunity in every line of advancement. He who neglects to stem the tide, to "get in the swim," as the popular saying goes, may find all his after life engulfed in misery. Are you a merchant wading in deep waters, beware of breakers ahead! Keep afloat; keep your head out of water, the dark water of debt; watch for the tide, and go with the tide or you will be dashed back on the shoals of failure, and your business will be wrecked.

Don't load your craft with more than can carry, and watching the fair trade winds, unload at the best ports, and renew your cargo where you can again catch the tide. If a beginner, learn to "paddle your own canoe." Don't spread more canvas than you can carry with safety when you would sail. Keep your vessel trim, and beware of "piratical cutters." Keep a good lookout aloft; have your figure-head and headlight in sight, watch well the scuttle for leakage. Be on deck. Look well to your helm, and you will steer clear of adversity. There was never a time when merchandise of all kinds was more perfect and cheap, when facilities for commerce were better, or when demand for goods was greater than now. There never was a time when the banks showed a better rating, nor when crops were more promising. There never was a time when facilities for education and morality, or social progress, was better. Surely the world, taken all in all, is at its flood tide. Whatever may be your calling in life, reader, now is your golden opportunity. Now the flood tide. If the Rip Van Winkles of past ages could awaken to the glorious present, they would be overwhelmed with the grandeur of the world! Blessed indeed is he whose eyes behold the sight; doubly blessed he who is adequate to the occasion, and thrice blessed are the children of men born to the wondrous opportunities of this age!

Those whose fortune it may be to visit the Columbian Exposition will behold more remarkable discoveries than those which greeted the eyes of him whose memory is honored by naming the great world's fair after him, wonderful as were those primitive scenes to him and his little band of explorers. The progress shown will but testify to the multitude of untold marvels still to be revealed to a marvelous world yet in the dawning of its day.—Detroit Herald of Commerce.

From Hardware, New York city, June 25, 1892:—"If D. T. Mallett, hardware man and man of letters, needed an introduction to the readers of Hardware—which he surely does not—we know of no more pleasant way of making his acquaintance than by the perusal of this very able and really valuable book which has come out of his experiences, his studies of men and business, and what he has learned by the continuous and philosophic use of an enquiring mind. Mr. Mallett is not only able to see things and to learn things, but also has an unusually fine gift of telling about them to others. In this book of some 175 pages which has long been promised and is now on hand, Mr. Mallett has produced a volume of 'Ideas for Hardware Merchants' which should be in the hands of every retail or wholesale hardware dealer in the land. Mr. Mallett seems to have struck the happy medium—he 'tickles' and he 'teaches' turn by turn. A glance at the table of contents will give some outline of the variety of good 'Ideas' that the small sum of one dollar will purchase. The unique and tasty cover shows that the author not only fills his books with Hardwares, but also covers the outside with representations of the trade. The book is one that is sure to sell; and the merchant, the retailer especially, who does not send to the J. B. McLean Co., Toronto, Canada, for it will miss one of the best compendiums of advice ever offered to any line of trade."

OUR CHEESE AT THE COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION.

Mr. J. W. Robertson, dairy commissioner, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, has decided to ask the cheesemakers of Eastern Ontario and the eastern provinces to ship to him two cheeses of four different lots, these shipments to be sent to Montreal. The dairymen of Western Ontario will be requested to forward like shipments to London. When the shipments arrive at the cities named they will be inspected and examined by Mr. Robertson and dairy experts, selected from the Dairymen's Association of Eastern and Western Ontario. The cheese selected by those experts will be kept for the Chicago Exhibition, and the remainder will be sent to England for exhibition there. Every care will be taken to see that the cheese is kept in good condition, among the other precautions to be used being cold storage. It is anticipated that a collection of from 200 to 300 cheeses will be sent from each province to Chicago. In asking the cheesemakers to supply two cheeses of each lot, Mr. Robertson displays considerable foresight, as it is his intention to replace one cheese by another of the same make when the exhibition is about half over. The Dominion Government will bear all freight charges from the railway station nearest the point where the cheese is made to either London or Montreal, and will pay in advance to the maker the market price of the cheese. The only responsibility resting on the makers is the production of an article that will command the first price. Each cheese will be labelled with the name of the maker, and all prizes or honors awarded any exhibit will become the property of the maker, and not of the Government, who assumes all responsibility, and is really the exhibitor. After the Chicago Exhibition is closed it is the intention of Mr. Robertson to make a large display of all prize winners, the cheese to be arranged according to provinces, and built in pyramid form. It is probable that a feature in this display will be the largest cheese ever made, as well as several others of mammoth proportions. The Chicago Fair will offer to Canadian cheesemakers an opportunity to secure a reputation that may not occur again for years, and it is to be hoped that they will spare no effort to produce an article in every way worthy of Canada.

THE WINNIFRED SEIZURE.

Few of the particulars of the seizure of Mr. A. E. Wadham's steamer Winnifred have been learned at Ladner's Landing, nor will be for a day or two. A representative of the News-Advertiser went to Ladner's yesterday, and found that since the first intimation was received by messenger on Friday night, no further word had arrived. The facts of the case seem to put the matter almost exactly on a par with the seizure of the Coquitlam off the coast of Alaska. The cause of the seizure is attributed to the animosity of a rival canner, who was bidding for the salmon the American fishermen seemed more ready to sell to the British Columbia cannery. Owing to the small run of fish in the Fraser this year the cannery have had to put forth greater efforts than any previous season to get the supply required for the limited pack it was intended to put up. At the beginning of the run the steamer Winnifred ran down to Point Roberts to purchase salmon from American fishermen working off that cape. The international boundary line crosses Mud Bay, cutting off a small portion of Point Roberts, and including it within American territory. It was the custom of the Winnifred to wait in British waters, and the American fishermen brought their catches to her there. For the past few days, for convenience, she has been going around the Point, and anchored six miles off the coast.

In previous years Mr. D. Drysdale's cannery, near Blaine, furnished the only market these fishermen had for their catches, and the competition occasioned by the calls of the Winnifred to the scene of operations sent up the price of salmon on the American canner. United States Customs Inspector McLennan had his attention called to the matter, and on Friday night he went out aboard a steamer belonging to the Drysdale cannery and made the seizure, taking his prize to Blaine. Two American sloops were also seized at the same time as accessories. At the time the Winnifred had about 1,500 fish on board a scow, which were valued at $500, and the steamer cost $6,000 new a few years ago.

The first intimation in Ladner's of the seizure was received by messenger on horseback from Mud Bay, stating that an American steamer was seen going out towards the Winnifred, and it was supposed the object was to take her in charge. The catch of Friday was rather better than usual, and the steamer Blonde, of New Westminster, had been sent down to bring in more fish. A messenger was then despatched on horseback to Mud Bay to warn her to keep away from the American side. He arrived in time, and the orders were sent aboard in a small boat. The messenger, Mr. McKae, reported the Winnifred lying at Blaine. Mr. Wadhams came to Vancouver yesterday morning and returned to Ladner's in the evening by way of New Westminster. He feels assured that his vessel violated none of the customs regulations, and expects her release in a few days.—Vancouver News-Advertiser.

MONTREAL TRADE CHAT.

It is reported that the pea crop in the Huntingdon district is a total failure.

M. P. Laverty says that since coming up to Sherbrooke street his business has nearly doubled.

The Montreal retail grocers held a meeting last week, but nothing of importance was done.

J. R. Manning, the St. Antoine street grocer, has just returned from a two to two weeks' sojourn at the seaside.

Edward Elliott has been doing a nice trade in imported fruit. He is one of the regular attendants of the fruit sales

J. R. Grant, formerly of J. R. Grant & Co., who failed some time ago, has been appointed manager for Walter Paul's branch store in Cole street, Antoine.

Malcolm Thomson, secretary of the Edinburgh Starch Company, left the other evening to visit his family at Notre Dame du Portage, where he will remain for a few days.

Fred. Claxton, late of Montreal, has started a canning company on the Skena River, B.C. The new company is called the Royal Canadian Canning Co., and intends to cater for Canadian trade only.

On Monday a car load of 600 boxes of California fruit, direct from Sacramento, was sold by auction at the offices of J. R. Clogg & Co., in this city. The attendance was large and the bidding spirited. Pears brought $3.75 to $4 per box, and peaches $1.45 to $2.15. On Tuesday another lot of 900 packages of pears, peaches and plums was sold at the warehouse of the firm at 2 o'clock. Mr. T. J. Potter was the auctioneer. The pears went at $4 to $4.15; plums, $1.75 to $2.10; peaches, $1.85 to $2.15. Attendance large, bidding brisk, and result very satisfactory to shippers, as also to buyers, as the stock was very good and there will be no waste. As long as such fruit is sent here to be sold as honestly and in such a straightforward way as yesterday, the consigners may be sure to have a genuine liberal buying audience. Mr. T. J. Potter conducted the sale in his usual prompt, energetic manner, Mr. Brown, of Los Angeles, representing the big shipping firm known all over America.

The annual outing of the employees of the Toronto Biscuit and Confectionery Co. takes place on Saturday. They go to Wilson, N.Y., by steamer Eurydice.

The semi-annual dinner of heads of departments and salesmen of the Thurber-Wyland Company was held on Thursday evening. At the gathering President T. B. Thurber announced that profits for the six months ending July 31st were $78,745.02, a statement that accompanied the remittance for semi-annual dividend on the preferred stock. The profits during the corresponding period last year were $101,000. This falling off was attributed in a good measure to unfavorable conditions that have existed in the Southern States, in which section the grocery, as well as other trades, have suffered from poor markets for leading products of that quarter. The project of a sort of co-operative, or profit sharing scheme, with a view to keeping expenses in certain ratio to earnings, was broached and generally favorably considered by those directly interested. It was pointed out that prospects are encouraging for better results during the next six months, particularly in Southern territory. In connection with the above it may be proper to note that private sales of common stock have been made latterly at 60c. against auction sales at 50c. last week.—N. Y. Commercial Bulletin.

TRADE DEMORALIZERS.

The department store and the cutting grocer still continue to receive the attention of associations and the trade journals in various lines, and we think that much of the blame so lavishly bestowed upon them is richly deserved. It is difficult to decide sometimes where to place the line beyond which it is wrong for a dealer to extend the number of lines covered by his business, and as the general store often keeps almost every thing used or required in the family, one can hardly deny to a large retail dealer, the right to have as many departments as he chooses to maintain. There is however a great difference between doing a legitimate business in many lines of supply and deliberately establishing competition in minor lines to attract trade, and sacrificing profits, and even selling at a loss to the damage of those who follow a legitimate business in the goods sacrificed. We have in mind such a dealer, who, knowing that a druggist had a popular preparation, in which he had a good trade, approached him with an offer to purchase a quantity at wholesale rates. Supposing that a reasonable profit would be charged, the druggist sold the goods at a fair wholesale price only to see them advertised as a leader under cost. Of course it injured the druggist, without any adequate benefit to the department store except that it "drew trade" in goods which were sold at a smart profit. It is this, and such "tricks" as this, which excite the ire and disgust of the "regulars" when they contemplate this class of traders.

Another abuse is the falsity of claims often made in advertisements, that certain very low-priced goods are "equal to" or just "as good as" like commodities generally sold at much higher prices. These claims are sometimes true, but represent heavy losses by fire, bankruptcy, or the closing out of a large business under circumstances which warrant a sacrifice of odds of large stocks. Generally, however, the statement is a lie, and the goods are very inferior in some particulars, although the consumer can seldom detect the difference until it is too late.

Other firms have deliberately sacrificed certain lines to ruin a young and weaker competitor, and bought his stock to sell at prices which realized a net profit on the double transaction. This is of course far safer than highway robbery, but it is difficult for the finite mind to see where it excels it in a moral point of view.

It is reasonably certain, however, that great danger threatens the retail trade from these sources. Much may be done to delay the final cataclysm, but in the end the small retailer must go, or be protected by the jobber and manufacturer.—Northwest Trade.

CANADA'S GREAT FAIR, SEPT. 5th TO 17th, 1892.

The citizens of Toronto have voted $150,000 to the Toronto Industrial Fair for improvements to be made on the grounds for this year's Exhibition, which is to be held from the 5th to the 17th Sept. next. About 50 acres have been added to the present grounds and a new race track and new grand stand to seat twelve thousand people is being built and many other improvements are being made. Consequently this year's Fair promises to be greater and better than ever. A large number of fine special attractions have been arranged for and several new features are promised. The exhibits in all departments will be larger and better than at any previous Fair and will include many that have been prepared for the World's Fair next year. Cheap excursions will as usual be run on all railways and the attendance of visitors will no doubt be as large as ever. All entries have to be made on or before the 13th of August, but most of the space in all the buildings for the exhibit of manufactures has already been applied for. For copies of the prize list and programmes drop a post card to Mr. Hill, the Manager, at Toronto.

The trader needs to be something of an adept in distinguishing true money from false. It seems impossible to keep the currency purged of spurious money. Bad half dollar, quarter dollar and ten cent pieces are constantly turning up in different parts of the country. Lately there has been less heard of counterfeit bank bills, but they too are actualities and not so scarce as they should be. Their worthlessness is seldom so easily discovered as is that of the base coins. The physical properties of the metal are usually a reliable means of testing a coin. The feeling, the color, the weight, above all the sound, are checks that will usually protect the trader against unlawful coin, if he will but take the precaution to use these checks. Besides the physical properties of the metal there is the stamp, which often is a very good guide. That will frequently be found imperfect, either in the omission of some detail of the device or in the character of the impression, the lettering and figuring being seldom so clearly cut, so well brought into relief, in spurious as in genuine pieces. The trader ought to study the matter carefully by means of object lessons, for which he has abundant material and opportunity in the money he receives every day. He should take the scientific way, and find out by the use of his senses all there is to be learned of the properties of true silver coinage, and compare with the standard he thereby arrives at, the properties of all doubtful coins. A series of observations pursued with earnestness for awhile will train the senses of touch, sight and hearing so that they will come to perceive at once points that would perhaps not be noticed in a lifetime if attention had not been given this bent. One man will handle five times as much silver as another without acquiring one-half as much sensitiveness to variations from necessary characteristics, simply because the other exercises his observation and consequently trains it. Where a man's calling involves nice discernment between good and bad coin, as for example in banking, his judgment becomes infallible. That shows what careful observation can do, and traders can make as much of the same habit as bank tellers can. United States coins are more frequently counterfeited than Canadian. They circulate in both countries and are therefore in greater demand; also in the United States currency there is a dollar piece, which is an advantage to counterfeiters as it pays them better to copy large coins than to copy small ones. A gang of counterfeiters was broken up in Wallaceburg, Ont., last week. They operated along the St. Clair river frontier, where United States silver is almost like an international coinage. They did very skilful work. Their money had largely crept into the currency circulating on both sides of the line. Counterfeiters can afford to lay out more money on their raw material nowadays than they could a few years ago. It would probably pay them to buy pure silver and make coins from it, as the price of that metal is now so low that the quantity of it in a United States dollar piece costs only about 65c. This would allow of 35 cents on the dollar to pay for the labor and risk of counterfeiting the government stamp, but would secure a class of coin that would not have a false ring, and thus diminish the risk. It would pay the manufacturers of cheap money for the people to work on a narrower margin, use an alloy approximating to coin silver and lessen the chance of their finding their way to penitentiary.

This depreciation in the price of silver is likely to become a seriously disturbing factor in the currency of countries whose circulation is on a bi-metallic basis—that is a basis of gold and silver, as the circulation of the United States is—and is already a seriously disturbing factor in the currency of countries whose circulation is on a purely silver basis, as is that of India, China, Japan, Mexico, etc. So long as the people of the United States can furnish gold to meet all foreign trade balances against them, or all foreign calls for interest on securities, or for the principal on securities sold back to them, the silver currency in that country will have internally the same purchasing power as if it were based on gold. But so soon as their supply of gold becomes inadequate to meet the calls from abroad, their silver currency will have to take its place, and will be accepted only at its gold value, or at from 30 to 35 per cent. below its face value. And of course that will regulate the value internally in the United States and make silver dollars equal in purchasing power to 65 or 70c. Then holders of United States silver and silver certificates in this country will have to lose over one-third of the value of all such money they may have, and it is estimated that between four and five million dollars of such money is circulating in Canada. It is improbable that the United States will be unable to meet all European calls for gold, so that shrinkage in the buying power of the former country's silver is not immediately likely. The time of year is at hand when the gold movement will turn to this side of the Atlantic, as, soon the fall shipments of grain will commence, big railway and industrial earnings will invite European capital to the United States and save that country from the necessity of falling upon the silver prop of its currency. There seems little likelihood then that United States silver will soon lose any of its purchasing power, but it is prudent for dealers to discourage its circulation as much as possible. If there should be any danger of a break in the value of U. S. silver, it is almost certain that our government would enforce the section of the Tariff Act which imposes a duty of 20 per cent on all articles not enumerated as either dutiable or free. In section 866 this Act reserves United States silver coins from the list that it admits free, so that these silver coins are dutiable at 20 per cent. But the duty has not been imposed, United States silver coins being admitted as if they were free. It is a difficult matter for a customs official to ransack the pockets of travellers and the money letters of correspondents coming into this country from across the border. About two-thirds of the United States money circulating here is in silver coin, the rest is in silver certificates. The certificates, in addition to being redeemable in silver—and therefore at about two-thirds of their face value if the supply of gold in the United States should become exhausted—displace money of our own banks in the circulation, and so of course does the silver coinage of the United States. This means a big loss of interest to our banks. In countries where the currency is on a purely silver basis, the shrinkage in the value of money is remarkable. It now takes nearly two rupees to buy in India what one bought but a few years ago, though commodities by comparison with a gold basis are much cheaper. Of course, though we have silver coins in this country, all our circulation is on a purely gold basis, as is that of the whole British Empire,—the Indies excepted—the silver coins being scarcely regarded as money, but only as counters and in use only for the subsidiary purpose of making change. The dollar is properly the unit of circulation and it is on a gold basis. Hence it makes little difference to us if our fifty cent piece is intrinsically equivalent to but 33¢. A postage stamp is worth 3¢, though there is not originally 3¢ deposited against it. But if the retail trade insisted on Canadian money for awhile, we should soon get rid of all danger from United States currency. The Monetary Conference which meets in Europe—probably in Brussels—next month will consider the silver question, but will hardly be able to settle it. There is something chivalrous in the United States holding on to a bi-metallic basis and running the risk of being reduced to dependence on its silver. The great drain on its gold that the monetary requirements of Europe occasion every year, owing to the larger need for gold because that is practically the sole basis of their circulation, even in the countries of the Latin Union, threatens to exhaust the United States supply. Consequently as trade increases in Europe, the circulation must expand largely at the expense of the United States, and tend to force that country on a purely silver basis.

The profits of the Thurber-Whyland Co., the great wholesale grocery house of New York, were $78,745.02 for the six months ending the 31st July last, while for the corresponding part of 1891 they were $101,000. The cause of this falling-off is said to be a contraction of the demand in the South, where the buying power shrank with the price of cotton, the great southern staple. This would mean a reduction in the volume of business done, but there are no figures published to show how the two half-years under comparison as to profits differed in respect to volume. As the American Grocer discusses the matter in relation to the influence on grocers' profits of a general decline in prices, it would appear that that journal considered the shrinkage to be less marked in the quantity of goods sold than in the profits. If so the decline must be to a considerable degree the result of competition and of consequent price-cutting, which, after all, has quite as much to do with the lowering of prices in many commodities as excessive production or diminished consumption. The profits of the wholesale grocers of this city, for the same two half-years will compare similarly, always to the advantage of the first half of 1891, because this year everybody threw open the throttle-valve and joined in the race to land the largest quantity of goods in retail stores, and profits went by the board. That spirited way of trading has been a very active agency in bringing about the shrinkage in profits that our wholesalers will muse over when 1892 comes to a close. But it is to be hoped they will not be constrained to adopt the heroic treatment that the Thurber-Whyland Co. has resorted to, that is cutting down the salaries of employees. This, that company claims puts its business on a profit-sharing basis, but the salesmen, clerks and other employees of the house will deem it rather a loss-sharing basis. It is true that a sense of personal loss as the result of personal short-coming in service is a wholesome incentive to an employee to exert himself to do his duty as fully as possible, and it is reasonably probable that if this sense were at work more generally in the minds of travelling salesmen there would be less price-cutting to make sales and less consequent occasion for reducing salaries. The profits of a house are to a great extent in the hands of its travellers, and when the measure of a traveller's ability comes to be tested by the profits of the business he does rather than by its volume, there will be more satisfaction with the proceeds of the grocery trade.

* * *

Retail grocers and general merchants have enough reason to be on their guard against the genuine inland revenue inspector who may be on his rounds to discover adulterated coffee, but it is also prudent to doubt whether every one styling himself an inspector is one in reality. The stamp of the service he claims to represent is the only evidence it is safe to go upon, and that stamp will be left on a package of the coffee or coffee compound that he purchases, a part of which sealed up the officer always gives back to the trader to hold till the analyst's report is heard from. In England the genuine official is occasionally personated by an enterprising fraud, who represents that in all first cases the offender is allowed to get off upon the payment of the analyst's fee if that is handed over without any trouble. Cautious people of course will be apt to think before they pay such demands, but others are nervously afraid of getting into trouble and are willing to compound with such a schemer, without stopping to question his title to the money he claims. An example of this sort of fraud was brought out in a trial at Halifax, England, which the Grocer's Chronicle reports. The prisoner bought $\frac{1}{2}$ oz. of coffee and asked the woman who sold it to him if it was pure. She believed it was. He tasted it and declared it to be half chicory. He then fastened it up and sealed it with sealing wax. By representing that the analyst's fee was all that would be charged for the first offence, she paid that and enriched the rogue by 5s. He was committed for trial.

CLERKS' ASSOCIATIONS.

Why is it that we hear so little of clerks' associations in this country, or in the United States? Have the clerks no objects that can be furthered by their joint action? Are they sufficiently paid? Are their hours always short enough? Are they proficient in all the requirements of their calling? Is there a well-established fraternal feeling among the salesmen of the same town? Is mutual improvement impossible? The clerks are neglecting a useful means of self-advancement in abstaining from organization. There are innumerable ways in which a clerks' association can be turned to account for the improvement of the salesmen of our stores, and what benefits them benefits their employers, and benefits the whole trade. With well-trained, well-informed, well-paid, zealous clerks in our stores, business would be infused with a new spirit. The clerks of any description of trade are vital organs in that trade, as the liver and the lungs are vital organs in the human body, and the trade will flourish or languish as these organs perform ill or well their respective functions.

If the young men who are engaged in mercantile pursuits would form an association in each town and city, they could carry out various schemes of improvement that would react beneficially on their material and moral welfare. Such an association could have its committee on sports to look after the exercise of the members, to organize clubs for cricket, football, baseball, bowling, curling, boating, bicycling, etc., to provide indoor exercise, to arrange matches, and discharge many other duties proper to such a committee. A reading committee could have its range of duties specified. An executive committee could be entrusted with the graver matters of hours, pay and general policy. An amusement committee would arrange a concert or drive in winter, an excursion or picnic in summer, a way of spending a particular holiday, etc. The moral atmosphere could be kept regulated by a committee authorized to carry out certain rules against objectionable conduct in the association. A debating club would be a very useful organ in such a body. Trade questions would be discussed by such a club, and the process of mercantile education would be carried on through it. THE CANADIAN GROCER would report the proceedings and doings of the association, would notice the discussions and give all the help and countenance it could render.

Good health, good spirits, good fellow-feeling are not born of isolation and confinement. Mix up together, take as much fresh air and sunlight, along with moderate bodily exercise, as you can get. Your mental needs must not be neglected. Read and select such literature as will strengthen, not enfeeble you. You will be a power in the store if you look well to your physical and mental health, as well as to the social conditions about you. A principle of philosophy upon which some noble characters have been grounded is, Hold yourself responsible for every cross and trial you have. Others may be to blame, but you cannot bring reforming agencies to bear on others as you can on yourself. Instead of hunting them up, find out where you were at fault in going into or bringing others into the matter, and calmly take the lesson to heart. This rule has made a disciplined man of many a naturally headstrong one.

STEALTHY SALESMANSHIP.

The philosophy of selling, as exemplified by the keepers of bazaar and department stores, rests upon the theory that the main thing is to get the customer into your store. They hold that whatever arts, representations or attractions are successful for this purpose should be adopted, regardless of their possible bearing upon the subsequent patronage of the customer. In this view it is right to lay snares for the unwary. One department store will keep sugar and undersell grocers, but warns the public that as sugar is not a tidy thing to handle in such a store, all the sugar business must be done between 10 and 11 in the morning, as before and after that there must be no traces of any such business on the premises. Then the people flock together at that hour for sugar, they find a handleless, awkward girl dealing it out with about one-tenth of the velocity of a smart grocer hand, and they find the hour about fifteen minutes short. Perhaps not one out of a dozen that comes for sugar gets any before time is called. This is how money is saved on sugar. But the people are in the store and naturally drift from one department to another, and buy something before they leave. More than this, the salesmen drop seed into receptive soil, for they show goods that make eyes grow large and dilate on bargains that are never forgotten. On some future day many of these people return with a little money and buy the goods they yearned after. All that arose out of the sugar trick.

But the sugar trick will get played out, people will see that they fail to get supplied. Only very slowly will they give in to this conviction. Others got sugar, why shouldn't they? At all events it is a diverting way to put in an hour, gazing on the throng striving with one another to get the phlegmatic saleswoman's attention. Even if the sugar trick does fail another device can be tried. Numberless people have seen an article hanging at the front of a bazaar store to-day marked at a certain price that they will find much dearer to-morrow. It is a drive to-day, people are to be lured in by this particular bait and are to be induced to take other things. A plain, open sacrifice of one line is to be made for the benefit of all the others, but selling of that line is to be retarded as much as possible. People are apt to think that a line marked down and very ostentatiously offered is very heavily stocked. It is more likely that it is in meagre supply. The mission of that article is to draw for a day or two.

The clerks make it their business to show the customer something better than the cheap line on which the apparent "drive" is being made. They dwell on the more satisfactory quality and finally sell the better goods, which yield a profit. In some English stores, it is said, a clerk is dismissed if his total sales contain more than a certain percentage of the articles in the window. The "drive" line is usually kept in a remote part of the store, so that the customer has to go through the whole length of the building to get served with it. This brings all sorts of stock under his notice, and is a reasonably certain way of inveigling him into buying something else. Salesmen are instructed to keep samples of very shabby or inferior goods to show alongside of that they are expected to sell, so that the contrast will influence the customer.

The result of these and many other like devices is that people visiting these department stores get the idea that things are cheap there. The artful way their cash has been beguiled out of them covers up from their observation the policy of the store, which is to make money by finesse. And the prices paid for the bulk of the goods bought in such stores are usually such as would satisfy the trader who deals in one class of goods, as for example, groceries. The departmental stores get profits by stealth. Their insidious ways are too much for the people.

A CLERK REFUSES TO SELL SUGAR.

A clerk in an English grocery store believed that to sell sugar alone without any profit is a delusion and a snare. Accordingly he refused to supply a customer who wanted nothing but sugar, and a complaint was lodged with his employer, resulting in his dismissal. He then had the cheek to sue his employer for two weeks' salary in lieu of notice. The judge said the evidence clearly showed that the plaintiff had refused to do a lawful act, and his employer was entitled to discharge him in the manner adopted. A verdict was of course given for defendant. As the "London Grocer" says: "We do not agree with the system of selling sugar without a profit. We believe it to be a mistake, an ill-advised measure of commercial policy, and no common-sense grocer will stand up in its defense." But the clerk has no right to set himself up as the reformer; that is the business of the grocer. He, not his clerks, must arrange his own system of trading, and if a clerk refuses to comply therewith, the employer has only one remedy, viz., dismissal. However, we advise our readers, says the "N. E. Grocer," to get a profit on their sugar, and then they can sell it without suffering even if they sell nothing else in the transaction.

WHERE THE SHOE PINCHES.

TORONTO, Aug. 15, 1892.

EDITOR OF THE CANADIAN GROCER.

DEAR SIR,—My attention having been drawn to a letter from Mr. Hustwith, in your issue of 5th inst., please allow me a few words in reply to same. It will be readily understood, in the tea trade, why Mr. Hustwith should so urgently object to package teas, and that he is glad to hear of the "conversion" of a grocer to the loose teas in original chests, as he sells nothing but loose teas, but it is amusing to others, as well as myself, selling high grade fine package teas, to notice how the sale of these finely blended goods, which is increasing, tends to make Mr. H. call out "the shoe pinches." There are some grocers in the city who will not sell package tea, and the frequent reason is, they do not possess a trade for "first class" goods. Then again some package teas are inferior, but there are four or five excellent brands in the market blended by men who have devoted years of hard labor to obtain a knowledge of the art, for "art" it undoubtedly is. The jobbing dry goods store on Queen street west, I opine, Mr. H. refers to, does not sell a 5c. package tea, but some of the loose rubbish sold to unknowing merchants. And here Mr. H. appears to me to jump on one of his own feet, as this case has absolutely nothing connecting it with package teas, over which he makes such a virulent, but at same time, absurd attack. The guarantees that retail grocers possess, that package teas are up to standard and sample, are plain and simple, as follows:

Firstly. No reputable firm would put up a package tea, unless it was up to value and sample, and could be upheld, as by doing otherwise they irretrievably ruin their own reputation.

Secondly. The consumer would rapidly let the merchant learn the fact (if such) of any falling off in quality, and thereby exclude the sale of anything inferior.

Thirdly. The sealed package in itself, with the brand mark, etc., is a guarantee of its absolute purity and excellence, whereas in loose teas, a fraud might be perpetrated by dishonest firms; and this is impossible in package teas.

Lastly. Package teas are a guarantee to the trade and consumers of absolute purity and goodness, whereas I can affirm, without exaggeration, that over 60 per cent. of the loose teas or teas in chests and half-chests consumed in Canada, otherwise than Indian or Ceylon teas, are highly adulterated, and excessively injurious to the public. In fact, health officers should be appointed to examine closely into the bulk and loose teas from China and Japan that Canadians are drinking, and plenty of this filthy Japan, Young Hyson and even Congou, would be decreed unfit for human consumption. The public, fortunately, are beginning to recognize this fact. Hence the call for special package teas, which, I maintain, will ultimately be the principal method of selling teas in Canada, and the only thoroughly reliable one.

As Mr. H. sells nothing but these loose teas, it is readily seen "where the shoe pinches," and this can be the only excuse for him launching out in such a tirade against one of the coming largest industries, and the best both for grocers and consumers in the tea trade.

I am, yours faithfully,

SYD. N. NORRIE.

SELF-INTEREST WARPS THE JUDGMENT.

DEAR GROCER,—I have read with much interest, coupled with admiration for the valor of the self-constituted champions of the poor ill-treated retailers, the letters of Mr. Stephen Hustwith and Mr. R. M. Corrie, the energetic and deservedly popular secretary of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association, on the question of package teas and the necessity of every grocer blending his own teas. That the question before these gentlemen is of moment to grocers in general cannot be doubted, but that the motive in championing the rights of the down-trodden retailer is unselfish, I question very much in connection with one of these gentlemen, and I trust that you will pardon me if I question the disinterestedness of Mr. Hustwith in advocating a matter entirely within the realm of the individual grocer. Those of your city readers who happen to have the pleasure of receiving regular calls from this gentleman in the interest of a well known tea house that does not handle package goods, may have smiled to themselves on reading his powerful attack against a pernicious system of robbery by the wholesale dealers of this city, and visions of a certain city traveller blending teas for his clients which he had sold them, may have caused a decidedly loud laugh to burst from their lips, and awakened the echoes of Belwoods Park or caused even the murky Don to break his cuticle with joy. What a disinterested city salesman Mr. Hustwith must be to so work in the interests, not only of his direct employers (who do not handle package teas, but have certain formulas which they no doubt will be pleased to furnish their customers, if they purchase their particular teas), but also in the interest of the other half-dozen wholesale grocers of Toronto who do not handle package teas. I wonder does Mr. Hustwith draw salaries from these other six competitors, and is he a sort of commercial Pooh-Bah? I do not personally know him, but in my peregrinations through the city with my humble samples of teas I have heard rumors that while condemning the package teas he was ever ready to himself blend teas for his trade, of course teas sold only by himself. That's one for the grocer and two for Mr. Hustwith. It would be a very dull traveller indeed who would not take the greatest pleasure and care in assisting his customers to blend teas that he had sold them himself, and it would be a duller traveller who would not talk down package teas and praise up his own straight lines. There is always a wheel within a wheel, and it does not take much thinking to understand Mr. Hustwith's views on the package-tea question. It is contended no doubt that every grocer in this city can blend a tea as good as are the leading brands now on the market, but I most emphatically contend that this is not only impossible but also impracticable. In establishing a grade of blended tea to retail say at 50c., and to make that blend uniform through years' requires a large stock of the different constituents to be constantly kept on hand, and, what is as much a necessity, the opportunity to purchase at short notice any of the lines that have run out. This latter difficulty has been and is experienced frequently by houses handling a larger stock and greater variety of teas than even Mr. Hustwith's firm. I would like to hear the views of Mr. Hayter, of the world-famed (not local only) tea growers and exporters, Steele, Hayter & Co., on the subject of blending teas, particularly package teas, but then, Mr. Hayter would be prejudiced, you know, in favor of the latter.

I perfectly agree with Mr. Corrie that the demand rules the quality, and if the people want an article that is well advertised and that is found on trial to be suitable, palatable and entirely satisfactory, it would be the greatest folly on part of the grocer to talk them not only out of this package tea but also out of his store. Mr. Corrie, however, contends that it would pay the retailers better to put up their own package teas and do their own advertising. It might do this in limited instances where right ideas and a long pocket book were at the back of the movement, but there are not five retail grocers in this city who would think of spending $10.00 or so in properly advertising their "Paragon" blend, etc., and to advertise with small dodgers, etc., is just throwing good money away. The expenses in connection with properly and tastefully getting up a taking blend of one's own have repeatedly scared enterprising grocers from making the attempt, and they were are men.

In conclusion I beg to state that the views expressed here are absolutely my own, and an experience of ten years in the general grocery trade of Canada and the United States has confirmed me more and more in the belief that it is best to sell the goods that please the public; and the goods that are well advertised, be they teas, soaps, starches or other commodities, are the goods to handle.

Yours truly,

WM. H. SEYLER.

THE SPIDER AND THE FLY.

Grocer.—I guess I'll sign it, but don't you see, ha ha, we close at nine o'clock at night now, and I don't see how we are going to do both, especially when the man across the road keeps everything but a pinch of sugar.

C. T.—Well I will go over and see if I cannot arrange it with him some way or other.

Grocer.—All right.

C. T.—Well good day.

Grocer.—Good day.

[C. T.—Crosses to the fruit man on the other side of the street.]

C. T.—Good morning, Sir.

F. M.—Good morning.

C. T.—I'm carrying an agreement in my pocket for the Wednesday afternoon half holiday. Would you sign it?

F. M.—Eh! not much, I'm not a grocer. I'm a fruit man. That's got nothing to do with me. That's for the grocers. I only sell fruit. I don't depend on groceries. I just keep a few groceries to accommodate my customers. I can't afford to lose my stuff through closing up a half day. We make little enough now without trying to lose any more.

C. T.—Oh! I understood that you kept nearly a full line of groceries.

F. M.—Well I don't. I keep canned goods and teas, coffees and spices and some soap and washing soda and brooms and pails and brushes, but that is all. I don't keep any sugar. I was thinking of getting some in but there is nothing in it, so I don't know yet whether to get some or not. I think I'll let the grocers handle that.

C. T.—I didn't know that the fruit men sold teas and coffees, etc.

F. M.—Oh yes they do, some of them, and why should they not? The grocers sell bananas, raspberries, blackberries, strawberries, and some of the biggest stores sell lettuce, cabbage, onions, radishes, apples, pears, peaches, plums, yes and some of them chickens. That's why some of the butchers have gone into the grocery business in connection with the butcher business, and that is why other butchers buy pickles, sauces, catsups and canned goods, and that is why the fruit men are going into canned goods and groceries. The grocers are a funny lot anyway. I hear that they will say one thing and do another, even in their associations. Even in this closing movement I'll bet you that some of them that sign it won't keep it ten days. They will be standing looking out of one corner of their eye round the corner of the door to see if their neighbour is closing up or not. I know it. I've seen it done before. Then again they will sell nearly everything we sell, and if a man comes to try and sell us package tea, why they will try and kick up a rumpus and threaten not to buy it, but they have got to. They have not got the spunk to tell their customers they would not keep it for fear they might go somewhere else and get it, and if the men who sell package tea would not sell to us or the dry goods trade then it is a question whether they would buy it or not. The dry goods trade handling it wakes them up, it makes them jealous. Do you know that certain dry goods houses in this city sell as much soap and package tea and other goods in that line in one month as some of the largest retail grocers would in a year? Perhaps you would not believe it, but it is a fact and I can prove it. Then they would expect that a manufacturer or wholesale man should throw up trade like that to suit them. Well the wholesale man knows a trick worth two of that, and don't you forget it. Don't you know that some grocers must buy pickles that are made in this country simply because they are sold to butchers, and the butchers sell about 5 times as many domestic pickles as the grocers? If the manufacturer would not sell to butchers, the grocers would not help them out, because they do not sell enough to make up for it. I tell you there is more than one way of looking at these things. Of course a man can have his own opinion, but every other man has his opinion too, and no two men's experience is alike. Why, I heard it said that the grocers' association had stopped the wholesale houses from selling to private families, but they have not.

C. T.—Oh yes they have. You must be mistaken,

F. M.—Well I'm not, and I'll tell you how I know, if you have time and will only listen for a moment.

C. T.—I have not much time, but I will listen to your story, for it may be interesting, especially as I know one of the committee who was appointed to go down and interview them on the question.

F. M.—Well, all right. I won't keep you any longer than I can help, but I just want to show you how they keep their word, if they promised not to sell to private families. I was standing in a grocery store on the 17th of August, 1892, when a boy came in and asked for a ½ pound of tea. The grocer served him in a few minutes. He came back and said that he had made a mistake, he only wanted a ¼ of a pound. When the grocer asked him what for, he answered that his mother was going to get 4 or 5 lb from a wholesale house in the morning through L. a liquor merchant on Queen St. east, who got it wholesale from L. The grocer said, "All right, my boy." Then turning to me said, "That's how some of the wholesale men keep their promise."

C. T.—Well, sir, you astonish me. I can hardly credit it, it seems so strange.

F. M.—Well, sir, it is nevertheless true, and to true, but that is how the thing goes.

C. T.—It is really too bad. In regard to package teas I saw a letter in THE GROCER on the subject, not a bad letter, but I thought that what the writer said in regard to the grocer having to keep what their customers asked for was not altogether right, because I thought if the grocer would sit on the package teas in the first place and have nothing to do with them that would settle it once for all.

F. M.—Oh, no, it wouldn't. That is where you are out. Why they would go and stock up some of the dry goods or drug store or confectioners with them. There is a confectioner on Yonge St., has stock right in his window, so as every one can see it as they pass by, as much as to say: "We keep this tea, if you want a cup come in and try it." These men are going to place their goods somewhere. They are in for making money, and if they don't make it in one place they will in another.

C. T.—I suppose there is some truth in what you say. Of course the stuff must have some good qualities in it or the people would not ask for it the second time, and if they can please the public by their knowledge of blending it doesn't make any difference what it costs them or what profit they make on it so long as it gives satisfaction. It's not the medicine that costs the money, it is the knowledge of knowing how to put it together.

F. M.—Yes, sir, and do you know there is a class of people who consider an article no good unless it is a good price, and it is studying properly, their likes and dislikes, and catering to their tastes that brings success in business. The thing may be entirely wrong and injurious to their health, but they will have what they like if they have to pay the doctor five dollars afterwards to put them right.

C. T.—I guess you are right. It would be next to an impossibility to change people's opinion of what they like and dislike. The will is governed by the affections, not the affections by the will, consequently, I reckon the easiest way is to let them have what they like and not try to cross them or they might spit fire at you like a petted child and leave you in a pout. People are strange. I have come across some people who would ask a man what his opinion was on a certain thing, if it was good, but they are getting few and far between amongst the better classes. You may find a spirit of this kind, but among the masses it is "Give us lots for our money, and we will run the chances."

F. M.—That's a fact. I see it every day.

C. T.—It is too true. If we could only get people to think as we think everything would be all right.

F. M.—Yes. That's what we think, but they may think different. We fancy we are right, and they think they are right, and it is going to take a long time to impress them that they are all wrong.

C. T.—You are about right. Talking about pleasing people brings me in mind of a conversation I had with a confectioner the other day who does a large business. I said to him that I believed that the manufacturers were to blame a great deal for some sickness and diseases that were prevalent amongst humanity, the younger member especially. He said, "Do you know that we put coloring on some of the candies we send out that not one of our employes would touch for fear of getting poisoned, and yet those candies are just the ones that catch the eye and they buy. Children especially are fond of bright colors, and there is no doubt that it poisons the blood and makes them irritable and feverish, and it is about the last thing that their mothers think the cause of their sickness. There will be a day of reckoning some day. How would those manufacturers feel to see those sweet little innocents hold up their little hands and call out, "That is the man, mamma, who poisoned me!" Yes, sir, they have poisoned many a bud and made it die long before it could spread its fragrance on this world of care. In their mad haste to make money they content themselves by saying there is not enough to hurt, but the poison is there all the same. But, by-the-by, Mr. J., I had forgotten all about the time.

F. M.—So had I.

C. T.—Well, you won't sign the agreement?

F. M.—Not for Joseph. Not this time.

C. T.—Well, good day.

F. M.—Good day, sir. I'm sorry you are going.

SHOW WINDOW DRESSING.

Window dressing of the present day is one of the best advertisements that a retailer may indulge in. Goods neatly and artistically arranged in a show window appeal to the passer-by as to what may be obtained inside the store. It is a silent salesman in itself, and a continuation of displays week in and week out will invariably bring customers to your store which otherwise it would not have done. In the arrangement of goods it is best to offer a continuous change, even if it is necessary to show the same articles, and change the display, if possible, one a week. It is not always the amount of goods you display that make an attractive show, but sometimes the most simple will produce the desired effect.

The most successful windows and by far the most effective is to trim with only one line of goods.

The main requisites are the trained eye, quick comprehension of effects in color, distribution and shape, and a natural neatness and nattiness in apportioning to a variety of articles a proportionate arrangement of display.

In considering the subject of window dressing, the salesman who has this particular branch of the business in charge should aim to display a fair sample of goods to be found within—displayed so that it will appeal with force to the purchaser at the time he is looking at them; displayed only with seasonable goods; displayed, the attention having been attracted, curiosity must be gratified, and he must not be allowed to go away disappointed.

A special feature retailers may adopt, and more so in the grocery line, is to introduce special days once or twice a month and arrange the windows as well as the interior with one line of goods. For example, articles for table use, such as catsups, sauces, pickles, etc. In the manner of window display the interior, if space will permit, may be provided with a table dressed off with a fancy table cover and the various articles arranged as they are used. The background may be built up in pyramid style from the same line of goods; the interior of store arranged with the same goods displayed prominently where space will permit, and placards distributed about, giving prices, etc.

The important part of a show window is the background, and while many windows in the grocery line are not boxed in, a good plan is to build up stationary steps, running from the edge of window pane extending into store, the back of which may rest on supports if the window is not of sufficient depth. If this is followed out, then the merchant or clerk may change his display once or twice a week; some days showing up a line of canned fruits; then change to bottled goods, on to a display of soap, and so on, constantly offering a continuous change of goods.

Windows that are boxed in should always have a background, which may consist of cheese cloth tacked to a strip across the back of the window. Another way is to build up a solid wall of canned goods if stock will permit.

There are numbers of ways of making a window attractive, but there is one feature which must be always that way and no other way, and that is cleanliness. Dress your store windows and continually cultivate improvement in the art, and you will then fortify yourself with one of the most valuable adjuncts of business success.—Northwest Trade.

A NATIONAL REPUTATION.

[Copied from the Grocers' Journal of Commerce, Kansas City.]

When any article of commerce gains a national reputation in the United States, it must be possessed of superior excellence. "The Highland Brand of Evaporated Cream," prepared at Highland, Ill., is sold all over the United States, and sent to many foreign countries. It is the best perfect article of the kind made in the world. There are at least one hundred brands of condensed milk or cream, but the "Highland Brand" is considered the best by the jobber, the retailer and the consumer. It can be used in any way that milk from the cow can be used. It is not more expensive than milk, and can be kept where it would be impossible to keep fresh milk. Adv.

THE BROKER.

A merry Madrigal. With apologies to Mr. W. F. Gilbert. Air, "When the enterprising burglar, etc."

When the disappointed buyer's bent on grumbling,

Bent on grumbling,

And complaining in dyspeptic sort of way,
He loves to slang and bully all around him,

All around him,

And abuse the patient broker all the day.

It gives him pleasure to make trouble over nothing,

Over nothing,

And make claims when he well knows that he has none.

Taking one consideration with another,

With another,

A broker's lot is not a happy one, Happy one!
When the seller and the buyer are in for fun,

Are in for fun,

A broker's lot is not a happy one.

When the seller feels the buyer's trying to 'do 'him,

Trying to 'do 'him,

He wires his broker short, and sweet and strong.

Sends a message calculated to subdue him,
To subdue him.

And make him feel abjectly that he's wrong.

He forgets how hard his agent may be working,

May be working,

Amid rebuffs from early morn to setting sun.
Taking this consideration with the other,

With the other,

A broker's lot is not a happy one,

Happy one!

When the seller and the buyer go in for fun,
Go in for fun,

The broker's lot is not a happy one.

TORONTO INDUSTRIAL FAIR.

The great event in Exhibitions in Canada is the Toronto Industrial Fair, which opens this year Sept. 5th and closes Sept. 17th. It will be specially interesting on account both of the large and comprehensive price list and because of the special attractions to be offered. So great has been the demand for space in past years, and to such large proportions has the Fair grown, that more space became a necessity, and after repeated efforts the directors have secured additional accommodation on the Garrison Commons. A large new grand stand and a new speeding ring will be ready by opening day. The plan for the stand shows a design of the most complete character, with offices and side rooms to meet the convenience and comfort of all who may be engaged in the ring, or who may wish to remain as spectators of the speeding and other attractive events. Every farmer in the province ought to see this Fair. The special attractions this year are very numerous and are much superior to previous years. Cheap fares will prevail on all railways.

DRY GOODS.

This week has been a busy one among the wholesalers. The house trade is beginning to increase, and shipping is very brisk, with parcels larger than usual. The harvest has proven equal to expectations and large orders are being placed or confirmed. Prices remain firm in all classes of goods.

Next week will see most of the travellers in the house to remain until after the Exhibition, that is, until about September 20th. Thus will be finished the placing orders for this season, and the houses will be crowded with visitors for the next few weeks, after which travellers will go out again for sorting up orders.

Letter orders are beginning to pick up, but have been generally slow during the past two weeks. These orders are now coming in for staple fall goods, and it is expected that they will increase from now on.

In spool cotton prices remain the same. The manufacturers will not accept orders for future delivery at these prices or guarantee the prices.

Travellers' orders continue larger than in previous corresponding seasons.

NOTES.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have just received a large shipment of buttons comprising metal, vegetable, ivory, horn, pearls, and pearlletta. Designs are new and the range of colorings extensive. They keep in stock the celebrated Fil-au-chinois linen thread in all numbers. This is a thread of especial quality, being waxed and ready for use in handsewing. It has given great satisfaction. A full range of plain light and heavy circular pillon cottons is shown, also a large stock of bleached and unbleached sheetings, in Canadian and American manufactured goods, in all widths. Their stock of dress goods is being rapidly moved out.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence show a large stock of cashmere gloves in jersey and gauntlet. Both these styles are selling well. Their "Seamless Fernard" and "Katrina" laced kid gloves are selling well. They are sole agents for these lines and they are well worthy of consideration. They are showing a full line of shot silks in some gorgeous colorings, also some nice lines of feather and astrachan trimmings. Their tweed-effect dress goods are selling well. Their stock of staples is large and well-assorted and special attention is paid to keeping this class of goods in good selling shape.

W. R. Brock & Co. are having a ready sale for their single and double width tartan dress goods. In tweed effects, especially in opposite diagonal stripe effects, the trade continues good. Some very beautiful patterns are shown in this class of goods. In fancy stripe shirts and drawers their stock is well assorted, although these goods are scarce on the market at present. Their sales of top-shirts have been greater than at any former season, both in plain and fancy lines. These are all Canadian made, and find a ready sale with almost every class of the community.

Wyld, Grasset & Darling have a complete stock of all-wool blankets, unions in whites and greys; all of these being of good quality and in the best Canadian makes. In water-proof goods they are showing an extensive range in rubber and tweed men's coats and ladies' circulars. Their stock is well assorted. In dress goods and cloakings they are showing some very nobby things and very good value in all lines.

Samson, Kennedy & Co. are showing a splendid line of neckwear in four-in-hand, knots, and novelties in flat shapes. The leading things are darks in spots, brocades and bengalines. Their rubber goods are well-assorted in all lines. McIntosh's goods are carried in a full range in both ladies' and men's wear. Their stock of white shirts, laundried and unlaundried, is complete, and the quality at ordinary prices is excellent. In umbrellas they are showing some special features. A special line is a 24½-inch paragon frame and a fine gloria cloth. Their stock of ladies' hygiene vests and lambs' wool Scotch underwear is complete and worthy of attention.

John Macdonald & Co. are showing a nice range of chenille and lace curtains, and all shades in 72-inch piano felts. These latter are exceptionally beautiful goods. Their saxonys, andalusians, fingerings and Canadian yarns have opened up exceptionally well this season and are meeting with very sales. They are showing novelties in astrachans, moss and ruche trimmings; also gilt, silver and jet-trimmings. A shipment of cream silk handkerchiefs is to hand. Among other shipments are repeats for neckwear, umbrellas, men's cardigans, top shirts, half-hose, harvest mits and overalls. The stock has never been better assorted in these lines than at the present time. Their stock of silks and ribbons is well assorted, also, at the present time in readiness for the millinery trade. All widths, colors, qualities, etc., are shown. They are showing special drives in cashmere hosiery and a line of colored ribbons.

The "delinquent list" of the Halifax Retail Grocers' association now numbers eighty.

The catch of whitefish on lake Winnipeg this season has been larger than ever before.

The Sarnia Salt Company (Limited), with capital stock of $20,000, has been incorporated.

D. McGeein has left Kingston for Syracuse to take the position of head clerk in a large grocery establishment there.

E. B. Eddy, manufacturer, of Hull, was in Winnipeg last week to look over the field with a view of establishing a branch there.

A molasses vessel, the brigantine St. Joseph, Capt. Pinhey, from Barbados to Montreal, went ashore last week at Mille Vache. She is a total wreck.

Hip Lung, the wealthiest Chinese merchant in Chicago, together with several influential Chinese of Canton, San Francisco and New York, have applied for space at the World's Fair for a big tea house.

The new store in the Hotel Block at Walkerville has been leased by Smith & Duck of Windsor. It is nearly ready for occupancy, and will be run by them as a branch store, greatly facilitating their growing trade in Walkerville.

The Port & Winch Co. Limited, has been formed for purposes of wholesale exportation of fish, and the wholesale and retail fish and game trade, with headquarters in Westminster and Vancouver, and agencies in Toronto, Montreal, New York and other important Eastern centres.

An innovation in the live stock trade is the shipment of hogs to the Old Country. The first lot in years went forward to Liverpool on Saturday, shipped by C. Coughlin. Previous experiments have always failed, usually on account of the large mortality that occurred among the animals.

F. M. Webb, of Avenue road, Toronto, is now on a visit to this city, and is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Hutchinson. Mr. Webb was for many years engaged in the wholesale grocery business in Toronto, and if he is satisfied with the condition of business here he may remain here permanently and open in business.—Vancouver News-Advertiser.

A young immigrant lad, John Ford, was arrested at Peterborough the other morning charged with tapping the till in M. Martyn's grocery store on George street. It is alleged that the boy went into the store, and after getting Mr. Martyn to go down the cellar for a pound of butter cleaned out the till. He was committed to stand his trial at the assizes.

Geo. Mathews, pork packer, is giving up business in Vancouver and is going back to Peterboro. The firm of Matthew Bros. are going largely into the export trade, and will concentrate their efforts in that direction. Mr. Matthews built up a good business in British Columbia and was well liked among the dealers.

B. G. Davis, who has owned and run the Champion Store, Windsor, for the last 18 years, has sold out and leased the premises to David J. Schumacher. Mr. Schumacher is a first-class butcher and well acquainted with the grocery business, having been connected with the Walkerville General Store for seven years. He will shortly add a meat market business to the old established store.

"There is one Canadian colony that declines to take United States money at par," said a traveller who has just returned from St. John's. "Newfoundlanders will not accept any currency or bills other than their own except at a discount. Paper money is subject to 3 per cent. discount, quarters are only worth 23c., 10c. pieces 9c., and 5c. pieces 4c."

The firm of Mathers & Milligan, produce and commission merchants, New Westminster, B.C., have sold their business to the Brackman & Kerr Milling Company (Ltd.), of Victoria. This change was effected by Mr. D. R. Kerr, of that firm, who has returned to the Capital. The new company announces that they intend to buy for cash from the farmers of the district, and will be prepared to handle produce in any quantity.

Mons. Burkner, the Vice-President of the Paris Society of Pharmacy, has given the members of that body a digest of some recent observations on the analysis and character of tea. He thought it pretty well established that the commercial value of black tea is in direct proportion to the amount of theine it contains. In the case of green tea this is not so, and it is a mistake to estimate the value of a sample upon the results of a theine analysis.

The Commercial says that Winnipeg dealers complain that the price of cheese is being reduced by the custom of factories peddling cheese to retail dealers. Some of the factories divide the make among their patrons, and the latter peddle it in a small way among retail traders. By adopting this custom the factories are simply increasing competition against themselves. Prices are frequently cut in this way, and thus the value of the make is reduced generally.

The Great Western flour and oatmeal mills, Woodstock, Ont., were totally destroyed by fire on Friday night last. The fire broke out shortly after midnight, and before the firemen arrived the flames had gained such headway that it was impossible to save the building. The fire started in the oatmeal department, but its origin is a mystery. The Great Western Mills, with a daily capacity of 500 barrels, was one of the best oatmeal and flour mills in Ontario. It was built over thirty years ago by Mr. John Watson, and was estimated to be worth $65,000. It is altogether likely that the proprietors, McDonald & Thomson, will not rebuild. The flour mills might have been saved had the firemen arrived on the scene in reasonable time. The total insurance is $30,000. The stock was worth between $5,000 and $6,000, and was a total loss.

GLEE AT WINDSOR.

The first annual dinner of the Windsor Grocers' and Provision Dealers' Association was held on Friday, the 19th inst., at Deschree Shaska, the beautiful summer resort on the Canadian island of the Detroit River, known as Fighting Island. The 19th was observed as Windsor's annual civic holiday, but owing to the fact that the races were being held on that day and to the sudden change in the temperature, the attendance was not so large as might have been. The occasion, however, was a most enjoyable one for those who did go. Proceeding on the 3 o'clock boat, the ride of eight miles down the river and a ramble round the beautiful grounds and grove gave the members a good appetite for one of the Shaska's famous special 6 o'clock dinners. The sumptuous repast having been done ample justice to, the company retired to the large parlor upstairs, where an hour was spent in the feast of reason and flow of soul. The weather being too chilly for outdoor sports bowling was indulged in for the rest of the evening. Returning on the last boat the company expressed their thanks to Jas. T. Smith, the president, and also to the secretary for their efforts in providing such an excellent afternoon's enjoyment.

Competition is keen and active and the only way to meet it successfully is to buy from the best houses, and at lowest prices.

MONTREAL FRUIT SALE.

Vipond, McBride & Co.'s Californian fruit sale on Monday was largely attended. The bidding was brisk and the lots were run off quickly. F. J. Potter handled the sale to the utmost satisfaction of everyone present.

At the sale on Tuesday the receipts of stock were large, and despite a large attendance of buyers and active bidding, prices were low. The offerings were 181 boxes of Bartlett pears, 56 crates plums, 641 boxes peaches, 96 crates grapes, 18 crates peaches. The prices fetched were: Pears, 2 5-8 to 3 1-8c.; peaches, $1.10 to $1.87 1-2; plums, $1.90 to $2.25; grapes, $1.90 to $4. The sale was at the fruit warehouse of J. R. Clogg & Co., who sold it on commission for a large American shipping firm in Los Angeles, Cal.

MONTREAL TRADE CHAT.

W. S. Kennedy has been appointed Canadian agent for several English grocers' sundries houses, among whom are: Carr & Co., biscuit manufacturers; Carlisle, Rountree & Co., chocolate manufacturers, York; and Bryant & May, the large match people, along with several other large agencies. J. C. Campbell, who has been connected with the grocery trade in Montreal for a time, will travel for him. Mr. Campbell was in business for himself on the corner of St. Catherine and Drummond streets. He has left for the west and hopes to do a good business.

DILIGENCE IN BUSINESS.

In these days of hurry and strife for the first places in the race of life it is even more important than in former years that a man be diligent in his business and look after its every detail closely.

We see among our greatest business men of to-day those who started in life as poor boys and who have now become the head of large establishments. How have they come to do this? Was it because they had better chances than are now held out to the average young man? That has not been so in the majority of cases, but they have striven after their high positions and have endured hardships to overcome obstacles. They have been diligent in business and are now reaping a richly deserved reward.

In some respects it may be harder for a young man, or, in fact, any man in business, to make a great success, because of the amount of competition that has to be met. It needs men who will not give up for anything to battle against this competition.

Close attention must be given to the slightest details and everything has to be done carefully. The cost must be measured in every transaction. Application is necessary if you would attain the best results.

Look out for the little things. They do not seem to count at the time, but every item helps to count up on either side of the balance sheet. By that it is not meant that one should be close, but they should be careful.

The "tricks of the trade" ought to be let alone. They do not help any in the long run. If a customer finds that he is not being treated fairly he will leave in an instant. It is fair to say that there is very little underhanded business being done. It does not pay and business men have come to see it.

Give all you can for the money, and you will hold a customer and gain others. Don't run down another man's stock in order to make a sale. If your neighbor has poor stock the customer will find it out if he tries. Business men should work together as much as possible and try to make the standard of business principle as high as possible.

Let a man start out with fixed principles and with determination to win by the practice of fairness toward all and he is bound to succeed. He needs to look out for his business and see that those under him are as honorable in every way. A man who does that will find friends both with customers and fellow business men.

All lines of business must be run systematically in order to attain the best results. It will not do to let one thing after another pile up until one is literally snowed under. It is best to go through with everything in a systematic manner. Take up each item in its regular order and work while you work. Recreation that is taken when you are conscious that you have done the work of the day faithfully is always sweetest.

Always be on the lookout for chances to improve methods in business, and keep up with the times in all lines. There are new articles coming up continually. Some of them possess merit and some do not. It is a study by itself to find out which are the best to handle. Much may be gained or lost in this respect.

There are numerous ways in which business must be watched. One must love the business he is engaged in and seek to make it all that it should be. The mark of excellency cannot be placed too high. Reward for his labors is sure to come to the diligent man, and that was well known in the time of Solomon, who said, "Seest thou a man diligent in his business? he shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before mean men."—Stoves and Hardware Reporter.

From The Iron Age, New York City, June, 1892:—"A book for Storekeepers is that presented in 'Ideas for Hardware Merchants,' the title of a new book by D. T. Mallett. The subjects treated are comprehensive and Mr. Mallett, because of his training and business experience, is particularly adapted to treat these live subjects in a practical and interesting manner. He states that his object in writing this trade book is not to instruct, but to simply recall to mind some slumbering knowledge which the hardware dealer has urgent need of in his peculiar calling. The chapter on Ratio of Store Expenses to Sales is a most practical and interesting one, as the information given is of a definite nature, being illustrated by figures. It is a great satisfaction for a merchant to be sure he is doing business in a safe manner, and such figures enable one to arrive at a conclusion, whether satisfactory or not. The book is well printed on excellent paper and contains many pages of instructive reading matter. The first edition is 5,000 copies. It is for sale by the J. B. McLean Co., Toronto, Canada, at one dollar.

SUMMER CURING NOW READY.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, Aug. 25, 1892.
GROCERIES.

The balance would be very slightly disturbed with this week's trade in one pan of the scales and last week's in the other. The trade has neither gained nor lost in point of quantity. There is amendment, but it is in the attitude of sellers and in the tone of the trade. The cutting of prices on sugar shows signs of exhaustion in the motive power which maintained it with so much spirit throughout July and into August. The ardor for business which brought the trade into such wrong courses with respect to this commodity is now pretty well blown off as the result of the stiff pace the competitors held while they were at it. Nobody has won renown or profit by it, and the policy of cutting is relinquished. The price has stiffened at all centres of production and distribution. Teas are holding their own. New dried fruit, with the exception of currants and prunes, shows an easier tendency in primary markets. Canned goods are rather dull. Syrups are in demand for the moment and are higher. Payments are not more than up to the average.

COFFEE.

Business in small parcels is all that falls to importers to do these days. Jobbers simply keep stocks up to the requirements of the current demand from retailers, which is on the small side. Prices are firm at quotations. Private advices report a further advance among the probabilities of the Rio market. Here the price is steady at from 17½c. upwards. Java coffee is quoted from 28c. all the way to 36c., the highest figure being for a very fancy grade. Mochas are from 28c. upwards. Padangs are 26c. upwards. Porto Ricos are 22 to 26c.

DRIED FRUITS.

A limited trade in off-stalk Valencia raisins goes on. Good fruit never descends below 5c. these days, but there is old stock still purchasable at 90c. a box. The prices asked at Denia are just now very irregular. All sorts of quotations are made, those for the first half of September differing unusually from these for the second half, and from those for October shipment, the price differing in some cases from one to two shillings for different dates. Stock is now on the way. The price is expected to open at 8c. to retailers for early shipments and 6½ to 7c. for later off stalk fruit. Sultana raisins are now very low, the price having fallen materially from the quotation at which the market opened. The price of new crop prunes promises to be rather stiff, as the shortage in small fruit is very marked this year. Possibly prices lower than those now quoted in the primary market may be seen, but values will almost certainly be high. Spot stock is in limited supply at 5¼c. for U's. Currants are very firm and scarce at 5c. upwards. There is scarcely any stock now remaining in barrels and half barrels. The lateness of shipping from Patras tends to strengthen the hands of holders. Growers' opening prices for figs were higher than last year, but recent private advices from Smyrna report present quotations lower than those of last season. New Tarragona almonds are quoted 10 to 15 per cent. higher than they were a year ago. The crop of Grenoble walnuts is damaged, and an advance in price is expected. The Marbot walnut crop has been good. Lemon peel is firm and scarce on spot at 15 to 16c.

RICE AND SPICES.

The week has not been marked by any special demand for rice. Orders come in in the usual desultory way, but they do not occa-

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

The market has described its weekly orbit with no incidents important enough to constitute a variation from the regular summer course. The week's sales, either of spot or future stock, have made no very great inroad upon supplies. Stocks are not fretted away as holders would like to see them, as the profits of last year's pack have not been large enough to reconcile jobbers to the prospect of carrying over a surplus. Vegetables of the staple kinds are quiet at $1. to $1.05. These prices would probably be somewhat plastic if a buyer wanted a good large order filled, and they would not stand in the way of any magnitude of purchase if the goods were to be below first class in quality. There are brands of tomatoes to be had as low as 90c. First class goods, however, are worth a dollar in ordinary quantities. New peas are coming in more freely. They are now of course in the seasoned condition which entitles them to be handled as merchandise. Fruits are quiet, as the raw material is now cheap and plentiful. The pack this year of berries and cherries is much smaller than that of last year, particularly the pack of cherries, which is very short. Salmon on the spot is scarce and wanted, small lots are the rule in all sales, the meagreness of the supply and the cautious temper of buyers on the eve of the new pack's entry upon the market tending to prevent business in large lots.

To Canning Men.-OUR CYCLONE PULP MACHINE

For making tomato pulp and preparing pumpkin and squash for canning is very well known to all the canners in the United States, and a few of them are in use in Canada. The high tariff has prevented their being used extensively heretofore.

We are now manufacturing these machines at Oakville, Ont., to enable our Canadian friends to obtain them without paying a heavy duty; but we shall make only a few of them unless ordered. Those who contemplate purchasing, should send their orders promptly to insure the saving of duty, as late orders will have to be filled from stock in the United States which will be subject to a 30 per cent duty.

The British Columbia Commercial Journal reports as follows: The run of sockeye fish on the Fraser has continued poor, and cannerymen are much disappointed with the season's outlook. A private report gives the following statement of fishing by day boats for two days and may be taken as a fair average of the fishing for the week: On Thursday 11th, an average of 22 fish to the boat; Thursday night 25 fish Friday 12th, 26 fish; Friday night 17 fish. The same advice says that fishing on the river for the week has averaged from 15 to 30 fish a day per boat. The three canneries on the North Arm of the Fraser have been more fortunate than those on the main river and their packs are said to be about double those on the main river. The average pack per cannery for the past week is said to be about 500 cases, and 2,000 cases each is about all the canneries have succeeded packing to date. Sockeye fishing continues until the 1st Sept. but owing to the extreme shortness of their packs some of the canneries which have sold largely ahead may put up fall fish. The Steveston Enterprise of the 11th inst. says: "The run of salmon is still light. Some of the fishermen are about discouraged, and will quit unless prospects brighten."

The Alert Bay Cannery had 2,000 cases up at last report, and was reported as shut down. It is said, however, that they are seeking for fish at other ports and hope to put up another 1,000 cases.

River's Inlet has been practically a failure. The fish have stopped running, and the two canneries there have only secured about 7,500 cases, while according to agreement they were allowed to put up 11,250 cases each.

The fish are, according to last accounts from the Naas River, running poor and they are not expected to fill.

The canneries on the Skeena have all secured their full pack, according to agreement, of 11,250 cases. The new cannery of the Royal Canadian Packing Company was late in starting but has secured its full limit pack.

The steamer Cariboo Fly arrived at Vancouver Aug. 12 from Claxton, Skeena River, with 2,000 cases of Globe brand salmon from the Royal Canadian Packing Co. for shipment east. The steamers Louis and Boschwitz which sailed for northern cannery ports on Aug. 10, will bring back full cargoes of salmon. The Islander will also bring back a full load of salmon from the Skeena River. The bark Martha Fisher is awaiting the arrival of fish from the north to load for Liverpool. Inquiry is reported for fish both from the Eastern Canadian and English market, for dealers are now realizing that the pack will be very limited. A cannery man reports having refused an order from the east, last week, for a prominent brand of Fraser River salmon, on account of the shortage of the season's pack of which he has already sold all that he can put up.

sion the transfer of much stock. Prices are steady at from 3½c. upwards.

Spices are quiet and, with one or two exceptions, are easy. Sago is still very scarce, but supplies are on the way to sell at 5c. Tapioca is steady at 4½ to 5c.

SUGAR.

On Monday the refiners advanced prices ⅓c. on granulated, and on Tuesday yellows were also put up ⅓c. The jobbers appear to take advantage of the rise and by mutual though unsigned agreement they are growing more conservative in their ideas of what they are in the sugar business for. Hence, they are unwilling to sell granulated below 4¾c., and want 4½c. for small quantities. The wily retailer finds it harder to play one jobber against another than it was a few weeks ago, there is not the same high-strung disregard of profits as there was then, not the same responsiveness to attempts at inciting price-cutting. They are getting to be pretty completely jaded out under the spur of the retail buyers and their own eagerness to capture business. From the signs now to be read, it looks as if sugar prices from this out would have to bear a little tax to defray the expenses of wholesale handling and to add a little if possible to capital. Yellows are firm at 3¾c. upwards, but an increasing quantity of the lowest grade stock is held at 3½c. The sale of sugar has fallen off, which to some extent may be attributable to stiffer backbone in the wholesale trade and to a gap in the requirements of consumers, who have not yet come to their second fruit necessities.

Willet & Gray in their weekly Sugar Statistical say: Total stock in all the principal countries at latest uneven dates, 978,043 tons against 977,753 tons at same uneven dates last year.

Raws—A firmer tendency has prevailed through the week, resulting in an advance of 1-16 for Centrifugals and Muscovados. The most notable feature of the week, however, and the one having the greatest influence on the future, is the somewhat remarkable improvement taking place in the condition of the beet crops of Europe. Mr. Licht's tests of the growing beets this week is cabled as showing an average 12 per cent. of sugar contents, which is so much increase over a few weeks ago, and also so much increase over last year and the year previous, that with similar improvement in other countries the total beet crops may easily exceed last year's by 100,000 tons or more. This is the first indication given of an increased beet crop this season. In further confirmation of the more favorable outlook, the fabricants are disposed to sell October shipment new crop at 13s. per cwt cost and freight, to America, against sales of August shipment old crop at 13s 7½d. c and f. The remainder of the Cuba crop is firmly held, but will undoubtedly be disposed of before new beet root sugars become available.

Refined—The improved tendency of the raw sugar market necessitated an advance in refined, the demand for which is large beyond precedent for immediate consumption especially for granulated. Unlike last year, the entire meltings go strictly into use, but the American Sugar Refining Company are abundantly able to supply any increased demands that may come, and still keep prices so low that there can be no inducement or opportunity for the importation of foreign sugars; also the supply of German granulated is almost nothing during the changes of bounty between old crop and new. A moderate further advance is however, not unlikely, pending the arrival of the new crop raw beet sugars in October. The barrel factory at New Orleans was destroyed by fire, but will be immediately replaced, and in the meantime deliveries will be made in bags without interruption.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.

The call for syrup has undergone quite an awakening and this week's orders cause a considerable movement of stock sent forward to the lumber regions before the busy season on the boats. This demand and the shortage in supplies have benefited prices, which are a quarter of a cent higher at the refineries.

Molasses has not received any attention here this week. The effect of the duty in keeping out low grades has helped the syrup trade. Prices are quite firm at quotations in Prices Current.

TEAS.

The price of medium Japan tea holds firmly at the advance in the primary market, and buyers are unable to obtain concessions on former figures. Brokers have been doing a little more business on the street in consequence of the generally sanguine tone of the selling side. Supplies of Japans to hand yet are light, and medium and low grade teas are badly wanted. The shippers are supposed to be holding back supplies until freights are lower. A vessel is now loading at Yokohama with low grade stock. Hysons are scarce and firm. Congous are quiet. Fine tippy Assams are very scarce.

MARKET NOTES.

[Importers, wholesale merchants and manufacturers should send any items intended for this department so that they may reach the head office not later than Wednesday morning. The editor will always welcome such information.]

Perkins, Ince & Co. still have a few very choice Patras currants in cases.

Davidson & Hay have just received a shipment of new salmon of the "Express" brand.

The stock of canned caplin in the hands of Stewart Munn & Co., Montreal, is all there is to be had this year. This article has met with a remarkably hearty reception, and ungrudging credit is given to THE GROCER for its share in introducing it.

W. T. Harris, Chatham, N. B., dealer in general merchandise, offers 200 cases canned lobsters, also dried cod of finest quality.

Batger & Co's. (London, Eng.) new candied peels are now on the market, and Eby, Blain & Co. are representatives of this house in this city.

The condition of the European beet crop, is reported to be middling, and the ultimate outcome will depend greatly upon the weather this month and next.

Munn's codfish is now arriving, and the quality is exceptionally nice. The "skinless" is something new, and more orders are being booked than can be promptly delivered.

As will be noticed in our Prices Current, Todhunter, Mitchell & Co's. roasted coffees are quoted at slightly higher prices, with one or two exceptions, where the change is to a lower price.

Eby, Blain & Co. have just received a consignment of the "Sportsmen" brand sardines. These are genuine French, not Portuguese goods, packed in pure oil and every tin supplied with the patent key-opener.

The Toronto representatives of J. H. Todd & Co. have been advised by that firm in a communication of the 10th inst. that they will be able to deliver only one-half of their total contracts of Horse Shoe salmon.

A recent issue of the "Kew Balletin" (Eng.) contains some interesting information regarding a new and probably valuable ginger now being grown in Fiji. This ginger plant, it appears, is readily propagated, and yields an abundant crop if the soil be kept good and not too dry. Practical difficulties in preparing the roots for the market have interfered with the cultivation of this particular kind of ginger in many colonies, these difficulties having also been experienced at Fiji. The aid of the Kew authorities has been sought, and there now appears to be good reason for hoping that the Fiji ginger may become an article of commerce.

The new sugar law which came into force in Germany on the 1st instant will, it is said, render the export of "granulated almost impossible." The Strontanite process, which was long since adopted by the largest French refiners, is now also used to a great extent by the best and newest of the German works, and these have formed a syndicate which will place the purchase of raw material in the hands of a single agency, to be located in Magdeburg. This, they hope, will reduce the price of the unrefined. But makers of the latter seem to be in a still worse plight. There is already no home market for the greater part of their products, which have to go for export for almost nil.—Grocers' Chronicle.

Reports from the Skeena River are of a favorable character in regard to the salmon canning industry. The packs will be made as decided upon. The important principle (Continued on page 20.)

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

This market shows no sign of betterment, prices have yielded to the downward influences in flour, but inquiry does not develop into business, and inquiry even is falling off. In feed the position does not change. Prices are unaltered, with the exception that hay is higher.

FLOUR—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.95 to $5; strong bakers', $4.50; white wheat patents, $4.80; straight roller, $4.40; low grades, per bag, $1.25 to $1.50.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.60 to $4.70; Manitoba strong bakers' $4.20 to $4.30; Ontario patents, $3.90 to $4.10; straight roller, $3.65 to $3.70; extra, $3.15 to $3.25; low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.50.

MEAL—Oatmeal is $3.80. Cornmeal is $3.50.

FEED—Bran is $11.50 to $12, shorts $13 $14, mixed feed $22, feeding corn 50., oats 33 to 34c.

HAY—Old baled timothy is firm at $12 on track. New is $9.

STRAW—Is steady at $6.50 to $7.

MONTREAL.

Straight rollers, and strong bakers' meet with fair local demand, other grades are dull and nominal, the market is quiet. Patent spring, $4.70 to $4.85; patent winter, $4.25 to $4.65; straight roller, $4.00 to $4.15; extra, $3.40 to $3.60; superfine, $3.10 to $3.25; fine, $2.70 to $2.90; strong bakers, $4.25 to $4.40.

Oatmeal is quiet, and confined to demand for local wants, values are steady as follows. Granulated, bbls $3.90 to $4; rolled bbls., $3.90 to $4.00; Standard, bbls., $3.85 to $3.95; granulated in bags, $1.90 to $2.00; rolled in bags, $1.90 to $2.00; standard in bags, $1.80 to $1.90.

The market for feed is fairly steady. Bran and shorts are in good local enquiry. Bran per ton, $12.50 to $13.50; shorts per ton, $14.00 to $15.00; mouille per ton, $19.00 to $22.00.

or cold storage has been brought into requisition and not only are the canneries able to preserve the catch in good condition so as to allow the canning hands to catch up after a heavy run without losing so many fish as they often are obliged to do, but it is predicted that frozen salmon by the process adopted may be laid down in the east at any time subsequently—that is within any reasonable time—and the fish remain in a perfectly good condition.—B.C. Correspondent of Commercial.

The numerous repeat orders received for Russian, Dalu Kola and Imperial Breakfast Congou Blends, advertised by W. H. Gillard & Co., of Hamilton, show that the taste for Indian and Ceylon teas is rapidly growing in favor in this market, as it has in England and on the Continent, where first introduced.

The following shows the imports of canned salmon into Great Britain and Ireland each year since 1883. It should be preserved for reference, and merits careful study: In 1883, 561,324 cases; 1884, 471,366; 1885, 357,863; 1886, 364,077; 1887, 316,346; 1888, 368,035; 1889, 621,034; 1890, 708,035; 1891, 669,365.

PETROLEUM.

No new strength has been developed by the petroleum market. Canada refined is still steady at 14 to 14½c.

The Petrolia Advertiser reports: Petrolia crude $1.26 per barrel; Oil Springs crude $1.27 per barrel. The price of crude oil runs in the same old groove, $1.25, or a fraction more or less, whether it would be Petrolia or Oil Springs oil. There is very little to record as to refined, the price being about 9¾c. in bbls. for ordinary grades of illuminating oil, while the better grades run about 3c. per gallon more.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The firmness of the butter market increases. Now and then we have days when the supply threatens to turn the scale, but the market is equal to the task of taking all that comes without any detriment to prices. The cooler weather that has occasionally varied the temperature, particularly in the mornings and evenings has been favorable to the marketing of stock, and country merchants have received and sent forward more than they did a week or a fortnight ago. This applies more particularly to large rolls, which are coming to the front again, now that the season is not altogether favorable to accumulating. The price at which consignments have been freely disposed of is 16c. Selected dairy tubs are worth from 16 to 17½c., and medium tubs are 15 to 16c. This latter description includes store-packed butter. The demand from the east is strong and keeps the market well rid of all classes of home-made butter. Creamery butter plays no part here, but the price is firm at 20 to 21c.

The price of cheese in an ordinary jobbing way is firm at 10 to 10¼c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Are dull at $1.20 to $1.30.

DRIED AND EVAPORATED APPLES—Dried are 4½ to 4¾c., and are attracting little interest. Evaporated are scarcely selling at all, but are quoted at 6½ to 7c.

EGGS—Fresh eggs are inactive at 11 to 11½c., seconds at 9 to 9½c.

HONEY—Small lots of new are 8 to 10c. Sections are very scarce at 12 to 14c.

HOPS—The best of '91 crop are worth not more than 22c.; from that the price shades down to 19c. Old stock is nominal at 13 to 15c.

PROVISIONS.

The market is not in a position to change materially from week to week. It is very firm and steady, with too little stock on hand to make any abatement of firmness an early probability. Prices remain at last week's quotations.

BACON—Long clear is 8c., smoked backs are 11¼ to 12c., bellies 11c., rolls 9 to 9½c.

HAMS—Are steady at 11½c.

LARD—Pure is unchanged at 9½ to 9¾c. for tubs and pails. Compound is steady at 7 to 9c.

BARREL PORK—U. S. heavy mess is $15 to $16, Canadian $16, short cut $16.50 to $17.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef is 3½ to 4½c. in fore and 8 to 9c. in hindquarters, mutton is 7 to 7½c. Lamb 9½ to 10½c., mutton 6 to 7½c., veal 7 to 8c.

VEGETABLES.

Potatoes are $1 to $1.25 per barrel, tomatoes 50c. a basket, watermelons $25 to $30 per hundred, musk melons $3.50 to $4.50 per barrel, celery 30 to 50c. per doz., onions (Canadian) $1.10 to $1.25 per bushel, sweet potatoes $4 to $4.50 per barrel.

GREEN FRUIT.

Oranges are exceedingly scarce, the stock of nearly every house being close to exhaustion. Sarrentos are about all the oranges now to be had, and are $7 per case. New Jamaicas will be here in about a week. Lemons are uncommonly scarce and firm. Maoris are $9.50 to $10, Verdellis are $8 to $9, Messinas are $8.50 to $9. The last are nearly done and are extremely wasty. Bananas are scarce, owing to the strike at Buffalo, which interferes with all shipments of fruit from Boston, New York and Philadelphia. Only one car came in a week, whereas 15 cars are the usual complement. The price is firm at $1.75 to $2. Apples are plentiful at $1.50 to $2. Canadian peaches 75c. to $1, plums 90c. to $1.25, pears are 50 to 60c., for Bells 65 to 75c. for Tysons, $1 to $1.25 per basket and $8 per barrel for Bartlett's.

FISH.

The fish market is very firm at 7c. for whitefish and salmon trout, $2 to $2.50 for lake herring, 17c. for B. C. salmon. Stock can hardly be got into store fast enough.

SALT.

A good steady demand is experienced, and movement in carloads is quite free at unchanged quotations, as given in Prices Current.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW.

HIDES—Are 4½c., for No. 1 green cows', 5c. for cured.

SKINS—Lambskins and Pelts are uniform at 50c. Calfskins 5 to 7c.

WOOL—Fleeces are 17c. for clothing grades and 19 to 20c. for combing. Pulled is 22c. for super, 25 to 26c. for extra super.

TALLOW—Is 2c., rendered is bought at 5c., and sold at 5¼ to 5½c.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, Aug. 25, 1892.

The tone of the grocery trade is a little better in showing than last week. The lines that were slow for some time seem to have started and prospects for future business look promising. Sugar has met with some fair sales during the week both from refiners and wholesalers, both of which say trade has been fair. Molasses has gone up some since our last, this is owing to the loss of a cargo part of which had been sold. Syrups are looking brighter; the feature of this market is our fruit sales, which are largely attended both by local buyers and out of town ones. Apples have moved in large quantities, and although receipts have been large the stock is well kept down. In groceries the trade say their men are doing a nice paying trade, and that all lines are moving as free as can be expected. The French houses speak in the same way regarding business. Payments are good.

SUGARS.

There is a good demand for sugars of all grades, and refiners report good sales. All the refineries here keep their yellows pretty well sold up. Granulated is now selling steadily at 4¼c., quite a few lots having changed hands at that figure. The wholesale trade also report a good seasonable trade, this is no doubt owing to the quantity of preserves that are being put for private use. Our local retailer reports good demand from the consumers and the whole tone of the sugar market is decidedly better. The cutting that was done some time ago has practically stopped. One or two houses are said to shade prices somewhat, but not to any great extent. We quote granulated 4½ to 4 9/16c.; yellows, low grade 3½ to 3¾c., and yellows bright 3¾ to 4¼c.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups have been favored with a better demand, and we have to report sales in both Canadian and American. The prices are on the 35c. basis. Dealers here think there will be a good fall trade done in this product. Molasses during the week has shown a firmer tendency and prices have advanced. Owing to the loss of the St. Joseph's cargo, 500 puncheons of which had been sold, the importer had to go into the market to fill his contracts. Prices are now quoted at 32 to 33c.

TEAS.

Business in the Japan tea market has been very quiet this week and is likely to remain so till the opening of next month, when teas will be coming in in larger quantities. Holders here still talk firm and say that when the trade opens it will be good, as stocks in wholesale hands are low. Advices from Japan still present a firm appearance, and it is not thought likely that prices will weaken any. In blacks the trade has only been fair, but prospects for future trade is promising.

COFFEES.

We have to report a fair movement in coffees under firm values. The local trade during the week has been good, and quite a few lots have changed hands. We quote as follows—Rios 18 to 20c.; Java, 23 to 25c.:

MONTREAL MARKETS—Continued.

Mocha, 24 to 25c.; Jamaica, 19 to 21c.; and Maracaibo, 22½ to 23c.; Santos, 17½ to 19c.

RICE.

The rice trade during the week has been fair, and we have to note a few good sales. The wholesale trade also report a good steady demand. We quote as follows:—Standard $4 to $4.10, Japan $4.50 to $5, Patnas $4.50 to $5, and Carolinas $7 to $8 per hundred pounds.

NUTS.

Nuts have a fair jobbing trade in all lines. Grenobles are scarce and the demand good. Stocks at this point are so small that there has been no business in them. Ivicas are also much sought after, but the stocks are small and prices have been advanced. The following are the quotations:—Almonds Tarragona 14 to 15c.; almonds, Ivica, 14 to 15c.; almonds, common, 10 to 11c.; almonds, hard-shell, 7 to 8c.; walnuts, Grenoble, new 12 to 14c.; walnuts, French 10 to 10½c.; cocoanuts per 100 $3.75 to $4.00; filberts 9 to 10c. pecans 16 to 17c.; peanuts 7 to 10c.

DRIED FRUIT.

The dried fruit market is quiet and stocks are so small that they will not allow of any business being done till the new stocks arrive. When the new pack arrives dealers here are expecting to do a good trade. Valencia raisins are very scarce in this market, and mostly every one wants them. One firm here has received a lot of Sultanas from London. The quality is good and the fruit meet with good call. We quote: Currants, provincials, 4¼c. to 4¾c. in bbls; do. 4½ to 4¾c. in half bbls; do. 4¾c. in cases; currants, Patras, 5c. in bbls; do. 5¼c. in bbls; do. 5½c. in cases. Raisins, Valencias, 4¼c., Sultanas 7½c. prime stock.

GREEN FRUIT.

The green fruit trade has been busy during the week. Messrs. Vipond, McBride & Co. had a sale of California fruit yesterday, and Messrs. J. R. Clogg & Co. have one to-day. We are now having three weekly sales in this market. This has a good effect on the market, and the prices brought, although high, are thought about right for the quality of the fruit. Oranges are all sold out, and what few that are left are in the retailers hands. Lemons are now selling at a higher price. Raspberries are all cleaned out, and blackberries are about done. Banannas are selling for the same figure. The demand for this fruit is good, and receipts fair, quite a few coming via Boston as well as by steamer. We quote as follows: Lemons $6 to $6.50; California peaches $1.70 to $2.00 per box; Southern peaches $3 to $4; Western peaches 75c. to $1; California pears $3 to $3.50; plums $2.50 to $3 per crate; banannas $1 to $1.50 per bunch; Southern Bartlett pears $3 to $4 per keg; black berries 13 to 14c.

APPLES.

The apple receipts have been so large during the week that prices have fallen off. The trade doing in this line during the week has been large and a large quantity has been turned over. The auction sale, yesterday, a few round lots were sold at per prices below. The crop reports from all parts of the country are good, and the fruit now arriving is fine. We quote: Regular $1.75 to $2.50 per barrel, and in baskets 30 to 45c., evaporated 6 to 6½c., dried 4 to 4½c. per lb., and evaporated peaches 12 to 13c. per tin.

HONEY.

Honey is dull and concessions will have to be made to clear off the dark stock which is held here. Good bright stock is in fair demand. We quote strained bright 7 to 8½c., dark 6 to 7c., comb bright 8½ to 10c., dark 7 to 9c.

HOPS.

Hops are in the same condition as noted from time to time, the feeling among growers being too strong owing to the reports of some of our papers. Locally business is quiet.

FISH.

Fresh fish has its usual call, all lines moving fairly at the following prices: Salmon 14 to 15c., haddock 4½c., whitefish and trout 6 to 7c.

We quote as follows:—Smoked Yarmouth bloaters, per 60 box, $1.00 to $1.10; St. John's bloaters, per 100 box, 80c. to $1.00; boneless cod, large boxes, 6 to 7c.; do. small boxes 7 to 8c.; finnan haddies 7 to 8c.

We quote No. 1 herring, per brl., $4.50 to $4.60; lake trout, per half brl., $4.00 to $4.25; sea trout, per bbl., $8.25 to $8.75; codfish, green, No. 1, per bbl. $4.75 to $5.00; do. No. 2, per bbl., $4.25 to $4.50; codfish, dried, per bbl., $4.25 to $4.50; salmon, B.C., per bbl., $13 to $13.50; do. Nfld., No. 1, per tee, $22.50 to $23; do. do., No. 2, per tee, $21 to $21.50; do. do., No. 3, per tee, $20 to $20.50.

EGGS.

The price of eggs continues about the same—11 to 12c. There is a fair local demand, but the receipts are too heavy and the quality in some instances inferior, many held eggs being sent in. The export business has stopped for the time being. The ruling price on the other side is 5s. 7d. to 6s. per 100, which will not leave a margin for Canadians. The British salesmen are again complaining of the bad condition of the arrivals; but in many instances these complaints are evidently made to offset the poor markets.

PROVISIONS.

The local provision market is without change. Pork and smoked meats are moving out slowly at quotations, but the market is on the whole very dull and quiet. We quote Canadian short cut, per brl. $16.75 to $17.50; mess pork, western, per brl. $16.00 to $16.50; short cut, western, per brl. $00.00 to $00.00; hams, city cured, per lb. 11c. to 11¼c; lard, Canadian, in pails 8¼ to 8½c; bacon, per lb. 9½ to 10¼c; lard, com. refined, per lb. 7 to 7¼c.

CHEESE AND BUTTER.

The cheese market is very quiet locally. At the boat this morning between 3,000 and 4,000 boxes were offered and disposed of at 9¼ to 9½c., a few small lots making the half. Advices from the other side are of a very encouraging character. While the market is quiet it holds very steady.

Butter is quiet and dull. Creamery is firm at 21 to 22c., and some business is reported at the inside for export. Western is moving out fairly well at 15½ to 16½c. Townships is wanted for the local trade, 17 to 19c. being about the idea. Receivers complain that the Townships butter is coming in with too much salt, and say that if the makers would only understand that their product is wanted for immediate use and not for keeping purposes, they would get better prices.

GRAIN.

Peas and oats are moving in moderate quantities at steady prices, wheat is dull and nominal.

DON'TS FOR CLERKS.

Don't lose your temper. No matter how provoking or ill-tempered your customers are, treat them politely. They will appreciate it, even though they may not appear to. Don't be afraid to show goods, nor act as though you did not wish to do it. Customers will always go where they receive the most careful attention.

Don't misrepresent goods. If you can recommend goods truthfully, do so; if not, do not urge them on your customer. They never forget it, and will never trust you again.

Don't slight the poor customer merely to wait on the rich one. The poor person's money is as good as any and they feel neglect more keenly than a rich person. Wait on each in their turn.

Don't be saucy. It's neither witty nor polite. Don't be afraid to smile. Everyone likes a pleasant face. Don't under any circumstances comment unfavorably on one customer to another.

Don't tell your employer's business to anyone.

Don't neglect your work when your employer is away. See that everything is as well taken care of and customers waited on as well as though he were in the store. Don't make promises, such as procuring certain goods, etc., unless you are sure you can fulfill them, and, having made them, do not neglect them. Don't attempt to wait on a customer and talk with a friend at the same time. Give your whole attention to your customer. You cannot show goods properly while thinking of something else.

Don't make an old lady or gentleman wait while you attend to others, and don't lose patience with them because they are slow. You would not like to have others treat your father or mother rudely because they are old.

Don't neglect a child. The mother may have no one else to do her shopping for her, and though some children are trying to one's patience, a true lady or gentleman will treat them kindly and courteously.

Don't talk too much. Don't attempt to tell your customer what they should buy. They know better than you what they require. But if they ask your opinion give it truthfully and courteously.

In conclusion, I would say, do know your stock thoroughly. Understand it so you can show it to its best advantage.

Do keep it clean! A person, especially a girl, who cannot or will not dust properly is not fit to take care of stock.

Do dress neatly, but not showy.

Do keep your hands and finger nails clean.

PEDLARS' LICENSES IN HALIFAX.

An Ordinance respecting Hawkers, Petty Chapmen or Peddlars and persons doing business within the City of Halifax, but who are not Assessed therein, passed by City Council 8th June, 1892.

The City Council of the City of Halifax hereby enacts as follows :

1st. Every Hawker, Petty Chapman or Peddlar, and all persons carrying on other petty trades within the City of Halifax, and persons who carry on business therein but are not assessed on real or personal property within said city, and all persons who go from place to place, or to other men's houses on foot within said city, or with any animal bearing or drawing any goods, wares or merchandise for sale, or in or with any boat, vessel or other craft, or otherwise carrying goods, wares or merchandise for sale within said city, shall on and after the passing of this Ordinance take out and procure a license from the City of Halifax, and every person so licensed shall be subject to the provisions of this Ordinance.

2nd. The foregoing section shall not apply to persons bringing to market in said city milk, vegetables, or other produce, the product of any farm owned or occupied by the persons bringing to or offering such produce for sale in the city, or shall prevent such persons or their servants from selling or offering such produce for sale ; or shall prevent fishermen bringing to market in said city and selling or offering for sale fish which they have themselves caught.

3rd. Every person mentioned in the first section of this ordinance who carries on his business or calling with any waggon, cart or other vehicle, shall, on and after receiving his license and before selling his wares, have affixed in a conspicuous place on the outside of said vehicle or painted thereon the words "Licensed Vendor" and bearing their Licensed number, and shall keep the same so affixed or painted during the period he shall hold his license.

4th. All other persons mentioned in said first section, and not referred to in the next preceding section, shall on and after receiving his license (and before selling his wares) wear in a conspicuous place upon the outside of his outer garment a suitable metal badge, said badge to be approved of and supplied by the City Council, upon which shall show the number of his license, and shall continue so to wear said badge while prosecuting their business.

5th. No person shall allow or permit any person to use his badge, number, waggon, cart, vehicle or boat, other than his servant or some member of his family, and then only for the licenses exclusive benefit.

6th. No person mentioned in the first section of this ordinance shall cry his wares to the disturbance of the peace and comfort of the inhabitants of the city.

7th. Every license issued under this ordinance shall expire at twelve o'clock midnight on the thirtieth day of April next after the issue thereof, and all licenses may be renewed annually from the first day of May in each year, and expire on the thirtieth day of April following, but may be revoked at any time by resolution of the City Council.

8th. The following are the sums hereby fixed for license to be granted under this ordinance.

Each pedlar, hawker, or petty chapman	$ 8 00
Each pedlar, hawker, or petty chapman, with handcart or wheelbarrow	12 00
Each pedlar or hawker with one horse and vehicle	20 00
And for every additional horse used be the same licensee under his license	10 00
Coal hawkers with liberty to truck as if they had a license therefor, but only to sell coal	3 00
Licensed truckmen, to be at liberty to sell coal only, and in addition to do trucking	—
Each person selling ice—one horse and wagon	10 00
For each additional horse	10 00
For retailing goods, wares or merchandise from any vessel	25 00
For retailing goods, wares or merchandise from any open boat, canoe or any other craft	10 00

Any person violating any of the provisions of this ordinance, or any part thereof, shall forfeit and pay, at the discretion of the magistrate, a penalty not exceeding the sum of fifty dollars for each offence ; in default of immediate payment he shall be committed to the city prison for a period not exceeding forty days.

ABOUT REFRIGERATION.

Our advice to everyone who has anything to do with refrigeration is not to use any sawdust as a filler in the walls of refrigerating chambers and chill rooms if it can be avoided. Sawdust will, sooner or later, get wet and musty; in this condition it will be more in the nature of a sponge than in that of a nonconductor; it will, by attracting moisture and lying between the walls in a wet state, be a constant menace to the boards and the insulating paper, no matter how good the quality of the latter may be. It will ultimately destroy the latter, thus giving an entrance to the warm air and an outlet for the cold.

Then our friends wonder why their boxes do not keep cool, and put the blame on the ice machine or upon the shoulders of the iceman, while both are in most cases not guilty. We therefore say: Do not use sawdust. It has another disadvantage. Where it does remain dry, it is a desirable abode for rats and mice, which animals are most undesirable in warehouses and cold storage rooms, and which feel nowhere more at home than inside of a wall which is comfortably filled with sawdust.

It is a matter of record that some of our largest cold storage warehouses in the country had to tear down their insulated walls and could not begin to work again until after they had taken out the sawdust.—National Provisioner.

We acknowledge with thanks the invitation of Mr. Benjamin Johnson, the manager of the New England Grocer, to a convention of trade press editors to be held at Chicago on the 6th, prox., and should be glad to be able to attend.

The Vancouver Clerks' Association held a very successful moonlight excursion. The steamer Skidegate and two scows were chartered, and they went on a trip round the Inlet. Dancing was indulged in an orchestra having been engaged, and a good time was spent.

The Montreal bankers have already made a move in the way of lessening what they call the American currency evil in Canada. At the next meeting of the Dominion Bankers' Association a motion will be made proposing a discount of from 1½ to 2 per cent. There is about four millions of the stuff at present in the country.

Old Sol will now have a chance to overlay with a few of his late-harvest tints the pearly complexion of W. H. Seyler, for W. H. is off to his native county on a holiday. As he listens to the drowsy tinklings lull the distant folds, his mind will probably travel back to Front Street, and hear in fancy the music of the alarm bells on the new electric cars. We hope, and most of our readers will second us, that he will seize the opportunity to enjoy himself.

The employees of the Toronto Biscuit and Confectionery Company held their first annual outing on Saturday per steamer Eurydice to Wilson N. Y. About 300 were present. Mr. W. T. R. Preston presented the prizes won in the games to the successful contestants on the return trip, and in his usual happy style congratulated the company the committee and the victors on their happy and pleasant trip.

Protection to home industries, in the true sense of the term, may be credited to at least one local commission house. In any event, we learn that Mr. Fred Delafield, with Delafield, McGovern & Co., was among other members of troop A of the N. G. S. N. Y. who quickly responded to the call from headquarters for duty at Buffalo. That he had the best wishes of his employers and associates, some of whom have seen service, was plain.—N. Y. Commercial Bulletin.

A. J. Mair, representing The Helvetia Milk Condensing Co., Highland, Ill., is in the city in the interests of that company. He has made arrangements with Wright & Copp to handle his company's goods, and act as their agents here. Mr. Mair will be in the city for a few days and will call on the trade and post them as to the merits of Evaporated Cream. He is a jolly good natured American, who will easily make friends with our Canadian merchants, and no doubt book some nice orders for his company.

L. G. Harrington, grocer, of Antigonish, N.S., committed suicide on Saturday afternoon. Alexander McDonald, a customer, called to see Harrington on business between 12 and 1 o'clock, and waited in vain for him to come to the shop. He went up stairs to ascertain if he was there, and entered a room over the store used as a place of practice for the Antigonish band. McDonald was horrified to find Mr. Harrington dead, with an old-fashioned revolver by his side. He had shot himself through the heart. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicide. The deceased was a brother of Customs Collector Harrington, of Halifax. Financial troubles are supposed to have produced temporary insanity.

THE MOST PERFECT FOR COLLARS, CUFFS AND SHIRTS.

WHITE SALMON TO BE UTILISED.

Many people are probably not aware of the fact that there are a very large number salmon caught annually, but which are of no use for canning. Only the red salmon are canned, all the white and pink being rejected, simply on account of their color, and prejudice that they are not so good as the red fish, although really their taste is similar. It is impossible to estimate the number that are annually thrown away, and wasted. Until this year they had not been utilised in any way but this Summer J. Bergoff of this City, has erected an establishment on the Skeena River near Port Essington for the curing and salting of the fish rejected by the canners. Mr. Bergoff is no novice in the fish business, and has been engaged in that line in both England and the United States, and was in fact as he says born in the fish business, his ancestors before him having been engaged in that line for the last two hundred years.

During the process of preparing the fish they have to be frozen as well as salted, the reason being that they are thus only very mildly salted, and taste almost like fresh salmon. So much so that some gentlemen who tested the fish would scarcely believe that it was not fresh fish, so mildly are they salted. Salmon preserved in this manner is much to be preferred to the canned fish, and Mr. Bergoff predicts that in a few years this method of curing fish will entirely supersede the present system of canning, as many people are very much prejudiced against canned fish.

Mr. Bergoff is now using the white and pink varieties of salmon. It is a curious fact that the white specimens of the fish are salted first and then frozen, and the pink frozen first and then salted. The reason for this is to take the color out of the pink fish so that all may be white. The white salmon look very much like a fish that is caught in the Caspian Sea, and is largely eaten in Spain, the only difference being the head and tail, which are taken off before the fish are cured. Mr. Bergoff expects to have his market for the fish principally in Spain, and when packed in this manner the fish taste even better than those caught in the Caspian Sea. The fish when cured are first wrapped in paper and then packed in wooden boxes lined with tin, the boxes being hermetically sealed, and thus they can be kept good for a length of time. About one thousand pounds of salmon are packed in each box.

The refrigerating plant was erected by the Vulcan Iron Works, of San Francisco, and has proved a great success, as a much lower temperature than the contract called for was obtained, and it is capable of freezing fish solid in six hours. As an illustration of what can be accomplished by artificial refrigeration, when scientifically applied, a gentleman who was examining the plant while in operation had his ears frost bitten through remaining too long in the freezing room, and it was some days before he recovered from the effects. Although operations were not commenced until rather late this year, Mr. Bergoff expects to have a very fair pack. He went up to the Skeena on the last trip of the Islander, and then they had about twenty cases of fish put up, and were packing them at the rate of about a car load a day. Next season, however, he intends to enter into the business on an extended scale, and has purchased 160 acres of land near the Balmoral cannery on the Skeena River. A contract for the erection of the necessary buildings has been let, and the contract for the plant and machinery will be let shortly. This new factory will be of the capacity of 5,000 tons, so that if the run of fish is large they will be prepared to pack a large number. The machinery will be run with either steam or water power, and the advantage of this site over Port Essington is that there is plenty of fresh water. Mr. Bergoff will also erect a general store there. This season he has been purchasing the fish from the various canneries, but next season he will himself apply for twenty licenses. He has not yet decided whether he will also erect a cannery for putting up the red salmon or whether he will sell them to the other canneries.

Vancouver, on account of her numerous facilities, will probably be the chief shipping point, so that this new industry will bring more business here. Mr. Bergoff is also entering into negotiations for erecting a similar factory on the Fraser River. Next season he intends to introduce his fish into all the markets, and if it is well received this method of fish curing will become one of the leading industries in the province.—Vancouver News-Advertiser.

WHERE THE JOKE COMES IN.

"Simon, my boy, you are now going to set up in business on your own account, and I wish to give you a bit of practical advice." "Well, father?" "When customers don't see what they want, teach them to want what they see."—Herald of Commerce.

"Is your father at home?" inquired the man of the little girl who admitted him. "Is your name Bill?" "Some people call me so," he replied. "Then he is not at home, for I heard him tell John if any bills come to say he is not at home."

"Do you suppose," asked a Sunday school teacher, "that the prodigal son greeted his father loudly and joyfully?" "Reckon not," said the bright boy. "His voice must 'a' be'n kinder husky."—Smith & Gray's Monthly.

Goslin—"In the papah heah is an account of a fellow who killed his wife and committed suicide, doncher know?" Sappy—"Which did he do fawst, aw?" Goslin—"The papah doesn't say. Vewy stupid, Aw'm sure."—Brooklyn Life.

Flossie is 6 years old. "Mainma," she asked one day, "if I get married will I have a husband like pa?" "Yes," replied the mother, with an amused smile. "And if I don't get married will I have to be an old maid like Aunt Jane?" "Yes." "Mamma"—after a pause—"it's a tough world for us women, ain't it?" Eclectic.

SHE WEARIED HIM.

The grocer's new boy threw his delivery basket down in the corner with an injured air and remarked that the woman who had just moved into No. 37, around the corner, was a regular crank.

"How do you mean?" asked the grocer.

"First thing she asked me," said the boy "was whether we had any nice fresh eggs. They must be very, very fresh, she said, because she wanted 'em to put in a cake."

"I told her eggs was doubtful this hot weather, but we had some very, very fresh egg plants, and how would they do?"

"She said they wouldn't do at all; and then she asked me if we had any corn that was as green as I was, and the ears as well developed as mine."

"I said, Yes'm."

"Well," she says, "I want some for dinner, so bring half a dozen as soon as you can."

"As soon as we can?" says I. "Do you want it canned?"

"She said she did not want it canned. Then she began to ask about water-melons. Did we have some that was ripe? I told her 'Yes'm.'"

"Was they on ice?"

"No'm, they was on the sidewalk."

"Would we put half of one on ice and bring it around at six o'clock?"

"We would."

"Would we have the seeds taken out?"

"With pleasure."

"All right. Did we keep vichy water in siphons?"

"Yes'm."

"Was that on ice?"

"No. But I told her we'd put half a siphon on ice and bring it around at six o'clock with the bubbles taken out, if she'd say the word."

"Then she said she guessed everything we had around here was nice and fresh, but there was such a thing as being too fresh, and she believed she'd try the other store, so I needn't bother. Yes, sir, that woman's a crank."

"Eddie" said the grocery man, as he slowly rolled the white paper around a pound of cheese, "my nephew will be here next week from Germany, and I am going to give him your job. Meanwhile I'll try to get along without any little boy."

"You'll have to," said Eddie, "cause I'm going to leave."—Selected.

FOR GOD.

Far from the busy haunts of men,
I wandered one bright Summer's eve
Through a sequestered sunny glen
From toil at last I had reprieve.

The night was calm, the sky was fair,
The trees were clad in richest green;
The weary birds lay nestled there,
Beneath the moonbeams golden sheen.

I wandered 'neath the shady trees,
All rapt in meditation sweet,
On how I could my neighbor please,
And live prepared my God to meet.

Thus as I thought, and thought again,
The puzzle seemed to harder grow,
For some were proud and some were vain,
And some were fast and some too slow.

I knew how I could please my God,
Just by obeying His command;
But how to please men on the road,
'Tis hard for me to understand.

Some men do think that this is right,
And some men think that that is wrong:
The weak man sometimes gains the fight,
Upsetting schemes made by the strong.

And so these things all onward go,
'Tis hard to tell which man to please.
Some men they want the Winter snow,
And some men want the Summer breeze.

And some men only want the earth,
All fenced with barbed wire around;
Forgetting after their last breath,
All they can have is one small mound.

I thought of all their earthly care
That grow like tares around their feet;
Of all the sorrow and despair,
That worldly men so hate to meet.

Thus thinking, I made up my mind
That I should like to please my God;
For thus, and no way else, you'll find,
Sweet rest, and peace upon the road.

OUR NEW Fruit and Preserve Jar

(PATENTED JULY, 1891.)

These cuts represent our new Fruit and Preserve Jars which we are now introducing to the Canadian Trade, and in doing so, desire to draw your attention to the advantages they possess over those made of glass and other material.

The Jars are manufactured from a mixture of English and Pennsylvania clays, making a stronger and better article than can be produced from any other combination.

We use only a pure Bristol Stoneware Glaze, which is free from Lead or other Metallic substances readily attacked by all acids. We guarantee the body to be thoroughly vitrified and absolutely acid proof.

These Jars will be found superior to all other articles in use for the preservation of Fruits, etc. Being non-transparent, the action of light cannot fade the color or ferment fruits kept in them, as is the case where glass is used, and being a non-conductor of heat, preserves are kept at a more uniform temperature than in either glass or tin, and will be free from the unpleasant metallic taste so frequently noticed where tin is used.

They are made in various sizes and are for sale by all Crochery and Grocery Dealers in Canada.

Autumn Issue
THE CANADIAN GROCER,
September 20th.

CIRCULATION, 12,000.

PARTICULAR attention is directed to the Autumn Number of THE CANADIAN GROCER for 1892, which will be issued about September 20th. The trade throughout Canada are now so well aware of the success of such previous issues of this journal that we need only state that the coming number will far outshine the others in many ways.

The Colored Cover is artistically designed by one of the best artists in Canada, and will be printed in several colors.

The Circulation of 12,000 means that every grocer and general merchant in the Dominion will receive a copy gratis. The trade will therefore expect to find in its columns the announcements of the houses they deal with. It will penetrate to many places, no doubt, never visited by your traveller, as well as to every centre of commerce in Canada whence orders for goods are likely to be forthcoming.

We would therefore urge upon advertisers to use this the only medium to reach probable buyers and people who want your goods. This can be done at a great saving to yourself. To insure good position copy must be in at once.

Some people find it very hard to brook opposition in any relation. In matters of personal difference they cannot suffer it, in questions considerably removed from private feeling they are intolerant of it, as in politics. Even in sport such men are disagreeable rivals, they bear a grudge to the man that beats them, and can hardly forgive the persistent efforts to undo them, of even the man they beat. In business their competition is bitter, and envy, hatred and malice are provoked by the man they regard as their particular rival for the people's custom. It is said to be the temper of such people that unfits them for a competitive business, but it is really the lack of training. Put such a man early enough in life right in the thick and throng of competition, and let him have a rough experience of buffeting them, and he will come out of it a man of some liberality of views. It needs the discipline of strong-willed opposition to tame some men into the necessary toleration of other people's claims. Where the opportunities for such a schooling are lacking, as in small country places, men of the natural disposition described usually hang on to their narrowness and make business disagreeable to themselves and competitors. Woe betide the traveller of the house they deal with, if he drops into their rival's store and tries to sell any goods there. And their rival, though he may be a large-tempered man, has probably become so incensed with their spiteful ways of opposing him, that he would have strong objections to his wholesalers selling to them. Thus it is that in some places travellers must confine themselves strictly to one merchant. If they try to get two they lose the one they had. Sometimes a house gets an offer of an account from a trader its traveller dare not call upon for fear of estranging a customer in the same place. Of course, in such a case the better man from the wholesaler's standpoint is the one that is chosen. Usually the account is accepted if the offer of it does not squarely propose the dropping of the other. The maintenance of both, when unfriendly feelings exist between the competitors, is usually too much for the diplomacy of travellers. This incompatibility of temper is to be deplored, as it is a source of loss as well as of bad feeling. The loss is in the form of energy. All misdirected, unnecessary feeling is energy wasted. The tranquil, placid man who is going to retain his composure in the most exciting circumstances of competition, is the one who will make the most of the bout. Sometimes this feeling is quite as mistaken as it is useless. There is no end of defect in human character and business methods, but no man will cure a tittle of it by bitterness or ill-natured words. What can't be cured must be endured. Nor can any amount of local organization make fair competitors of some people. It can establish a corporate feeling that deters a man from some of the more open courses of bad business, but it cannot take out of a man what is inherent in him. Its value in leading men to mix together more freely and enabling them to understand each other better is probably its best feature, as it thereby is a means of removing misconceptions and setting people in the right light towards each other.

* * *

Traders should aim to make a clean job of their collecting this fall. Last fall money came very slowly to the hands of retailers, renewals had to be made to a very general extent with wholesalers and interest had to be paid. In the meantime current business went on on a credit basis and profits were kept down by the briskness of continued competition, and the carrying of accounts embarrassed many a perfectly solvent man. The art of collecting is not well studied by the majority of retailers. The desire to avoid offence and the fear of alienating custom really paralyze the will of the retailer and tend to make him a failure as a collector. He asks for payment too much like a man who was suing for a favor and allows the debtors to remain too much in possession of the idea that they have the advantage. The peculiar touchiness which some people love to make a formidable display of, when they are dunned, is an amusing phenomenon. They aim to stand a creditor off by the awe which their spurious pride is supposed to command. It is an outrage upon them to hint that they are too slow with their money, or to be urgent in requesting prompt payment. People must get rid of this sensitiveness if they want to trade as credit customers, and it would not be a bad idea of merchants to warn them that such a feeling will not be given much consideration when accounts are ready for collection. Debtors have too vague an idea of the position of the storekeeper in his relation to his own debts or needs for money. That vagueness it should be the object of the trader to remove. He should give fair warning that he wants the money not more than fifteen days after all bills are issued, and should take occasion to point out to individuals how their failure to pay him then would cause him grave inconvenience, as he has not this one or that one to wait upon but a large number of people whose accounts he carries. To take notes and put them through the local bank is sometimes only to avert the evil day, as too often those notes have to be taken up by the merchant and carried again for months. An experienced collector in every town would be a great convenience to business men. He ought to be well skilled in the work of collecting, tenacious, and should be a man of sterling honesty. If such a man could give good security for all money collected by him, it would pay him to open an office and take the accounts of all the local business men and follow up the debtors for payment. The place of the collector is clearly defined and the collector is wanted. Retailers could wash their hands of an ugly job if they had such a man to entrust their collecting to. Such an agent would be a useful man on account of the knowledge he would possess as to each individual's standing, as he would have accounts from probably many persons to collect from the same debtor. The collector would therefore be able to prepare yearly a little list on the basis of the commercial and financial agencies, in which he would indicate the credit ratings of all local consumers. Of course his rating would chiefly take note of honesty, promptness in payment, thrift, recognition of a debt and such matters as facilitate or hinder the recovery of money due on local debts.

There are classes of outlay for which ready money has to be paid, and for these expenses it will be kept, while the trader will have to give credit, unless there are considerations which incline consumers to do otherwise. If credit is freely given by the trader, it makes little difference how plentiful money is with some people: they will buy no fewer of the necessities on credit, and will buy more of the luxuries and enjoyments for cash. But if, when money is thus flush with them, they have an alternative of buying their necessities at much cheaper prices at stores where only a cash business is done, they will use more of their money to buy necessities. Even when there is an apparent scarcity of money in the hands of consumers, a new cash store with very low prices will have a remarkably magnetic effect in uncovering and adding to the visible supply monetary resources that were not suspected to be in the locality. What the people hold against possible emergencies of pleasure, necessity, and other contingencies is commonly a larger fund than would be supposed. It is enough to give them a choice, very often, of doing their business on a cash or credit basis. But as the margin of retailers' profit is so slender on most lines and tends to vanish completely on some lines, there is little chance for a cash dealer to interfere now-a-days between credit merchants and their customers. It is only when stock has been bought at an exceptionally advantageous price that a cash trader can afford to do so much better than a credit trader can. The tendency of this state of things however, is towards an effect the opposite of what it appears to be, and that is to make all trade approximate to a cash basis. The narrowness of margin, while it makes almost impossible the allowance of further advantage for cash, tends to make also impossible the continuance of long credits, and to make merchants draw more closely the lines of time and selection within which they give credit. Closer profits mean closer limits to credit, and the process of contraction threatens to go on till profits almost disappear and credit completely disappears.

The retailer who gives a note and allows it to mature without making any sign that he will not be able to meet it is culpably negligent. A very large number of traders are guilty of this inexcusable conduct. The note has been discounted at the bank, and if the maker does not pay it when due the wholesaler must or else allow it to go to protest. When the wholesaler is not advised that the retailer cannot have the money ready for payment when it is due, he is liable to be lured into a sense of false security, out of which he is suddenly awakened by the bank's messenger at the very last moment of banking hours. And this thing happens often enough for several notes to come down on a wholesaler upon the same day. He is not prepared for such a call, not having been warned that it will be made, and is naturally exasperated at the stupid indifference of the man he trusted, who does not seem to care what embarrassments he brings on his creditor. It would be an easy matter and only a very simple act of considerateness for the maker of the note to inform his creditor that he could not meet it when it would become due, and to send this notice some days before the completion of maturity. The many people who allow their notes to come back on the wholesalers surely are not all aware of the consequences of their very unbusiness-like neglect. Nor does it do themselves any good. The wholesalers who have been treated once in this way are very likely to take note of the men who so left them in the lurch, for it is a habit of business men to jot down all that they observe in the character of those they have dealings with. And what they jot down in such moods is sure to be a black mark against the unwise retailer. When he wants a favor he will probably be denied it. The note would have been taken up and held for him, and no great fuss would have been made about it if he had asked that it should be. A candid man will not sneak off and leave somebody else to take up his note; if he cannot take it up himself he will manfully say so in time and will ask his wholesaler to do him that favor. These neglected notes are usually not allowed to go to protest unless they are payable at some outside bank, at which bank they are made payable for the maker's own convenience. If he does not take them up there, they are usually allowed to go to protest. Some houses are in the habit of advising their customers when their paper is due, but even in these cases an answer is not always vouchsafed when the trader is unready. A considerable amount of the money of those who pay promptly has to go to meet the notes of those who do not, but wholesalers would like to know beforehand whose notes will have to be taken up.

The claims made for cash discount when the time is exceeded in which such discounts are allowed tax the patience of wholesalers very often to the point of exhaustion. When a man knows that payment for goods is regarded as cash if made within thirty days of date of purchase he ought to make it a point to proffer the money inside of that time. He has no right to expect the discount in thirty-five or in forty days. A wholesaler has a right to take full payment on all bills which are held until after the time for discount is expired. That habit would make some temporizers a little more exact. There are traders who presume on the strength of their account to force a creditor into giving them full discount days after they are entitled to it. It is not always those who find it hard to raise the money that come straggling in in this way, but those who have it and choose to use it otherwise in the meantime are guilty of the same delay. This gives an undue advantage to so-called cash customers over those who are really cash customers and over credit customers, and wholesalers should be obdurate in insisting upon payment being made within the limited time before discount will be allowed. Sharpness is the only way to make some people fair in their dealings.

* * *

A source of petty losses that aggregate to a considerable amount in a year's trade is the exchange on 'unaccepted' checks payable at outside banks. This exchange is one-quarter of one per cent. for most banks outside the city, and the minimum charge is 25 cents. Hardly any one who sends a check in payment of an obligation is ignorant that the cashing of it will cost the creditor from 25 cents upwards, and yet that way of remitting is very largely in favor, and is resorted to quite freely for small amounts, so that the commission for exchanging is a material deduction from the profit on the transaction for which the money is paid. Some houses request payment to be made in currency, when the amount is small. That rule should be generally observed, and either cash or post office order should be forwarded for small sums. The trader has been benefited by the credit and should bear the charge of transmitting the money.

THE YOUNG MAN IN TRADE.

The great difficulty in the way of some people's doing a thing well is that they try too hard to do it. They have a high ideal, and they feel that extraordinary means are necessary for the realizing of it. Common means are in their view altogether inadequate. They consequently rack their brains and delve into their imaginations to get a hold of some original ideas, and they consequently succeed very often in being merely odd. If they put a little more faith in such humble resources as common every-day observation, plain hard work, economy of resources to every given end, the study of human nature, the thorough mastery of details, self-command, and the like, they would establish a suitable groundwork upon which to rear their ideal, and would not need to stir the very depths of their being to achieve the end at once. We must proceed from the simple to the complex. Many a bright boy at school has been well-nigh distracted, sometimes physically prostrated, by the earnestness of his efforts to do difficult things, and the reason is that he keeps his mind too much on the thing to be done. He does not take it away often enough to the contemplation of means in themselves simple and easily handled. Deductions in Euclid often worry the best young intellects in this way. They address their minds to the thing to be done; they do not see the possibility of doing so hard a thing; they flounder and toil in vain for an hour or more, and become more perplexed the longer they work. They forget to give a moment's thought to a few elementary ideas that they have been taught, about points, straight lines, and angles, and when they are brought to think of these they are ashamed that they stayed so long at the wrong end of the proposition. The same fault is to be found with many men in business, particularly young men; they wrestle too long and too hard with the end before they make any application of certain well-understood constructive means.

Such a way of looking at a difficulty always exaggerates it. That is the trouble with sensational effects in business. Too many young men believe they are called upon to make some signal exhibition of brilliancy when they open up against an older man. They suppose they must be the vindicators as well as the exponents of new ideas, and new ideas being rather a catchy than a clear expression, they scarcely know in what way they are to assert the superiority of their training, and are driven to devices after great spectacular effect in stock display and advertising. They open up too often as if they were inaugurating a new era in trade. They undertake to invent devices, and frequently those devices look forced, far-fetched or bizarre. It does not require a genius to do business successfully. It does require a firm believer in the everlasting principles of hard work, patience, care, self-government, and self-improvement. These are old-fashioned and unpretentious, but they are fundamental, and not unbecoming as a basis to the most glittering success. Let the young man in business begin with them. There is no need to cast about for some new showy way of making an entry into business.

There is a foolish idea abroad among some shallow people in business that it pays to give away goods for the purpose of planting the seeds of a large custom, and the more theatrical the manner in which the giving away is done the more effective it will be as an advertisement. It is only some people who know the way to make things come out right by such a method. The majority who take to it are mere imitators of some clever trader who perhaps had some genuine administrative ability, who knew what he was doing and was not groping his way to an end but going very directly toward it. Lavishness appears to be understood as the modern successor of frugality. One man begins carefully, there is no great amount of show about anything he works with, his store is a plain building that does not call for an enormous rent, his horse and wagon are plain, his methods are simple. Another begins with a great amount of eclat, everything is bright and new and expensive.

He reasons that this pays because of the extra attention it draws to him. It pays only if he can afford it. Even then it does not pay so well as the name for sterling honesty, and sound business principle.

In advertising, the precocity of some beginners is very ridiculous. They have their ideas upon a model entirely out of proportion to their business, and in an entirely different environment. They spend money in getting up some little notion that is to be odd and useful in every household. Not only is this expected to do wonders in keeping the name of the dealer prominent in the very domestic life of the people, but its character as a gift is supposed to attach trade through the gratitude of receivers. No matter how pretty the little pin-cushion, paper-cutter, perpetual calendar, paper-weight or whatever else it may be, it must be borne in mind that everybody gets it and that at once kills its value as a distinguished mark of favor. Let the advertising be done with good common sense and a live perception of what will interest buyers. The hard-working, little-by-little, wide-awake, common-sense way of advertising business brings and holds custom.

THE PATRONS AFTER THREE YEARS' TRIAL.

The Patrons of Industry are still hanging on to existence. Their tenure is a slender one, consisting only in the strength of unredeemed promises. All their objects are still objects, none of them have been turned into achievements. Hence their platform contains no more of the elements of a title than it ever did, but remains a mortgage for the full value of the order, and no cause can be shown why foreclosure should be delayed. Members are beginning to falter in their faith. The fruit of their hopes is disappointment. They have not been able to tear down the framework of our commercial system and to erect another in accordance with their own elementary ideas. Their failure either to destroy or construct must be mortifying to them. If they could have been for a brief while, the plaything of a political party or the tool of a self-seeking man, their entire futility might have been a little more historically picturesque. But they have done nothing to dazzle, and therefore deceive anybody, and thus extend their membership. Neither are there any tender or particularly hallowed associations clinging about their lodges which are likely to make members cling to them more fondly. There is nothing to soften the glaring baldness of the fact that they are a failure.

The commercial principles they endeavored to establish and incorporate in practice is a remarkable one. It is that the buyer shall fix the price. That is a purely artificial principle. The natural one is that the price shall be the result of agreement between buyer and seller. In any compromise between the two, the price is sure to be closer to the buyer's ideas than to the seller's, for competition operates to the advantage of the former. But the Patrons would do away with competition among sellers and substitute for it combination among buyers. Under the action of competition among traders, prices have sunk remarkably in recent years, despite the fact that during the same time combination has been greatly extended among manufacturers. The difficulty of selling at a remunerative price reacted upon the trader's buying ideas and gave a wonderful stimulus to them. The economy of buying, before there were enough stores to give the public an easy choice between merchants, was like an unused organ in a man's physiology; it had ceased, except in the most mechanical and sluggish way, to perform its proper function, and business was mechanical. But when competition began to charge the wires of trade, brisker movement was enforced, the lethargy of the old order became impossible, and the lost art of buying had to be found. Competition has done wonders to awaken the buying wits of traders. Consequently it is chiefly on their ability as buyers that traders now rely. The buying price they can determine much more than they can the selling price, for competition has pretty well defined that before the goods are in stock, and traders must buy to match that prospective price. In fact the advantage is on the side of the buyer as against the seller in nearly all stages of an article's transfer from the very first hands to the very last, and the trader has to make up as a buyer for what he must give away as a seller.

This highly developed sensitiveness to the suitability of prices is what makes the trader most useful to the consumer. Consumers have brought it into existence by playing one trader against another, and it is their main engine for the further depression of prices. The Patrons of Industry would sweep away all that. They would establish a system of constant profits and automatic salesmen. Their storekeepers are not going to exercise their ingenuity or beat the market to get bargains, for $12\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on low prices is not so good a return as $12\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on high prices. They will have no object for continuing on the still hunt for prices, since they are supposed to be surrounded by a phalanx of trusty customers pledged to buy only from them. Competition no longer exists to make them anxious and they lapse into ignoble ease. Their $12\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. will not pay them as well as the profits of many another trader whose business faculties are kept untried by his freedom and his alertness to get goods at prices that he can meet competition with. To the store of such a man, too many of the Patrons will now and then steal away and smuggle thence under the cover of night or deception many of his low priced goods. The Patrons make sluggards of their merchants and thus relax the pressure on prices.

The idea is plainly wrong in theory, and practice is demonstrating its absurdity.

The more natural a system is the more will it answer the purpose for which it came into existence. Because it has faults, it is not to be swept away and replaced by something that as a conception is scientific and symmetrical. The artificial lacks vitality. It can never be grafted upon a living body. Politicians of the philosophical sort have tried to make constitutions for nations to live under, and while such instruments were theoretically faultless and admirable, in practice they were useless. They lacked the breath of life. They differed from the article wanted as a thing that is made by the hands of man differs from a thing that grows. Practical men would look round to find customs, institutions, organs, and forms that had come into existence naturally, and would arrange their system by the use of these. The trading system of the Patrons is artificial, unworkable and entirely unfitted to the purpose for which it was adopted—the getting of cheap goods to consumers.

BAZAR COMPETITION.

The agitation which was begun some time ago by the small tradesmen in Paris to secure a law to impose a special tax on the big retail "universals" of that city, has resulted in a Parliamentary report which proposes a poll tax for the large stores of 2 francs a year for each clerk or assistant employed when the number is less than one hundred, and 10 francs more per capita for every additional hundred employed. The scheme also contemplates an increase of the tax corresponding to the increase of the rents paid by the universals, above a certain sum. The idea is to put the small dealers more on an equality with the big fellows, but it appears that the plan proposed does not meet with favor on either side. The fact is, the small tradesmen of Paris are confronted by an insurmountable obstacle, so far as the greater advantages which the universals offer the public in the shape of low prices and extensive assortments are concerned, and the sooner they recognize the fact the better for them, for the sooner will they be able to apply if not a remedy, at least a preventative against an entire loss of business. Bazar stores cut a wide swath in this country, as in France and in England, yet the small merchants manage to exist. They usually give a better service than the universals, greater courtesy to customers and a more prompt delivery of goods, while the system of careful credit-giving is a powerful weapon of which they avail themselves. Bazar competition has forced them to purchase more carefully and closely, hence the difference in the selling prices of the two classes of establishments is growing narrower every year.

In the retail grocery trade of this country the bazar store competition has been felt severely as yet only in certain classes of proprietary brands of grocers' specialties which are used by the bazars as "leaders," and cut to an extremely low notch. Some of the manufacturers whose products are so maltreated have gone to great pains to keep their brands out of the bazars, except such establishments as will agree to sell at regular rates, but, as we have previously stated, their vigilance is sometimes defeated by the treason of retail grocers, who allow themselves to be used as stool pigeons by the bazars. The proprietors of the universals approach some retailer with an offer of, say, $5.00 a box for 100 or 200 boxes of a specialty, the regular wholesale price of which is, say, $4.50 per box, and the profit to the retailer is so liberal that he is induced to order the goods from his jobber and then turn them over to the universal store. Of course if the bazar managers could get the goods direct or through a jobber they would not be forced to tempt the retail dealers to pull their chestnuts out of the fire, but the fact that some retailers succumb to the temptation proves how difficult it is for manufacturers to protect the grocery trade, however willing and even anxious they may be to do so.

A few months ago the proprietors of a well known bazar of this city gave a certain person a certain check for $900, made payable to bearer, for the purpose of procuring a quantity of a certain grocers' specialty from the jobbing trade, which previously had refused to sell the bazar direct. Instead of carrying out the agreement the emissary of the bazar store people ran away with the proceeds of the check and no attempts have been made to discover his whereabouts and prosecute him. The goods of course were to have been used as a leader at prices beyond the power of grocers to compete with, and we do not imagine that any of our retail friends will be sorry to hear of the embezzlement. That the bazar people were ashamed of the transaction is proven by their silence when their representative decamped with his booty.

A form of competition somewhat similar to that which the city retailers suffer from the bazars, is reported to exist in some parts of the West. What are called "supply companies," which purchase at prices which the interior jobbers buy at, operate in the rural districts, selling to consumers at quotations a little under regular retail rates, and numbers of country merchants are losers thereby. One of the questions which the proposed retail merchants' convention is to discuss at Chicago is the competition of the supply companies and how best to meet it. We suppose co-operative buying will be suggested as a solution of the problem, and we believe there are possibilities in that direction.—Merchants' Review.

GOOD AND BAD MONEY.

The methods employed by the government experts to detect counterfeit money are simple as they are infallible, says the New York World. Gently poisoning a bright silver dollar on the tip of the forefinger and with another dollar in the other hand a government expert in the treasury department the other day gave the first coin a sharp click, which caused it to make a clear, silvery, ringing sound as long drawn out and true to the final tone as a tuning fork. Then exchanging the genuine dollar on his finger for a spurious one he repeated the experiment. This time the sound that was heard was given by the striking coin and died at once.

It was necessary for the detector of good money to explain that the first experiment was made with two good coins and the second with a good one and a bad one.

The latter was a composition of lead and type metal and a very poor piece of counterfeit it was, too. He said that another reliable way to tell was to hold the doubtful coin up to the light, and if the reeding or milling on the edge was even and clean cut the coin would be a good one; if rough and irregular it is almost sure to be bad.

The reason for this is that the government money is stamped from the cold metal, while the counterfeit money is moulded while hot.

Still another test, but one less used by experts is to drop a little acid on the plated coin, and the eagle where the plating wears the most will be quickly eaten away. The acid used for gold coin is a mixture of nitric acid, $6\frac{1}{2}$ drachms, muriatic acid 15 drops and 5 drachms of water; for silver plated coin, 24 grains of nitrate of silver and 30 drops of nitric acid, with an ounce of water are used. One drop is enough to test either metal. Should the coin be heavily plated it is well to scrape it a bit before using the acid.

Silver is much more largely counterfeited than gold, for the reason that it is hard to obtain a cheap metal that will compare at all in weight with gold. Platinum used to be used, but its cost has so greatly increased in the past few years that it is almost as expensive as gold.

Speaking of the counterfeiting of paper money the expert said that the government had abandoned the use of blue silk thread in the paper certificates, and is now using a plain clear paper, similar to that in use prior to 1869. It is much more difficult for an expert to detect counterfeit bills than it is to tell good coin from bad. There are many reasons for this, chief of which is the greater variety of paper certificates.

In all there are 36 portraits and 44 vignettes, each of which is so finely engraved and so exactly wrought that the smallest turn of an eyelash or curl of a moustache can be made in a counterfeit and none but an expert could tell the difference. He must know every line and curve and dot on the face and back of every bill, and know it readily. To do this they have to devote years of careful study with the microscope and pass examinations before the old experts in the treasury department. The safest test for popular use is to note the shade of the inks used in numbering the certificates. These inks have never been successfully counterfeited. For red a bright marmine is used, and for blue a clear indigo.

In the counterfeited notes the shades are brick red and blue black, both of which turn dark when rubbed with the finger.

A test that is very little known and yet is quite reliable was explained by the expert:

"The check letter which the United States notes and certificates have in the corners diagonally opposite to the note number are made in this way: The notes are printed four on one sheet, lettered A, B, C, D from the top. Of course as the notes are numbered consecutively, notes 1, 5, 9, 13, etc., would be A, and 2, 6, 10, 14, etc., B, and so on. So to get the proper check letter for a note the rule is to divide by 4; if 1 is left over the check letter should be A; if 2, it should be B; if 3, C, and if there is no remainder it will of course be D. The counterfeiters use but one plate, and print all their notes alike, so that three out of every four are sure to be wrong. Of course this is not an infallible rule but it is often a great help in picking out counterfeiters.

A ruse that is frequently resorted to by the crooks is to soak their bad money in muddy water and thus give it an old and time-worn appearance. Some have been known to carry them in their shoes to take the stiffness and polish out of them. By the ways and means of a clever counterfeiter are as multitudinous as the bills he turns out.

SELLING BY WEIGHT.

One of the peculiarities which the new comer to California find it most difficult to accustom himself to, is the practice of selling all manner of farm products by weight. It takes time to become reconciled to the innovation, but when once thoroughly grasped, the perfect justice of the method becomes so apparent that one wonders why it should not long since have been adopted all over the country. The frugal housewife, who, at the East, buys potatoes, apples and what not by the quart, "small measure," peck and bushel and nine times out of ten finds herself swindled by short measure and dishonest arrangement of the articles bought so as to make the greatest display, fully appreciates the difference to her purse that is made by the weight system. There are only two exceptions in all the wide range of household necessities which are not sold by the pound here. These are butter and eggs. That the ancient system of selling butter by the roll without regard to weight should still be maintained here seems strange, when one recollects that weights are the methods relied on for the sale of this article at the East. The opportunity that the roll system affords for fraud is seen by the fact that it is the exception and not the rule for a roll of butter to contain the two pounds that it nominally does. Nevertheless the producer sells by the pound to the dealer, while the dealer demands pound prices for rolls that sometimes have as little as a pound and a half, and are always two or three ounces short—Fruit Trade of California.

BRIGGS AT THE COUNTRY HOTEL.

C. Algernon Briggs, who has been on the road, Since last May, is fully aware That social distinction's all stacked in one load,

For his frail young shoulders to bear, This worries him some, you can see by his brow,

Where breaking's began before fall, By that grim old spectre that haunts the plow, And furrows the forehead of all.

C. Algernon's line is imported cigars.

As one would infer from the swell And the boisterous fuss he makes in the bus —When Briggs strikes the country hotel.

The porter is "Cholly"; he calls the clerk "Joe,"

Says: "How are they comin' now, Jim?" While rolling his name on the register so That even the boarders know him.

"You'll give me the bridal room, eh? Joey, dear,

And Cholly, you take up my case— And say, Cholly, bring me a bottle of beer From old Billy Whittington's place."

At supper it's "Sadie, go bring me a steak." Or "get me an egg, won't you, Nell?"

Or "a lemon, please, Blanche," for he's running the ranch —Is Briggs at the country hotel.

At dinner the guests read the bill of fare through

Save Briggs, who says softly to Dot: Just bring me my dinner, now Dottie, won't you?"

And Briggs gets the best of the lot, He's free with his money and runs a great bluff:

"Oh, well, I'll charge this to the house," But when he's in town he's quiet enough, And funds it back meek as a mouse.

For there the gay Algernon sleeps in a flat, And feeds at a chophouse as well.

Though he isn't deuce high when at home, he can fly

When he stops at the country hotel.

If I were an artist and wanted the face Of Cæsar returning to Rome,

Or of Alexander in search of a place Unconquered on all the earth's dome.

Or were I a sculptor and anxious to mold Proud Cato, with haughty lip curled;

Or hew out a figure of Atlas of old,

Who reeled 'neath the weight of a world— I'd not copy from the conventional form

That all antiquarians sell;

For the whole classic lot I'd take a snap shot At Briggs in the country hotel.

THE RETAILER'S INFLUENCE IN THE TEA TRADE.

EDITOR OF THE CANADIAN GROCER.

SIR,—I notice that my letter of July 30th, to your interesting journal, called forth from the Secretary of the Retail Grocers' Association an answer, which I believe will not fail in doing some good. I may perhaps be allowed to suggest to Mr. Corrie that his Association should go further into the matter concerning the tea christened "The Mermaid" than just trying it, noting it, and then shelving it. I think the Association might use their influence to have the sale of this wretched stuff stopped, because it is utterly unfit for consumption, being unsound and injurious for use. It is also the duty and privilege of such an organization to protect its own interests as well as the public, for it cannot be successfully argued that by allowing such rubbish to be exposed for sale, but that it is most hurtful to the whole retail trade. I quite agree with much of what Mr. Corrie says, but I cannot confirm the statement that retail grocers are compelled to keep packet tea, because those who have profited by experience, and having some knowledge of human frailty and of the tricks used in trade know that some people have a mania for wanting to try anything and everything that is advertised, and they will ask for it just for sheer gratification of pleasing their morbid desire which prompts them to act foolishly, and then they turn and abuse you, because they were permitted to get fooled. This is everyday experience not only in groceries, but in all branches of trade. This is particularly demonstrated in the using and selling of packet tea, where both consumer and retailer get deceived. Let me here instance a few facts; Some wholesalers in introducing their packet teas, in order to get the retailer to take them employ various means for doing this, such as promising that if the grocer will handle them, they will not sell to anyone else in the same town, or within a certain radius, and that they will advertise the name in so many papers, making the grocer their special agent etc. This they do in some cases, in others they do not, for I have been told by several grocers that after having had the tea in stock a few days the man opposite, or a little way up the street, has the same tea, and in some cases the place near by is a bakery or fruit store, and so these gifted agents of tea packers break faith with the grocers whom they have so cunningly deceived. Another scheme is, taking a certain number of names (of course a limited number) of residents in the immediate neighborhood, promising to send them samples and a circular stating that Mr. So and So is keeping their special brands of tea and recommending its use, etc. Another, the most degrading to my mind, is employing special agents, chiefly women, to go round asking the grocers for their special brand of tea, which they of course haven't got; they, poor innocents, instead of questioning more closely the cause, take the bait, and must get the tea. Others, who are a little dubious about the utility of buying it, are persuaded to take it on approbation, in such case the special "lady agents" are brought into play again, and are instructed where to go and purchase a few pounds of these special brands, at different times, and in some cases no doubt they induce their friends and acquaintances to buy it, lest their occupation be gone too soon, it being an easy one, and I am sure they ought to be well remembered for their special services. These and many other tricks are resorted to, for the introduction of packet tea. They are very old ones, certainly, yet they still have a charm, for quite a few retail grocers have been caught in the act, but it will prove like all such tricks, that when brought to light and exposed, the novelty has gone and it dies out. It is said of the late P. T. Barnum, that he humbugged the public and they liked it, but he himself said that he always gave his patrons good value for their money, and much better value than any other competitor in his line. If this be true, then wherein was Barnum's success? Surely not in humbugging the people, but in the value he gave them for their money. In like manner, if this can be said of packet tea, then it will be a success, and the means used for its sale is all right; but any grocer who is a judge of quality and value of tea knows that in the majority of cases packet tea is very poor value, and not to be compared to what can be, and is being sold in bulk. Why, it was only yesterday a grocer said to me while in conversation on this subject, taking up a package of tea from his counter marked on it 60 cents a pound, said he hoped my 40 cent tea gave better satisfaction than this stuff. I meekly said to him. Then why do you keep it? "Oh," said he, "I was fooled like the rest, I suppose." We live, sir, in a gullible age, and people's minds are being trained by deception; how natural it is, then, for some of them to get deceived, by permitting themselves to be ruled and governed by quacks who consider not the quality of the article they offer for sale, but depend solely upon their mode of advertising, which is so "stylishly and beautifully gotten up, and such a magnificent show frame and picture thrown in," all to catch the eye and tickle the fancy of morbid curiosity; and yet some grocers condemn (rightly, too) the means used by the retail tea quacks to catch their customers, and say of them they are an injury to the trade, because they deceive the public by giving away presents, and poor value for the money. And yet these very men, who complain of such trickery in the trade, are found encouraging exactly the same thing in their own business, only in another form, and with this difference, the consumer gets nothing for use or to look at from them, except a lot of advertising matter placarded all over the grocer's shop windows and store, through bye-lanes and alleys, empty store windows, street car tracks and side fences, where too per cent or more is lost in this way, and added to the cost of the article consumed. Thus are the consumers made the "lambs," the grocers the "sheep," the proprietors of packet teas are the "foxes and wolves," and the printer's ink gets the lion's share of the whole business, and so we find many of the retail grocers caring little or nothing about knowing something of the business in which they are engaged, but are found to be willing mediums to dispense to the public anything and everything, so long as there is a possibility of it being sold without much trouble to them. But what will be the outcome of all this. The results are already being felt by some, in having to look at a lot of dead stock of packet tea on their shelves and counters, ticketed at 10 cents a packet less than marked price, and then it won't move, they being afraid to recommend it as at first, because it has proven so disastrous to them, in having lost many of their best customers' trade for tea. The question is asked, Why is it thus? I answer, because they point and encourage their customers to invest 60 or 70 cents for something which in value is only worth perhaps half what is paid for it, and it doesn't suit their taste, and the grocer does not offer nor care to exchange it, as he would his bulk tea, nor can he give or get any satisfaction why it doesn't suit, either from his customers or from the agent that sells it. In this way the public are getting disgusted with packet tea, and will return to better things, and the grocers who are truthful and the most reliable, possessing a knowledge of their business, will be the most successful and the best respected, having the satisfaction of doing right and being honest in their endeavor to make money in pleasing the public.

Respectfully yours,

STEPHEN HUSTWIT.

DRY GOODS.

The past week has seen a revival of the house trade, and as a consequence trade has seemed to be much more lively. The apathy so apparent in the hot weather has vanished, and a briskness has taken its place. This business has been heightened this week by the openings held by the millinery firms. Sample hats are shown in great variety and have been picked up very fast. Ribbons have been exhibited in gala show, and the demand for wide ribbons has been much stronger than usual. These are to be much used in high loops, which are to be the proper thing on fall hats. The shapes of the hats are numerous and varied, running from a small toque to the widest brimmed and most profusely feather-and-ribbon trimmed hat. Hat shapes and cloaks have received a fair share of the attention. This briskness in the millinery trade has reacted on the dry goods houses and made their trade more active. Large numbers of buyers are present from British Columbia, The Territories, and Manitoba. Many of these will be in the city all week, and wait over for a glimpse of the Exhibition. The wholesale houses are showing their best stock at present, and all the departments are supposed to be complete in all lines. The leading novelties for the season's trade are now being pushed with all the vigor that can be infused into the work.

Letter orders have increased in number during the past week and also in the size of the orders. The fall goods are mostly in the hands of the retailers, and promising lines are being repeated, or missing links filled up.

The feeling among the trade still continues very promising, and prospects continue good. So far trade with the retailers has been very fair, and is on the increase.

NOTES.

McMaster & Co. have a very complete stock at present, including all the leading novelties of the trade. They show a full assortment of the latest effects in dress goods, including Canadian tweed effects, cheviots, silverchene cloth, popolines, henriettas, navy serges, chevrons, snow flakes, silk knop, and box cloths. They are showing a large variety of skirting in wool, moire, and silk stripes. Their stock of staple ribbons is large and extremely well assorted, and includes all the new millinery effects of the season. Their silk department is well filled with colored silks in sourahs, pongees, satins, and bengalines, and also a full assortment of blacks.

Gordon, McKay & Co. are showing a large range of a new novelty in dress trimming, which is known as a loop ornament. It consists of a large button and a small connected by a loop of cord. It is still further ornamental by the aid of fancy loops around the larger button. The special variety described is known as the Augusta. Another variety is the Victoria, which has but one button and is more ornamental than the Augusta. This is the latest thing in dress trimmings and is shown in a full range of colorings. Their stock of all kinds of fancy and tinsel gimps, featherines, silk moss ruchings, and other dress trimmings, is very large, complete, and well assorted. At present, they are showing a full range of quilts in honey comb, crochet, satin, and marseilles in 9, 10, 11 and 12 quarter.

Messrs. Alexander & Anderson are at present showing a very complete line of dress goods, consisting of new effects in dress tweeds, homespun and Harris suitings, and a full assortment of French and German dress goods, robes, etc. This department is a special feature of this house and worthy of the attention of visiting merchants. In cloakings they are showing all the latest novelties in mantle cloths, ulsterings, curls, sealettes, etc. Their haberdashery, hosiery, and small wares departments are replete with new and seasonable goods. Their staple department is well-stocked with Canadian and imported staples, which they are offering at close prices.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence are showing a nice range of dress and cloak loops. The cloak loops are quite unique and novel, comprising sealette double loops and a large variety of single cord loops with a fur ending. These fur endings are shown in several varieties of fur goods. They have just received a new stock of shot silk, and are offering special value in henrietta serges.

W. R. Brock & Co. are showing extraordinary value in men's wool socks. Their Dime, Polar, Beats All, and Cracker are very good lines and worthy of inspection. In women's and children's wool hosiery, their H. N. plain, and W. G. ribbed, are well known to the trade, while their Buy-it, and Try-it are not easily equalled in value. In cashmere hosiery their lines to retail at the popular prices 25 and 50c. are good value on account of their extra good quality. Cardigan jackets are a special line in this department. Style, weight and finish being carefully studied at all times. Their leading varieties are Jumbo, Dandy, Ripper, Corker and Paralyzer.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are showing a large range of millinery ribbons for the fall trade in all colors, widths, and quantities. Their stock of trimmings has been renewed, and they are showing some very nice patterns in gimps, jets and feather edgings. In buttons they are showing some new lines. One line of celluloid buttons with a metal rim is very pretty, as is also another line of metal buttons called the onyx cut. In veilings the proper thing at present is a spot veiling with a bordered edge and about 14 inches in width. These are shown in all colors by this firm.

John Macdonald & Co. are showing a full range of staples at present, with an especially well assorted stock of all kinds of comforters. They are showing a very large range of health under-vests in a large variety of manufacture. These goods are shown in ladies, misses and childrens' and in all sizes. Their stock contains the celebrated Hygiene Brand. One special feature at present is a very large range of art silks in the latest novelties and designs. In all lines of silks they are showing a well-assorted and immense stock. Every line has been selected with the care which is characteristic of this house.

The Port & Winch Company have taken offices in the Dupont block on Front street, next to the corner of McKensie street, New Westminster, B.C. They will occupy the whole of that large store in the centre of the south end of the building for their fish exporting business.

For some time it has been the custom of the landing waiters at the Windsor ferry to allow merchants to take small parcels through upon their leaving the invoices at the customs office, to be paid some other time. This has caused so much inconvenience that an order has been issued doing away with such a practice.

Wolfenden & Annandale, dry goods and grocery merchants, New Westminster, B.C., have taken the corner store of the Dupont block, on Columbia and McKenzie streets, and are ready for business in their new premises. The firm have already moved in a quantity of their merchandise and are only waiting for the fixtures to be finished.

W. Boulter, President of the Canadian Packers' Association, was in Toronto, this week, after a month's business trip through the Northwest and British Columbia. Business out there has been very satisfactory, and he made large sales. In Victoria and Vancouver the small-pox has done much harm to trade, but the quarantine has been raised from American ports and they now look for a revival. He visited the various fish canning establishments. The catch on the Skeena River was good, but on the Fraser they did not pack nearly as many as was anticipated.

The Virden board of trade is agitating for a special train to convey members of Manitoba and territorial boards of trade and their families to the Toronto exhibition. The promoters believe that the occasion can be turned to good account by advertising the country, their idea being that each board of trade should send with their delegation products of the district which they represent.

The season has been exceptionally good for the northern canneries, and the canners benefitted by the smallpox scare, as the Indians are afraid to come to Victoria, and, therefore, are spending their money at home. It is reported that the Upper Skeena River Indians, having heard of the smallpox, have determined to prevent with force if necessary the landing of all vessels from the South.

Perfumed tea, that leaves a lasting fragrance in the mouth, and is as good cold as hot, moreover tea that can be used to flavour custards and ices, and the aroma of which is further developed by "a drop of the cratur," must indeed be a delectable beverage for picnic parties. This article named "Faham Tea," is a product obtained from the flat dried leaves of a small species of orchid (Angræcum fragrans) with white flowers, which grows as a parasite hanging from trees in the forests of Mauritius and Reunion. Although the plant in question has been long known to botanists and the beverage used locally, its introduction to Paris as an article of commerce is quite recent. Samples of this "orchid tea," and of cigars made of the leaves, which emit a vanilla-like aroma, according to the Bulletin are now deposited in the Kew Museum, and the plant can be seen growing in the Kew orchid-house.

A meeting of the grocers and butchers of London, Ont., took place the other evening in Foresters' Hall. The object of the meeting was to hear and discuss the system of the Retail Merchants' Protective Association. Mr. Ferguson was voted to the chair, and his opening remarks dealt chiefly with the difficulty a merchant meets in trying to keep his books clean of bad debts. And at his request Mr. Harrie, representing the R.M.P.A., was called upon to explain the system. At the conclusion of his address J. L. Fitzgerald gave his experience as a member of the R.M.P.A. and showed a clean gain to himself of over $160 up to date. Jno. Lawson, James Dobbin and others expressed their views. It was the unanimous opinion that the system should be universal; that it is to the interest of all trades to join. This method of increasing the membership in London is a good one, as it gives all merchants a chance to discuss matters affecting their particular line. The cities and towns are being systematically worked, and local branches formed where ten or more members can be secured. A vote of thanks was passed to the chairman and Mr. Harrie, and the meeting adjourned.

The twelfth edition of the "Hand-Book to the Canadian Tariff" has just been issued by the author, C. W. Irwin. The tariff itself is edited with all the knowledge that a specialist alone can possess, of the difficulties in the way of ready reference to the official form in which it is published. Nothing could be simpler than Mr. Irwin's arrangement of the items. Of more importance, however, to men accustomed to the clumsiness of the official form, is the mass of tariff information embodied in this book. It gives the latest decisions and interpretations of the Customs Department, and contains a thoroughly revised and full list of exchange tables that are of great convenience to the importing merchant. It contains as well a list of Canadian ports and outports. It is the sort of book that a business man cannot well afford to do without. It is mailed free on receipt of 40c. sent to C. W. Irwin, custom house broker, 40 Yonge St., Toronto. The trade price is 25c.

CUT PRICES AT RETAIL.

How many retailers have been disappointed when they come to "weigh the pig," as the old saying is, at the result of their season's business to find little or no money? In most instances, owing to competition in cutting the prices of staples or leading articles unnecessarily.

The slashing or cutting usually begins on some well-known article, while another competitor quietly meets this price or cuts under, and at once starts a run on another article. A third dealer meets both and starts a run on another, and so it goes until many of the best selling staples are disposed of at a sacrifice and the profits passed to the consumer. When the time for annual stock-taking arrives and profit and loss accounts are closed they find that a year's hard labor has gone on the wrong side of the ledger through unmercantile cuts too often made by dealers whose cupidity overreaches judgment and common sense. A fair profit is necessary to success; sharp practices always hurt. It is not competition; it is simply opposition which destroys the life of trade.—Ex.

TORONTO, Sept. 1, 1892.
GROCERIES.

Trade is still under the spell of the drowsy season and makes headway slowly if at all. No rush of orders has been the portion of any house. The movement of trade is far from hurried, but is no slower than it always is in summer. August has passed away without any great additions being made to profits on sugar, though in the last fortnight a saner course was followed by the wholesalers, who made a serious attempt to bring back sugar to a basis that would pay the cost of handling it. The volume of trade done in August may not have been less than that done in the same month of last year, but a comparison of mere appearances would be strongly in favor of August a year ago. As to profits, last month must fall behind its usual record, as in no former year were prices more in favor of buyers than they have been this summer. It is improbable that August was up to the average in all points. In payments, it probably was in respect to promptness, but not in respect to amount, as the buying this year was generally more a matter of small orders than it was in the summer of '91. Sugar retains the slight advantage in wholesale position it reached a week ago, currants are firm and scarce, teas continue to be firm, and the general position of incoming goods, as fruits, nuts, canned goods, etc., remains practically what it was reported last week.

COFFEES.

The steady firmness of Rio coffee rests upon an invariable state of things in the primary market, where quotations are still made upon the strength of sellers' advantage. Stocks on spot are sufficient for all requirements. Prices run from 17½c. to 21c. Fine Rios would be worth even more, but there is a scarcity of such stock. Dealers' orders do not furnish material for much business. Java is quiet at from 28 to 36c., Mochas at from 28c. upwards, Padangs from 26c., Porto Ricos 22 to 26c.

DRIED FRUITS.

The trade in off-stalk Valencia raisins is limited but continuous, and holders' ideas as to the value of good fruit do not weaken. The price at which the lowest grade of '91 crop is going is 5c. There is two-year old stock to be had at 90c. a box, and there is no dearth of it either, but it is not getting the attention it got early in the spring. New fruit will be to hand this month. The price for first arrivals will be about 7 to 8c. to retailers. The position at Denia cannot be a very assured one, owing to the hesitating and irregular way in which quotations are made for late shipments. Sultana raisins of the new crop are still low and give no promise of being higher in the near future. No abatement of the stiffness of new prunes is reported, the shortage of small fruit being still on the side of firm prices. Spot stock quotes here from 5½c. upwards. Currants are increasing in firmness from 5c. upwards, but cases are about the only class of packages there are, and cases are 6 to 6½c. No shipping was allowed from Patras before Monday, so that supplies not reaching here till next month, will come on a bare market. All dried fruits are rather a minor part of the orders that now come to hand from the retailers.

RICE AND SPICES.

Rice is in fair demand. B rice is unchanged at 3½ to 4c., Japan at 5 to 5½c.

Spices are quiet and unchanged, the quotations in Prices Current remaining those at present asked.

The sale of sugar is not heavy, but is expected to increase before long, as the income (Continued on page 16)

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

The call for stock to eke out supplies is not at present a very strong force in the situation. The consumption of canned vegetables naturally ebbs when the supply of the raw material begins to be cheap and plentiful and is used freely by consumers. Green corn and tomatoes are to be had in quantities, at prices and in quality that give them the preference over the canned vegetables, and canned peas are not just now in active request. Consequently staple canned vegetables are quiet. The rate of demand is unlikely to prove equal to exhausting the market of old before new is in stock. As to the prospects of the tomato and the corn pack there is little unfavorable influence yet in sight. The new pack is likely to be full in each unless causes not yet in operation or not now perceptible should damage the crops. In all other vegetables trade is dull, and there is no interest shown as to possible yield and extent of pack, as in beans, pumpkin, etc., there is never a deficit. Fruits have no new point of interest. Stocks are full and are not melting away fast. As to the new pack it will likely be but a medium one in peaches, a fair one in pears and a full one in apples. To Canning Men.-OUR CYCLONE PULP MACHINE

For making tomato pulp and preparing pumpkin and squash for canning is very well known to all the canners in the United States, and a few of them are in use in Canada. The high tariff has prevented their being used extensively heretofore.

We are now manufacturing these machines at Oakville, Ont., to enable our Canadian friends to obtain them without paying a heavy duty; but we shall make only a few of them unless ordered. Those who contemplate purchasing, should send their orders promptly to insure the saving of duty, as late orders will have to be filled from stock in the United States which will be subject to a 30 per cent duty.

is firm, the total pack is reported on all hands to be short, the local supply is meagre, though it has been recruited this week by one or two houses on the street by new pack stock to sell at $1.45 to $1.50.

MONTREAL.

The local canned goods market is quiet. Owing to the large pack mackerel is quoted lower, but lobster holds steady. The old stocks of salmon is pretty well cleaned out and the market is in good condition to receive the new pack which is not large. It is thought that an advance may be expected in this line. This is owing to the short catch on the Fraser river. The Skeena river district the catch has been fair and there is a likelihood of a scarcity of this fish. The pack of peas is not large, but small fruits have been packed in fair quantities. The packers of tomatoes will have to carry their own stock this season. The wholesale trade have decided not to order in large quantities, but only as they require them. They say that after having sold 1000 cases early the packer would sell 100 cases later on at a lower figure.

ing of peaches, pears and apples is likely to revive the demand. The stock in the hands of retailers is not believed to be very large, as buying fell off after the first fruits were in, and also stiffer ideas of wholesalers tended to dissuade retailers from laying in supplies till a moment when prices should be more favorable to them. In essential respects the market is firm. Local prices are $3\frac{1}{2}$ c. upwards for yellows and $4\frac{1}{2}$ c. for granulated. The price of granulated advanced 1-16c. on Tuesday in New York, and is now 4 11-16c. there. Car loads are not so conspicuous a feature in the sugar business as they were.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.

The demand for syrup still keeps up and is beyond the capacity of the supply at the moment to fill. The price is still firm, $2\frac{1}{4}$ c. being the lowest ruling for fair stock. Low grades are hard to get.

Molasses is dull and unchanged. Trinidad in puncheons is worth 35 to 37c., in-barrels 38c. Porto Rico in barrels is 42c., New Orleans is 30 to 42c. Low grades are already scarcer.

TEAS.

Tea does not receive much attention from retailers, whose orders just now are for only such quantities as are necessary to keep the current consumptive trade going on. Later in the fall the trade is expected to pick up, as prices promise to be full and tea is one of the commodities that retailers buy somewhat in advance of the moment's needs when they do buy. Between importers and whole-salers there is some business going forward, but it is not of a steady character. Occasional large sales are made between intervals in which little or nothing is done. Japan teas are still firm, and it is expected that their firmness will outlast the receipt of the lower grade teas, which are now coming forward.

MARKET NOTES.

[Importers, wholesale merchants and manufacturers should send any items intended for this department so that they may reach the head office not later than Wednesday morning. The editor will always welcome such information.]

W. T. Harris, Chatham, N. B., dealer in general merchandise, offers 200 cases canned lobsters, also dried cod of finest quality.

Canned oysters are higher by $2\frac{1}{2}$ to 5c per dozen than they were earlier in the season, and the market appears to be quite firm at the advance.—N. Y. Commercial Bulletin

PETROLEUM

Canadian refined oil remains unchanged in quotation at 14 to $14\frac{1}{2}$ c. outside and $14\frac{1}{2}$ to 15c. delivered in the city, but the demand is improving and business is more spirited.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

Butter increases in scarcity and firmness. Dealers who have any can depend on the market for good prices, as all that arrives is very readily taken. Good dairy tub or even good store-packed is exchangeable at from 15 to 17c. per lb., and only very poor butter ever changes hands at less than 13c. Probably no purchases at all are made below 13c. The market is firm all round, owing to the steady call from buyers who want the butter for shipment out of the country. Montreal is still a strong market. Present receipts on this market are largely in tubs, though some rolls still come to hand. The shortage in the supply leads to the belief that some retailers are holding on to their lots to realize higher prices, and there is a possibility that those who wait may do better, but it must be remembered that during the time allowed for prices to grow stock cannot but decline, so that holding unfits the butter for the best prices and is risky, for no one can say when prices may lose the support of buyers.

Cheese is firm at 10 to $10\frac{1}{2}$ c. for good colored stock. The supply is ample for all trade needs, but the British market is strong.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Beans are unalterable apparently as they are still dull at $1.20 to $1.30 for good stock in trade lots.

DRIED AND EVAPORATED APPLES—Dried apples are somewhat firmer at $4\frac{1}{2}$ to 5c. Evaporated are steady at $6\frac{1}{2}$ to 7c.

EGGS—The supply is getting behind the demand, and the price is firm at 12c.

Honey—New extracted is quiet at 8 to 10c. Sections are 12 to 14c.

HOPS—Last year's crop is quiet at easier prices, 18 to 20c. being those now holding while 90's are 13 to 15c.

PROVISIONS.

ditions. All stocks are low in most lines of smoked meats. Prices have hardened and advanced in many lines since last week.

BACON—Long clear is $8\frac{1}{4}$ to $8\frac{1}{2}$ c., smoked backs are $11\frac{1}{4}$ to 12c., bellies $11\frac{1}{2}$ c., rolls 9 to $9\frac{1}{2}$ c.

HAMS—Are steady at 12 to $12\frac{1}{2}$ c.

LARD—Pure is unchanged at $9\frac{1}{2}$ to $9\frac{3}{4}$ c. for tubs and pails. Compound is steady at $7\frac{1}{4}$ to 9c.

BARREL PORK—U. S. heavy mess is $15 to $16, Canadian $16, short cut $16.50 to $17.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef is $3\frac{1}{2}$ to $4\frac{1}{2}$ c. in fore and 8 to 9c. in hindquarters, mutton is 7 to $7\frac{1}{2}$ c. Lamb $9\frac{1}{2}$ to $10\frac{1}{2}$ c., mutton 6 to $7\frac{1}{2}$ c., veal 7 to 8c.

VEGETABLES.

Potatoes are in good demand at $1.25 to $1.40 per barrel. Tomatoes are plentiful at 20 to 30c. a basket. Watermelons are easier at $20 to $25 per hundred. Musk melons are $1.75 to $2 per crate. Celery is 30c. per doz. Malta onions are $3 per hamper. Sweet potatoes are $4 to $4.50 per barrel.

GREEN FRUIT.

The scarcity of oranges still has a firming effect on prices, and now dealers want $7 to $8 for Sorrentos, and there is no other class of oranges obtainable. New Jamaicas will be on hand in a few days. Lemons are as firm but not as scarce as they were, the high prices of last week holding because of present stocks being bought after the advance. Maoris are $9.50 to $10, Verdellis $8 to $9, and Messinas about out of stock at $8.50 to $9. Bananas come to hand freely again and are quoted at $1.25 to $1.85. Apples are $1 to $1.50. Peaches quote at 75c. to $1.25; plums at 90c. to $1.25; pears at 40 to 50c. for Bells, 50 to 60c. for Tysons, and 60 to 85c. for Bartletts in baskets. The latter in barrels are $5 to $6.

FISH.

Prices are firm at 7c. for whitefish and salmon trout, 17c. for B.C. salmon, and 82.25 to $2.50 for lake herring.

SALT.

No change is to be noted in the quotations for some time standing in Prices Current. The week's trade has been of moderate proportion.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW.

HIDES—Are $4\frac{1}{2}$ c. for No. 1 green cows', 5c. for cured.

SKINS—Lambskins and pelts are uniform at 50c. Calfskins, 5 to 7c.

WOOL—Fleeces are 17c. for clothing grades and 19 to 20c. for combing. Pulled is 22c. for super, 25 to 26c. for extra super.

TALLOW—Is 2c.; rendered is bought at 5c., and sold at $5\frac{1}{4}$ to $5\frac{1}{2}$ c.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, Sept. 1, 1892.
GROCERIES.

The grocery market in some lines has shown a slight improvement, while in others it has shown a decrease. We think that on the whole the market is promising all round, and that no one has cause to complain. The only thing that is detrimental to the state of trade is the cutting that is being carried on by two of our local wholesale grocers, which has an unsettling effect on the market. The two firms always seem to be at loggerheads, one trying to out-do the other. The rest of the trade all seem to be of the same opinion, that is that future business looks very promising. The travellers out are doing a nice steady trade, and the whole tone of the grocery market may be summed up as good. Payments are coming in in good style, and few renewals are being asked.

SUGAR.

In tone the local sugar is in a decidedly better condition than it has been for some time. Advices from New York quote raws as being very firm and a cable from London says cane and beet as also firm. Our local prices have advanced both for granulated and yellows and the refiners report steady sales at new figures. The wholesale trade also claim to be doing a good steady trade in all parts at good prices. There is considerable cutting going on among the French wholesale houses especially between the two largest. We hear of single bbl. lots being sold at $4\frac{1}{4}$ c. for granulated. Refiners figures are now $4\frac{3}{4}$ c. granulated and yellows 3 5-16. these are first hand prices. We quote granulated $4\frac{1}{2}$ to 4 9-16c.; yellows, low grade $3\frac{1}{2}$ to $3\frac{3}{4}$ c., and yellows bright $3\frac{3}{4}$ to $4\frac{1}{4}$ c.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There is quite a trade doing in Canadian and American syrups and quite a few small lots have moved during the week. The wholesale trade report a better demand from the country for both lines. In molasses there is more or less cutting being done but the bottom figure is 31c. Stocks here are light and one local jobber had to fill his contracted orders by getting stock from Quebec. Some 1,000 puncheons were sold on this market by Quebec brokers this adds extra freight to the cost. A boat is expected here soon. We quote American syrup 23 to 25c. according to quality, Canadian $1\frac{1}{4}$ per lb., molasses 31 to 33c.

TEAS.

The Japan tea market is still dull with only a small trade doing. Prices at this point are very firm, and will continue so as advices from Japan are quoted as being very firm. It is thought that teas will advance still further later on. The Empress of Japan has arrived at the coast with her damaged cargo of teas, but just how much is hard to ascertain. All the stock will likely be brought east and auctioned off, thus the market will have to compete against damaged teas. Brokers here think the damaged stock will not effect this market to any extent as the teas will not be good for anything. Blacks are dull and quiet with only a fair trade doing.

COFFEE.

Coffee has shown considerable activity during the week. Values are firm, but local prices are unchanged. We quote as follows:—Rios 18 to 20c.; Java, 23 to 25c.; Mocha, 24 to 25c.; Jamaica, 19 to 21c.; and Maracaibo, $22\frac{1}{2}$ to 23c.; Santos, $17\frac{1}{2}$ to 19c.

RICE.

The rice trade has not been so good during the week as the weeks previous. The demand has been of a smaller nature. Millers say trade on the whole this year is not quite as good as last. The wholesale trade report fair business. We quote as follows: Standard $4 to $4.10, Japan $4.50 to $5, Patnas $4.50 to $5, and Carolinas $7 to $8 per hundred pounds.

NUTS.

Nuts are about the same as last week, the trade being purely a local one. Grenobles and Ivicas are scarce and in good demand. The only change during the week has been in new Grenobles which have advanced.

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

The expectation of big wheat crops makes buyers on the other side of the Atlantic bearish in their offers, and business in the shipping of flour consequently lags. Export inquiries are not wanting, but they are connected with ideas of value that keep buyers and sellers at a distance. Prices are steadily held by the millers and shippers at last week's quotations. In feed there is no new development.

FLOUR—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.95 to $5; strong bakers', $4.50; white wheat patents, $4.80; straight roller, $4.40; low grades, per bag, $1.25 to $1.50.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.60 to $4.70; Manitoba strong bakers' $4.20 to $4.30; Ontario patents, $3.90 to $4.10; straight roller, $3.65 to $3.70; extra, $3.15 to $3.25; low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.50.

MEAL—Oatmeal is $3.80. Cornmeal is $3.50.

FEED—Bran is $11.50 to $12, shorts $13 $14, mixed feed $22, feeding corn 50, oats 33 to 34c.

HAY—Old baled timothy is firm at $12 on track. New is $9.

STRAW—Is steady at $6.50 to $7.

MONTREAL.

Flour remains about steady, with a very moderate demand, chiefly for local wants. On large sales quotations would be cut some. Patent spring, $4.60 to $4.75; patent winter, $4.25 to $4.55; straight roller, $4.00 to $4.15; extra, $3.40 to $3.50; superfine, $3.90 to $3.15; fine, $2.70 to $2.90; strong bakers, $4.25 to $4.40.

Oatmeal is a shade higher, and held firmly in sympathy with the strong feeling in oats. Local demand is fairly active. We quote: Granulated, bbls $4.10 to $4.25; rolled bbls., $4.10 to $4.25; Standard, bbls., $3.95 to $4.05; granulated in bags, $2.00 to $2.10; rolled in bags, $2.00 to $2.10; standard in bags, $1.90 to $2.00.

Bran and shorts are fairly active at quotations, mouille is quiet. We quote:—Bran per ton, $13.00 to $13.50; shorts per ton, $14.00 to $15.00; mouille per ton, $19.00 to $22.00.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

There is no change to note in flour. It is in good demand and prices are steady. Manitoba is quoted at $5.50 to $5.60, Ontario high grade $4.60 to $4.70, medium patents $4.35 to $4.50.

CORNMEAL—Market very firm, stocks light; prices have advanced 10 to 20c., and will probably be quoted higher. Present figures are $2.95 to $3.05.

OATMEAL—Very little change. Is in good demand and selling at $4.20 to $4.30.

MONTREAL MARKETS—Continued.

The following are the quotations:—Almonds Tarragona 14 to 15c.; almonds, Ivica, 14 to 15c.; almonds, common, 10 to 11c.; almonds, hard-shell, 7 to 8c.; walnuts, Grenoble, new 13 to 14c.; walnuts, French 10 to 10½c.; cocoanuts per 100 $3.75 to $4.00; filberts 9 to 10c. pecans 16 to 17c.; peanuts 7 to 10c.

DRIED FRUIT.

It is expected that the new fruit will be to hand in a few days and it will come to a high and dry market. The business the last few weeks has been kept down for want of stock, but when the new fruit arrives the market will be brisk. We quote:—Currants, provincials, 4¼c. to 4½c. in bbls; do. 4½ to 4¾c in half bbls; do. 4¾c in cases; currants, Patras, 5c in bbls; do. 5¼c in bbls; do. 5½c in cases. Raisins, Valencias, 4¼c., Sultanas 7½c. prime stock.

GREEN FRUIT.

Green fruit has sold at better prices this week than last. The auction sales take place almost every day and the figures brought this week is on par with our quotations. The sales are being run by two large Californian shipping houses and with the exception of the Clogg sale last week prices realized have been up to the shippers fondest hopes. The two firms Vipond McBride & Co, and J. R. Clogg are doing their best to bring Montreal into prominence as a fruit centre, and hope next season to increase the sales where one car is sold now to make it three cars per day. Lemons are scarce and the demand is large. Our prediction of last does not seem to take place for the price during the week has not been changed. Californian fruit is selling well pears, peaches, and plums being in good demand. Bananas are selling at the same figure. The demand is good as is also the fruit. We quote: Lemons $6 to $6.50; California peaches $1.75 to $2.00 per box; Southern peaches $3 to $4; Western peaches 75c. to $1; California pears $2 to $3.00; plums $2.50 to $3 per crate; banannas $1 to $1.50 per bunch; Southern Bartlett pears $3 to $4 per keg; black berries 13 to 14c.

APPLES.

The apple trade has been fair. Receipts were heavy and not striking a brisk market, stocks here are large. Dealers here say the parties that contracted for apples at the orchards will be sick of their deal before long, as the cholera scare in Europe will have a bad affect on that market. Our local dealers are satisfied to wait before they go into the export trade. Prices have eased off during the week. Dried have advanced under fair demand. We quote Duchess $1.25 to $1.50; Astrican $1 to $1.25; and baskets 20 to 25c. Evaporated 6 to 6½c. and dried 4½ to 5c.

HONEY.

There is a fair local demand for bright honey and a few lots have moved. The dark stock in this market is selling slowly and no doubt holders would make concessions. We quote strained bright 7 to 8½c., dark 6 to 7c., comb bright 8½ to 10c., dark 7 to 9c.

HOPS.

Not much can be said about hops till the new pick arrives here in quantities. Some new stock has been placed with our local brewers and they say it is fine. It is thought quite a lot of Canadian hops will be exported. We quote 25c. for bulk, and pressed 17 to 18c.

FISH.

Fresh fish is quiet, the trade doing being only a small usual one. In pickled fish a few small lots of green cod have changed hands at $4.75 to $5 per brl.; dry cod, $4.75 to $5 per quintal.

We quote as follows:—Smoked Yarmouth bloaters, per 60 box, $1.00 to $1.10; St. John's bloaters, per 100 box, 80c. to $1.00; boneless cod, large boxes, 6 to 7c.; do. small boxes 7 to 8c.; finnan haddies 7 to 8c.

We quote No. 1 herring, per brl., $4.50 to $4.60; lake trout, per half brl., $4.00 to $4.25; sea trout, per bbl., $8.25 to $8.75; codfish, green, No. 1, per bbl. $4.75 to $5.00; do. No. 2, per bbl., $4.25 to $4.50; codfish, dried, per bbl., $4.25 to $4.50; salmon, B.C., per bbl., $13 to $13.50; do., Nfld., No. 1, per tee, $22.50 to $23; do. do., No. 2, per tee, $21 to $21.50; do. do., No. 3, per tee, $20 to $20.50.

EGGS.

The demand for eggs is about the same as last week. The receipts are still heavy and some of the stocks arriving is not up to much. We noted last week that the export trade had been stopped nor is it likely to start for some time. Prices at this point are about the same and we quote the 11 to 12c. figures.

PROVISIONS.

The local provision market is still without feature. Pork is jobbed off in a small way and the movement in smoked meats is also very small. Lard is as dull as heretofore. Prices are the same, we quote the following quotations: Canadian short cut, per brl. $16.75 to $17.50; mess pork, western, per brl. $16.00 to $16.50; short cut, western, per brl. $00.00 to $00.00; hams, city cured, per lb. 11c. to 11¼c; lard, Canadian, in pails 8¼ to 8½c; bacon, per lb. 9½ to 10¼c; lard, com. refined, per lb. 7 to 7¼c.

CHEESE AND BUTTER.

Cheese shows little change, but the spot market was somewhat livelier to-day but values are not changed.

GRAIN.

Wheat is still inactive. Some peas and oats are moving but the demand in all lines is generally small.

ST. JOHN, N. B., MARKETS.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Aug. 31, 1892.

GROCERIES.

Very little difference appears in comparing this week's trade with last, though we think an improvement is noticed. An advance is reported in sugars, and molasses is held firm.

SUGARS—The market has a very firm tone; prices have already advanced about ¼c. on all kinds, and still higher figures are looked for. Stocks held are smaller than usual, and a better demand is felt. Granulated is quoted at 4¼ to 4½c., yellows $3.30 to $3.40, extra C 3½ to 3¾c.

MOLASSES—The prices have advanced some 4c. per gallon, with good prospects for still higher figures; it is in good steady demand and quoted at 33 to 34c.

SYRUPS—Very little sale is reported and prices are steady at 2¾ to 3½c.

FISH—All kinds of fish have been scarce and as a consequence prices are higher. Dry cod, medium, are selling at $4.25 to $4.40, large cod $5 to $5.40, pollock $2.50 to $2.75, pickled herring (Canso) $6 to $6.25 per bbl., half bbls. $3.25 to $3.50, bay herring half bbls $1.65 to $1.80. Shad $4.50 to $5, smoked herring are higher, scaled are selling at 9 to 10c.

W. E. Zimmerman, a traveller in the employ of W. H. Gillard & Co., Hamilton, died on Monday evening of typhoid fever. He was well known and very popular, and much sympathy is expressed for his young widow. Mr. Zimmerman was 36 years of age, and was formerly connected with the firm of A. R. Kerr & Co.

R. Cunningham, the enterprising canner of Skeena River who recently established a cold storage system at his cannery at Port Essington, arrived in Victoria on Monday. When asked if the system was a success Mr. Cunningham said it was even better than had been expected. He estimates that he has this year saved over 70 tons of salmon which would otherwise have been allowed to rot and then been thrown overboard. Besides this the white salmon, which were formerly not used, are to be utilised hereafter. The white salmon are salted in cold storage and are to be sent to Spanish ports where a Mr. Bergoff, who is to handle it, says he can readily dispose of it after he has extracted the salt, which he does by a process well known in Europe. Mr. Bergoff has also purchased the 12,000 salmon frozen by Mr. Cunningham, which he intends to place on the Eastern market. He will go East with the fish to introduce it to the dealers of the big eastern cities.—Vancouver News Advertiser.

N. B.—The old STANDARD BRAND OF HORSESHOE CANNED SALMON still takes the lead, and affords the greatest satisfaction to both dealer and consumer, and for uniform excellence in quality and weight has no equal.

Vipond, McBride & Co. are now having three fruit sales a week.

W. C. McDonald, the tobacco manufacturer, is back from England.

Eight butchers have been fined $2 a piece by the Recorder for having dirty stalls.

J. A. Blair, a retail clerk, has gone to St. Leon Springs to spend the next two weeks.

The retail grocers' will meet sometime in the near future to elect officers for the coming year.

A. Walsh, son of F. Walsh, has gone to New York where he will go into the grocery business.

Apple dealers here think that cholera will have a bad effect on the export apple business this season.

J. R. Clogg & Co. have sold two car loads of California fruit so far this week. It is from Earl & Co., Sacramento, Cal.

Jack Patterson, the traveller, is in town. He has been laid up for three weeks. He is now feeling well and will start out next week.

The treasurer of the St. John's fire relief fund has received a cheque from the Greely Burnham Grocery Co. of St. Louis Mo. for $10.

Fraser, Viger & Co. are doing a nice out of town trade. Mr. Fraser says they have been so busy he could not take a holiday this season.

W. T. Costigan, the tea broker who had his foot crushed some time ago, is down at business. He has to use crutches and will have to for some time.

E. J. Taylor, the tea traveller, who cut his throat in the Waverly Hotel not long ago is still determined to die. He is closely watched, as he persists in the intention of making an end of himself.

HONEST ADVERTISING THE BEST.

There are some advertisers that prefer to come before the public in the character of a harlequin or a "snide" than in that of a legitimate and straightforward business man. I know of several enterprises that are being "faked," as it were, when a square appeal to the public on the merits of the article advertised would in my opinion result in ten fold greater success; and the sales would be enduring, whereas they are now transitory, dependent entirely upon the spurts of advertising and much being expected from mail orders.

I have in mind, among other things pushed in this way, a toilet soap. It is advertised quite extensively, and its only virtue which the advertiser seems to regard as of any interest to the public is its wonderful properties for the relief of red noses.

Now there are upwards of sixty-five millions of people with noses in this country. I will venture to assert that at least sixty-four and nine-tenths millions of these noses are in an ordinary healthy condition, and without any of the blooming tints of the rainbow.

In fact, the owners would reject with indignity any article which favored a bleaching process in these healthy and natural-colored noses.

Now this soap is a good toilet soap, and no one will gainsay the statement that it is a good article for daily use in the bath and morning ablutions, and in fact for all uses of a right good toilet soap; and the manufacturer, if you could reach him face to face with your feet under his mahogany, would probably "wink the other eye" if you should put the question straight: Will your soap bring back the natural color to an abnormally red nose? So he would repel with indignity any intimation that his soap might injure in the slightest degree the most healthy and tenderly cared-for nose. He would protest that no man or woman, even though his or her nose were as pronounced and bold as that of Chauncey Depew, or as mild and lovable as that of the Venus of Milo, yet his soap would make it only the more healthy and beautiful, and its precious natural color disturb not.

Why, then, does this soap advertiser think and cater only for one hundred thousand or less unhealthy and abnormally red noses, to the neglect of the sixty-four million nine hundred thousand of other people who might be made regular buyers of his soap? The more he talks about red and sore noses the more he drives away the sixty-four and nine-tenths millions of prospective customers with the healthy noses; for no man cares to trifle with the nose which gives him no trouble, and which he is proud of, by using the soap so strongly recommended and especially boomed for the dreaded sickly and red nose.

The reader may say that the advertiser is spending his own money for advertising, and if he did not find it paid him to do as he would not do so. That may be true, and yet it is no argument against the fact that he would do better to change and get some other name for his red-nose remedy, and put his soap before the sixty-five millions of people who use soap and who can and would buy it on its merits alone as fine, pure and healthy toilet soap.

Many advertisers have adopted this style of advertising, only to a little later on discover their mistake. With an article of real merit, for which there is a general demand, the better way is to appeal squarely to the public on its own merits. Because "fake" advertising temporarily pays, it does not follow that a more direct appeal, by legitimate and straight methods, will not pay much better.

Mr. Upton, when first introducing the Rochester lamp, painted the bald heads in the front row at the theatre, and adopted many other questionable schemes for attracting attention. Very soon, however, he found it more effective to fall back upon a direct and square appeal to the people on the merits of his article, and more profitable to sell it through established and legitimate channels of trade—jobbing houses and retail stores.

I am informed that J. C. Ayer, when he first started, used to sell his "Pectoral" only, and that from a peddler's wagon. He made it pay; but if some one had suggested other methods he might have replied: "If I didn't find this way of doing business profitable I should not pursue it." Nevertheless, he left his gaudily painted wagon and adopted other methods and accumulated several millions of dollars.

Barnum is often quoted as an illustrious example of a successful advertiser who made use of "snide" methods. That may have been true when he was "faking" the woolly horse, Joyce Heath, and the original and only mermaid; but when he quit the red-nose business and became the proprietor of a great menagerie and circus, he advertised it for exactly what it was—"The Createst Show on Earth."

In the long run it does not pay to deceive the public. If by chance it should temporarily pay, then it is pretty clear that the same capital and energy employed in a frank and earnest appeal on the merits of the goods alone will in most cases pay very much better.—J. F. Place in Printers' Ink.

DOWN WEIGHT.

In an article on the practice of giving down weight the Northwest Trader says:

The last meeting of the Grocers' Association furnished positive proof of the correctness of our position. There was a quick and accurate weighing contest between three leading grocers. The ability of any of the three would be generally conceded, by those who know the trade of this town, to be above the average. The results of this contest showed errors in weighing, of from 3½c. to 24½c. on 90c. worth of goods. Obviously this runs into money with frightful rapidity, in the former a loss of one dollar in less than $3.75 worth of goods. In neither case could the merchant continue business at anything like a profit on those goods he sells by weight. There is shrinkage enough here to account for all the losses in the retail grocery business, without taking into consideration any of the other sources of loss inevitable in this business? What have the grocers to say for themselves as to this showing? Isn't it about time to quit the practice of giving down weight?

TORONTO'S GREAT FAIR

The Toronto Industrial Exhibition opens on Tuesday next, the 6th Sept., and closes on the 17th. With the enlarged grounds, new half-mile track, new grand stand 700 feet long, many other improvements, and the large number of excellent special attractions provided, the coming Fair will undoubtedly be away ahead of all that have preceded it. The entry list in all departments is larger than ever, and the space in all the buildings has been taken. The usual cheap fares and excursions will be given on the railways. The attendance of visitors from all parts of the country will undoubtedly be great.

Egan Bros., grocers, have purchased from J. H. Price a store on Talbot street east, St. Thomas, for $3,000.

The store of Robert Flynn, Mountain Grove, Ont., was destroyed by fire on Monday. This is the third time fire has attacked his property.

The British America Starch Company (Ltd.), Brantford, are now quoting their Canada Laundry in boxes at 3¼c. The change escaped correction in this week's Prices Current, but will be inserted next week's.

Wright & Copp have made arrangements for exhibiting T. A. Snider Preserve Co.'s goods, chocolate menier, MacLaren's cheese and other lines that they are selling agents for in this city, at the Toronto Industrial Exhibition to be held here next week. Henry Wright will be in attendance on the grounds and will make the trade and consumers welcome to taste and try the goods his firm represents.

POSITION OF THE DEBTOR.

When a man, be he a dealer in or a consumer of merchantable commodities, asks for credit, he asks to be accommodated. Too many buyers get the idea into their head that they confer a favor upon the seller when they bestow their patronage upon him, whether they pay cash or are granted time. There is nothing surprising in this. Retail dealers and consumers, too, are being educated up to that point every day. Their trade is "drummed" by the commercial traveller, solicited by the circular and persuaded by the newspaper advertisement. But it is a mistaken conception of the purpose of these trade "fetchers" that leads them to think they are the obligers and the sellers the obligees if the term may be used. Advertisements may persuade, circulars plead and commercial travellers solicit, but the trade they are after is the trade that pays. They want a share (the lion's perhaps) of the orders that they know will be given to some one. They do not ask the dealer to buy simply to accommodate them. Sometimes the "drummer" may convey this impression, but it is seldom with the knowledge and consent of his employers.

Legitimate business men seek legitimate trade. If they buy on credit, they are the accommodated parties, but when they sell on the same terms they are extending favors to some other fellow. The consumer may allow himself to be overpersuaded by the retailer, the latter by the travelling agent, but if he does, he alone should bear the burden of any loss that results. He is still the accommodated. If he buys goods that he knows to be inferior, and he pays the same price that would secure a better grade, then, perhaps, he is conferring a favor upon the seller; but even in that case, just as sure as he asks and obtains credit, he is still the accommodated party.

Under whatsoever circumstances a trade is made, if the buyer is given immediate possession and the time of payment fixed for some future date, he, and not the seller, is under obligations. He may be rolling in wealth, or his name be famous in the annals of history, but he is no less accommodated than the most poverty-stricken and obscure individual who ever bought a loaf of bread on credit. A promise to pay is not money. Men have gone to bed rich and awakened next morning by the gaunt finger of poverty tapping at the window. Others have retired amid the rags of a pauper's pallet and arisen to find themselves out of reach of want forever. Men of wealth often become suddenly poor, but paupers seldom become suddenly rich, hence, there is considerable risk in either case.

A credit seeker is not inferior to the individual who grants the favor. He need not imagine that he must cringe before the alleged importance of his creditor. It is strictly legitimate to ask for credit if one has the inclination and ability to pay his bills when due. The debtor is just as good a man as the creditor, if their only difference lies in their positions at opposite ends of a business transaction. But when a debtor begins to imagine that he has accommodated his creditor, or when the latter permits the former to convince him that such is the case both are on the wrong road, and the foundation of the credit system begins to weaken.

"I do not believe in being excessively polite to one's creditors," said a man well known to the vehicle trade. Later on, when he became manager of a carriage factory, the not-excessively-polite missive that came from some of his debtors often sent him home at night sick at heart. The chickens had come home to roost.—Ex.

CULTIVATED TASTES.

A Baltimore trade paper says: "One of the food marvels of our modern times is the consumption of canned salmon. From the beginning regarded as a game fish of the more northern waters, a food for the financial and gastronomic gods, it has become an almost every day dish for people of very ordinary fortune, a rival in fact of the cattle of the plains and an important article of commerce. The position it holds in these respects is due to the canning industry. The salmon business of the North Pacific coasts is vast, and, as yet, ever increasing. The bulk of the fish is shipped to the British Isles, as canned salmon. Thus it is seen that the English people are warmed by the Republican waters of the gulf stream and fed with salmon which follow the despotic waters of the Japan current, that crosses the Pacific ocean and warms the northwestern verge of the American continent where this great fish comes to spawn in solitude.

"But, in late years, the demand for this salmon has greatly increased at home and America now consumes a large quantity of her Oregon and Alaskan fish.

"The fluctuations of demand have misled the most astute dealers several times in late years because they take too superficial a view of the requirements of food consumers. A taste for salmon is one that grows by cultivation, but it remains when once acquired; but this is not the main factor in the original increase of consumers.

"The price of this canned fish, the intrinsic food value of the contents of the can, the service which it will do commends itself at once to all who desire variety in economy. As our population increases, driving the cowboy and his herd from prairie to plain, from east to west, from great ranges near railroads to hills inaccessible to them, the supply of meat decreases in the same ratio that demand for it increases and the price steadily advances despite the steady decline of wages. Being accustomed to liberal supplies of meat, the palates of the people cannot forego it without some substitute, and salmon comes not only very near to a complete substitute, but, as a variety, is an improvement and is cheaper than meat in point of fact. In a two pound or tall tin, the amount of excellent, rich, palatable food is very much more than would be in two pounds of meat, whilst at the retail price of 15 to 18 cents per can it is only about one-half the price of the meat per pound. On the table it will go double as far as the same quantity of meat and is satisfying in like proportion.

"Therefore the taste which must have meat and cannot afford it hails gladly the new meat, for it supplements the family of "Ser Loin" in a most agreeable and economical manner. "On what meat has this our Cæsar fed, that he has grown so great," yet man must be poor indeed who cannot now have this royal fish on his table. So the increase of demand goes steadily on and when the excess of packing of it seems to threaten ruin to the holders, the demand simply increases, a wider market is opened for it, more people are advantaged, and the over-pack of salmon proves to be an imagination, and this will probably continue till the over-fishing depletes the supply and once more it will become food for the wealthy. But when that time comes, meat will have risen to very much higher prices than now as compared with wages, and the palates of the poor will have to come down to the rations of the poor in a monarchy."

THE WORK OF VANDALS.

Some months ago the Gazette drew attention to the fact that an enterprising oil firm of Quebec had painted their sign on the face of the rock where the landslide occurred a few years ago. They had no authority for thus defacing public property, but although regret was publicly expressed on every hand no one took any steps to have the nuisance removed until to-day when a painter was seen at work covering the face of the cliff with a coat of brown paint. The firm made enquiries and found that he was acting under orders of a Montreal newspaper which was as anxious for cheap advertising as they were themselves. Now, although people were glad to have the sign painted out, they were furious at this high-handed proceeding, more especially as it came from Montrealers and one irate city councillor left for the place vowing that he would tear down the ladder with his own hands. He must have been late in getting there, however, as he and the painter did not happen to meet. So strong was the feeling that, had it been known beforehand what was going to be done, the painter would have been forcibly interfered with. The firm in question consulted their legal advisers, Messrs. Pentland and Stuart, and were told that they could recover the amount spent by them in painting their sign on the rock. It would appear to the uninitiated that if one person has a right to paint rock piebald another has an equal right to add an artistic coat of brown. Meantime another vandal, who keeps a large store in St. Rochs, has sent down some painters in a schooner to paint his sign in 20 inch letters on Cape Trinity, one of the most interesting features of the famous Saguenay. Another has painted the name of a certain patent medicine close to the spot where Montgomery fell.—Montreal Gazette.

Autumn Issue
THE CANADIAN GROCER,
September 20th.

CIRCULATION, 12,000.

PARTICULAR attention is directed to the Autumn Number of THE CANADIAN GROCER for 1892, which will be issued about September 20th. The trade throughout Canada are now so well aware of the success of such previous issues of this journal that we need only state that the coming number will far outshine the others in many ways.

The Colored Cover is artistically designed by one of the best artists in Canada, and will be printed in several colors.

The Circulation of 12,000 means that every grocer and general merchant in the Dominion will receive a copy gratis. The trade will therefore expect to find in its columns the announcements of the houses they deal with. It will penetrate to many places, no doubt, never visited by your traveller, as well as to every centre of commerce in Canada whence orders for goods are likely to be forthcoming.

We would therefore urge upon advertisers to use this the only medium to reach probable buyers and people who want your goods. This can be done at a great saving to yourself. To insure good position copy must be in at once.

Advertisers and Subscribers may have their correspondence addressed to the care of any of our offices and they are invited to use them at any time. At the Head office, Toronto, a place is set apart where they can see all the latest newspapers and the latest issues of trade papers from all parts of the world, where they can do their correspondence or obtain any information. Parcels may also be directed to the Head office.

Grocers and general merchants will do well not to relax any of the vigilance they were called upon to exercise three years ago to retain the ownership of their tobacco and to avoid the payment of a heavy fine. The majesty of the Inland Revenue regulations has still to be asserted now and then, and an outbreak of official zeal in its behalf may be visited upon the trade at any moment. In Ottawa some seizures have recently been made, but the Government in its lenity, believing that no fraud was intended, was graciously pleased to let the offenders off without following them up by fine or imprisonment, and only confiscated the tobacco. But no dealer has any guarantee that justice will be equally tempered with mercy if he should be caught with tobacco that the wholesale grocer has forgotten to put the inland revenue stamp upon. He may be thankful he is not dragged ignominiously before a magistrate to answer the charge of dealing in contraband goods. His offence is a heinous one in the eye of the inland revenue regulations, no matter what ignorance or accident may be urged in his behalf. He might as well try to do a slave trade as to offer tobacco from a package that did not bear every vestige of the evidence necessary to prove payment of the excise duty. Examine every package you buy, and see that you do not tear off all the strip when you open the box. Remember too not to have a plug of tobacco or a cigar out of its own box, and do not fail to knock the bottom out of every cigar box, for it would bring trouble to somebody if a lynx-eyed inland revenue man should get his eyes on it intact and either empty or filled with something other than cigars.

Green goods men are apparently getting their eyes open to the value of our markets as an outlet for their merchandise. They are spending good money very freely in postage these days to offer gilt-edged opportunities to enterprising citizens in Montreal and Toronto. They send a type-letter which shows a consuming desire on the part of the sender to open an agency in each of these cities, and the only obstacle in the way of doing so is the want of some man of sterling integrity to be entrusted with the management of it. The letter flatters each of the recipients by its very overt declaration of faith in their uncompromising respectability, and hopes business relations will be established. The sender says he is an aged man 38 years of whose life has been spent in the engraving department of a state bank, and that he can produce a perfectly flawless paper money. He will not sell less than two hundred dollars worth, so the man who wants any of this fine art must get $200 of good money and forward it. Some poor simpletons do take the bait, forgetting to take account of the fact that if this counterfeit money were so safe a medium of circulation the manufacturer of it would not trouble himself to convert it into one-tenth as much legal money. One Montreal man sent $200, and had his confidence painfully shaken in the reality of human honor when he opened the return parcel and found a brick instead of 200 crisp ten dollar bills. So long as the green goods men treat their trusting and equally criminal correspondents in this way, honest people may feel easy. But sometimes the bad money is sent in return for the good, and then decent people have to look out. This stuff is likely to get shoved into circulation if it is a good imitation of the genuine, and then rogues get the value of good money in merchandise and service while honest merchants are unconsciously running the risk of losing the full amount of what the spurious money pretends to be. It is to be earnestly hoped the green goods men will continue to send bricks for money. The class of green goods men who send money cannot but feel that their competitors who send bricks are ruining the business. That is what their competitors are doing, and for once it is delightful to perceive that competition is the death of trade.

When the trader begins to show a lack of personal interest in his customers he begins to lower the centripetal force, and let them fly off at a tangent to revolve round some other centre of trade. This fact is not sufficiently apprehended by some otherwise good business men. They do not know how to put themselves in the place of others. If they did they would criticise the faults in their own manner with more insight and to better purpose. Many a customer is put in an obstinate mood by the indifference of a salesman, and walks out to buy somewhere else what he came with the intention of buying from the man who showed so lukewarm a zeal to make the sale. The trader must lay before his mind closely and constantly the principle that people like to be appreciated and like their orders to be made something of. Neglect or indifference drives them away. A merchant often falls into the habit of being rather dry-mannered and independent towards his customers, and is unconscious of the effect of this habitual air. He will lose by it. To put oneself in the place of others requires more philosophy than some people suspect, and although they can do it in relation to forms of bad conduct that they do not practise, they cannot do it in relation to their own little private faults. Personal interest in customers is necessary to do business successfully. With this customer the interest needs to be friendly and cheery in expression, with that one polite and solicitous of pleasing, with one chatty, with another jocular, with most patient, with all strictly civil and obliging. Hardly a customer who has the money to pay for what he or she wants does not feel disappointed and displeased if the selling or showing of the required article does not seem to give real pleasure to the merchant. People like to be remembered, and when they come back to buy are on the still hunt for any traces of joy or remembrance of the former transaction in the mind of the salesman. If no such signs are discernible the customer is apt to be afforded and may not call again. The genial, happy-natured, courteous man who can show himself interested in everybody at all times is the man who holds customers, and sometimes can do so without losing much of his profit.

The agreement among the salmon packers to limit their output this year has given something of an impetus to the trade in the raw material. The shipments of whole salmon from British Columbia to eastern points in this country and the United States have been both large and numerous this season. They would probably have been smaller and fewer if the canners had gone in for putting up so large a pack as that of 1891. And they would probably have been larger and more numerous if this had not been a "short run" year. Of course, the shippers of raw salmon eastward send larger fish than would as a rule be suitable for canning, and thus do not come into the market for stock altogether in opposition to the canners. But the increase in the sale of fresh salmon gives work to many men thrown out of employment by the agreement to limit the pack. The consumption of fresh salmon is furthered by the facilities for shipping and preserving that are afforded by the railways. The use of refrigerator cars ensures the preservation of stock. The manufacture of ice has been wonderfully cheapened in recent years. It can be produced at $4 a ton. This makes shippers independent of natural ice, which is seldom or never of so equable purity as that made by mechanical process. Refrigerating plants can also be constructed at little more than one-half the cost necessary two years ago, and smaller plants can be made than it would then pay to make. A step further is believed to be possible, so that cars can be equipped with freezing plants and the ice made on board. The development of cold storage means the extension of business in perishable lines into seasons and countries heretofore out of the question. In the present stage of its development it would not pay to erect an ice manufacturing and storage plant in this city, as natural ice comes upon an average at about $1.50 per ton, and we are in too cold a situation for it to ever be much dearer.

The railway trains and steamboats are now putting down at the stations and wharves of the city, visitors who have come to attend the Industrial Exhibition. The attendance, however, is not more than the usual first-week average. On Monday morning people will begin to arrive in shoals. They are likely to get the worth of their time and expenses in interesting and entertaining features of the Exhibition, for which preparations have been made upon a very extensive scale. The fact that the management of the great Fair has been in the same hands for several years allows of popular judgment and taste to operate for its steady improvement. Those who have charge of it this year having also had charge of it last year are able to apply now the lessons they learnt for the correction of any features that were disappointing in their effect last year. It is only by having the management reasonably constant that it is possible to trace the irregular line of popular approval. This idea may have been a good one, that may have been a bad one, but only those who tried both know which to reject and which to retain. The Exhibition is likely to be more of a success this year than it ever was, just because it is the result of unbroken continuity in management. The year has been a productive one in this province and all over Canada, the people have every object that self-interest and patriotism can suggest for wanting to make the most out of the Fair as an advertisement, and those who go to see may benefit as much as those who go to show. The Industrial Exhibition will repay those who spend a day or two among its sights.

"Work Accomplished by the Toronto Humane Society during 1887-1891" is the title of a publication issued by that Society, by one of whose vice-presidents, Dr. J. George Hodgins, it is edited. It is a full and very encouraging survey of what the Society has done since its work of mercy began in the year 1887. Direct results of its efforts are the appointment of a humane officer; the trial of 829 cases of alleged cruelty; the enriching of the city revenue by $2,637 from fines imposed; the enforcing of police regulations in regard to cruelty; the placing of horse troughs and drinking fountains on various streets; the formation of bands of mercy; the promotion of preventive and remedial legislation; the bringing about of the dishorning commission's appointment; agitation against horse-docking, horse-clipping, horse-exposure, horse-starvation, over crowding cattle cars; the publishing of humane literature, etc. Besides this review the work contains the annual report, several obituary verses and notes, notices of sister associations on this continent and in England, and some twenty pages of Bands of Mercy readings. Its letter-press matter is interspersed with forty well chosen illustrations from engravings. The work shows that in this city humane influences are growing for the protection of helpless human beings and dumb animals, and for the education of public sentiment against toleration of brutality and cruelty. The grocer has his interest in seeing the Society increase in influence. It would often be money in his pocket if the friends of the horse were more militant in that faithful servant's protection. The delivery horse has to take many chances. He is often over-driven, savagely beaten, taken through broken roads for short cuts, left standing sweating and uncovered in the cold, crippled, galled or calked through the criminally abusive driving of the delivery man, given drink in the coldest weather while the bit is in his mouth, and driven to the fountain in summer reeking from the weather and the exertion and allowed to drink his fill. Aside from humane considerations, which ought of themselves, however, to secure his master's protection, such abuse is economically a bad thing. The grocer is befriended by any one who reports any instances of such brutality to him, and the number of people liable to take so much interest in his horse is being increased by the Humane Society every day.

A STUDY OF THE TEA TRADE.

412 Queen Street West,

TORONTO, August 30th, 1892.

DEAR GROCER,—How much I esteem you I cannot express, for I have you always at hand in my business, to help and comfort me by your elevating and encouraging advice given on subjects pertaining to the retail grocery trade. Your articles and clippings are judiciously rendered for our good. Your article advising the clerks to organize for mutual benefit and improvement meets with my hearty approval, and I hope that very many—yea all—employers will help and encourage the object for which you so earnestly plead.

I have read the correspondence on the packet tea question, and having had some little experience in keeping three different packet teas, I have concluded that they are no good for my trade. Before I kept packet tea I was much troubled to please my customers with tea, in fact, I knew very little about it, not having had much experience in groceries, but I knew enough to believe that good tea was one of the great essentials in the grocery business. So I resolved to try almost everything that I thought would please my customers. You can perceive what an easy subject I was for packet tea men. I tried, first one, and then another, and another. Sometimes I thought I had made a new customer who asked particularly for a special brand. I felt pleased then, thinking it would come all right, but alas! it all failed, I got more mixed up than at first, and I was much perplexed about it. My clerk, who I thought knew something about tea, could not help me, I thought he made it worse. I made a change in clerks, and at the same time I took the advice of a certain tea traveller, whose name I'll not mention, for fear he would think it was flattery, or it might cause jealousy, as I perceive that runs thick through the correspondence in your last week's issue. This gentleman gave me a lecture on tea, and I gathered more information from him in one hour than I had received the whole time I had been in business. I tried his plans, and under his directions I overcame all difficulties. I am pleasing all my customers now; not one to my knowledge but what is buying tea from me, and it is given entire satisfaction. My sales are increasing daily, and I know that I am not alone in like results through the same means. This, sir, is exceedingly gratifying and satisfactory to me, but it appears to be very unsatisfactory to more than one wholesale grocery house that I do business with. I have even had one employer himself call on me to know the reason I did not buy tea from him, and told him the reason. I have also been told by travellers that if I did not buy tea from the wholesale grocers they would not continue to sell me sugar. I told them that when the time came and they refused me sugar, the firm I bought tea from no doubt would supply me with that article. So you see, dear GROCER, what we retailers have to contend with from the wholesale houses. First, they make a combination on prices in almost everything they sell, especially sugar, by which latter for the time it lasted they bled us and themselves got rich. Not being satisfied with this they added insult upon injury by shortening the time of payment and lessening the discount for cash buyers. This was the sympathy and good feeling they held toward us poor retail grocers. In doing this they drove some out of business and others into different channels for buying our goods, where we could do better and get better time and discounts, and then after having four years of such a good time in making money out of us retailers, having had a kick among themselves and having broken up their combination, they now want us to return to the old ways with them. Nay, they want to compel us by threats of boycotting us on sugar because we have been forced to go outside of them for tea and other goods, yet in my own business I have sold more tea and am pleasing my customers better and holding them to my entire satisfaction. Why, then, should I be forced out of business or refused sugar because the wholesale grocers have made such fools of themselves by driving their customers into other channels? Is this business, dear GROCER? Why do they harass the retail trade thus? Won't you come to our help and give us your ideas and advice on this important subject, and oblige,

Yours truly,

W. G. CAMPBELL.

PACKET TEAS AND PRIVATE BLENDS.

Dear Sir,—The two letters in your issue of Aug. 26th on "Where the Shoe Pinches," and "Self-interest Warps the Judgment," are very amusing, especially the one by Mr. S. N. Norrie, whose "art" in self-defence and trying to combat my arguments touching packet teas is very "loose" and bulky and ought to be enclosed in a hermetically sealed package to keep the "aroma" from losing its fragrance or getting contaminated with inferior subjects. I am not well acquainted with him, although I know he is interested in selling packet tea, and a very old and much respected tea merchant told me yesterday on reading his letter (I use his own words): "What Norrie doesn't know about tea would fill a book." I was left pondering in my mind how many more could he fill of what he did know, when in came a tea broker, who said: "Why, I was showing him a sample of a very poor scented Orange Pekoe the other day, and asked him what he thought of it. His reply was he thought it a very fair Formosa Oolong." At this the store rang with laughter. I enclose the names of these gentlemen for you, sir, to verify if disputed. This little incident shows plainly that Mr. Norrie's knowledge of tea is very limited, and he cannot possibly understand the art of blending tea, of which he so presumptuously boasts. Now why does not the supposed reputable firm which he represents place their name upon their invoices, letter heads, and tea packages which they offer for sale, as a guarantee of the respectability of the firm and of the trade they are supposed to do? Why, on the very face of the business it savors of deception, which Mr. Norrie's own words confirm, because, as he admits, a respectable firm is not ashamed of its name, but rather prides itself in having a good name that can defy imitation and jealous competitors. Why is he not consistent, then, in representing such a firm? This, I think, answers Mr. Norrie's "firstly, secondly, thirdly and lastly."

Now for Mr. W. H. Seyler, whom I don't know from Adam and never heard of before, without he is the "peregrinator" that has been carrying THE GROCER around with him showing my letter to some retailers and telling them of the inconsistency of which his narrow mind leads him to suppose I have been guilty. But my customers know me better than he does, and they understand my motives, because it is to their interests to do so, and I am satisfied to leave myself in their hands. I don't even know whom he represents, but his remarks savor like the promptings of a firm who, instead of combating squarely the introduction of these poor packet teas, must needs go them one better by putting up similar goods and by introducing a "sixteen kind mixture" which they call blended tea. Oh, what tales I could tell of this tea. But charity restraineth me from doing so. I would advise the salesmen of these particular "blends" to be careful lest they fall into greater errors than they have already committed in using such mountebank and unbusiness-like methods of introducing them, lest they bring reproach upon the very name of salesman and traveller. I don't know of any one firm owning the half of India, or the Island of Ceylon, the Kangras and the Himalayas, although there are some firms in Canada so conceited and selfish in their imaginations that they want it understood that they control these countries' growths and productions, and they would like to crush out of existence all others who dare to compete with them. Suffice it to say, on this point, that the markets are open to all, and the best judges are most likely to get the best goods which can be offered to the trade at large. There is a difficulty of not getting always just what is wanted at times, I admit, and this is the only point I see in Mr. Seyler's letter. But there are some firms and travellers in the trade who never get stuck for a tea. If any particular kind is asked for they have a sample that will suit, and they try to make a Ceylon do for everything in India teas; and it does, in many cases, except when their samples come in competition where the proper teas are shown and where the buyer is a judge. Then these smarties collapse, not knowing Assam tea from Ceylon, nor a Kangra from Java, Moning from Kaisow, Ping Suey from a Moyune Young Hyson, nor scented Orange Pekoe from Oolong, and yet they have the audacity to pose as authorities on tea, and condemn a salesman who knows at least something of the business he is engaged in, and in his humble way is trying to help those of his customers who are anxious to learn all they can about the most particular article sold in the retail grocery trade.

What good, may I ask, is ten years' service to a man in a grocery or any other business if he has not used what little common sense that is given him to profit and learn something of what he is selling, without having to refer to other firms for their opinion whether he is right or not? The gentleman referred to by Mr. Seyler as an authority on blended tea once told me in conversation with him that he did not profess to know much about China teas, that his knowledge was principally in India and Ceylon teas, these being his specialties, and so our friend, who requires so many "different constituents to make up his blend and keep it uniform for years" will not, I am afraid, get much information to help him from that source. If I may be allowed, I will divulge "a secret" pertaining to blending tea, for the information of my friend. It is this: It is not so much the multiplicity of teas used in blending that brings the desired results as it is to know just what teas to use in making—or "creating" is the best word—a special flavor that pleases the palate, and which every Tom, Dick and Harry can't find out or copy. Herein lies the secret and art called blending tea. To do this a man must possess a thorough, practical knowledge of the teas used, their peculiar flavors and separate characters, etc. This he can only get by careful study, with practical knowledge, and by keeping himself thoroughly posted on all advancements and improvements being made by the introduction of new teas. How necessary it is, then, for every salesman handling teas to understand his business so that he may be a help to his customers (and not a hindrance) in being able to explain these things, and in cases where he finds ignorance and at the same time a willingness to learn, to be able to give information when asked, and thus encourage his customers to get a better knowledge and insight into the business in which they have embarked. And now to conclude. Let me do so by thanking Mr. Seyler for his unsolicited admittance of my humble efforts to improve the tea trade among the retail grocers, and if I have in any way helped these "six competitors" of which he speaks, they in return for my services perhaps may think of me at New Year's stock taking, in remembering my humble endeavors to raise the dignity and standard of the tea trade, and being able to hold it, as far as I am personally concerned, from being degraded by those firms who stoop to use such ridiculous and mountebank means for selling their teas.

Respectfully yours,

STEPHEN HUSTWITT.

Toronto, Aug. 27th, 1892.

DILIGENCE IN BUSINESS.

In these days of hurry and strife for the first places in the race of life it is even more important than in former years that a man be diligent in his business and look after its every detail closely.

We see among our greatest business men of to-day those who started in life as poor boys and who have now become the head of large establishments. How have they come to do this? Was it because they had better chances than are now held out to the average young man? That has not been so in the majority of cases, but they have striven after their high positions and have endured hardships to overcome obstacles. They have been diligent in business and are now reaping a richly deserved reward.

In some respects it may be harder for a young man, or, in fact, any man in business, to make a great success, because of the amount of competition that has to be met. It needs men who will not give up for anything to battle against this competition.

Close attention must be given to the slightest details and everything has to be done carefully. The cost must be measured in every transaction. Application is necessary if you would attain the best results.

Look out for the little things. They do not seem to count at the time, but every item helps to count up on either side of the balance sheet. By that it is not meant that one should be close, but they should be careful.

The "tricks of the trade" ought to be let alone. They do not help any in the long run. If a customer finds that he is not being treated fairly he will leave in an instant. It is fair to say that there is very little underhanded business being done. It does not pay and business men have come to see it.

Give all you can for the money, and you will hold a customer and gain others. Don't run down another man's stock in order to make a sale. If your neighbor has poor stock the customer will find it out if he tries. Business men should work together as much as possible and try to make the standard of business principle as high as possible.

Let a man start out with fixed principles and with determination to win by the practice of fairness toward all and he is bound to succeed. He needs to look out for his business and see that those under him are as honorable in every way. A man who does that will find friends both with customers and fellow business men.

All lines of business must be run systematically in order to attain the best results. It will not do to let one thing after another pile up until one is literally snowed under. It is best to go through with everything in a systematic manner. Take up each item in its regular order and work while you work. Recreation that is taken when you are conscious that you have done the work of the day faithfully is always sweetest.

Always be on the lookout for chances to improve methods in business, and keep up with the times in all lines. There are new articles coming up continually. Some of them possess merit and some do not. It is a study by itself to find out which are the best to handle. Much may be gained or lost in this respect.

There are numerous ways in which business must be watched. One must love the business he is engaged in and seek to make it all that it should be. The mark of excellency cannot be placed too high. Reward for his labors is sure to come to the diligent man, and that was well known in the time of Solomon, who said, "Seest thou a man diligent in his business? he shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before mean men."—Stoves and Hardware Reporter.

NO UNALLOYED SUCCESS.

He who embarks in any line of business under the impression that a few swift, fleeting months will find him rolling in wealth and no effort spent to acquire it, is doomed to disappointment most grievous.

"Must I be carried to the skies
On flowery beds of ease,
Whilst others fought to win the prize
And sailed thro' bloody seas?"

The reader will pardon the introduction of the old hymn, but it so aptly illustrates the point. The business man, however agreeable, honest, liberal-minded and manly, will always be confronted by competitors and customers who are disagreeable, dishonest, selfish and puerile. This is one of the things which must be taken into consideration when one launches his commercial craft, and the man who is not possessed of the push, grit, nerve, energy, and incidentally, the capital to withstand the ravages of the stormy element in the trade should not make a start.

Does any one know of a business that is absolutely free from disagreeable features? Was there ever an extended deal between two business houses absolutely exempt from them? Was there not at least a petty dispute now and then?

We are all selfish. We all want our own way, and are inclined to become near-sighted when asked to take a look at the other fellow's side of the case. Our vision becomes so dimmed that we will not admit there is more than one side. There are questions at issue continually between the wholesaler and the retailer, but the latter will never recede from his position until he becomes one of the former. The same thing is true as regards the retailer and the consumer. It makes all the difference in the world whose ox is gored.

The great trouble is that these matters are magnified. The evils may be great, but when one calmly surveys the general situation, does he find them as bad as they are painted? In specific cases they may often be worse, and any effort looking toward relief is certainly commendable.

Be honest, and have but one price. Discriminate in favor of no one; regard every man's money as good as his brother's, and you will win a patronage that is as free from disagreeableness as it is possible for it to be. On the other hand treat your creditors with uniform courtesy, be not dumb to reason, pay when you agree to, and there will be found more sunshine than shadow.—Ex.

Negotiations are now being made to organize in Vancouver, B. C., a joint stock company to cure salmon and other fish. The company will be known as the Dean's Channel Fishing and Trading Company, Ltd., and the centre of its operation will be in Dean's Channel, in the waters of which salmon are very plentiful. The capital of the company is to be $25,000, with power to increase it to $50,000.

HOW NUTMEGS ARE GROWN.

A large stock of the very finest nutmegs for seed has been imported by Jamaica from Grenada, and has been sown in the Hope Gardens, and, when ready for distribution, will be sold at the very low rate of three-half-pence each, in large or small quantities. It is hoped that these arrangements will tend to develop the planting of nutmegs on a large scale in suitable districts in Jamaica. Already one order has been fixed for ten thousand plants, and another for five thousand.

The germination of the seed in large quantities and the care of the seedlings requires the strictest attention to prevent extensive loss. From the seed-bed the seedlings are transferred to bamboo pots, and, when they have quite recovered from the transplanting, and have formed good roots, they are ready for the nutmeg plantation.

Nutmeg trees require a deep, rich, loamy soil, moist but not swampy, with a humid atmosphere. They thrive best in steady river valleys from sea level up to three hundred or four hundred feet, but they will grow in favourable situations up to an elevation of two thousand feet. The trees should be placed at distances of twenty-five to thirty feet apart, and if the situation is not naturally shady and sheltered, trees should be planted for the purpose of breaking the wind, as well as for shade. The trees are a long time coming to maturity, not producing a crop, as a rule, till they are nine years old, and only when they first flower at six or seven years of age is it possible to determine whether they are male or female.

A very small proportion of male trees is left for fertilisation by insects, the rest are cut down and fresh plants are substituted. The fertile trees continue to produce fruit for seventy or eighty years. On an average each tree will yield ten pounds of nutmegs, and about one pound of mace every year.

The nutmegs are picked up from under the trees every day except Sunday. On being brought into the boucan, the mace is peeled off and pressed flat between heavy blocks of wood, where it is left for two or three days, then put into a case and left till it reaches proper colour. The nutmegs are put into receptacles (with fine mesh bottoms, so that the air can pass through) inside the boucan, and left there for three weeks or a month.

They are then shown the sun for a couple of hours a day, for two or three days. After this they are cracked. Great care is necessary here, for if the outside shell is struck too hard it makes a black spot in the nutmeg, which affects the value considerably. When cracked, the nuts are sorted according to size, put into ordinary flour barrels, and shipped.—Indian Agriculturist.

THE SPIDER AND THE FLY.

[C. T.—In rushing out of the fruit man's door runs up against F. the grocer.]

F.—Hello, what are you doing in there? you don't sell fruit.

C. T.—No, it is a fact, I do not but I was just in there giving that fellow a bar about closing and had quite a talk with him about package tea. He says that if the grocers did not handle it the druggist would. Do you think that they would?

F.—Well, I should smile. You can bet your last dollar they would. That is just what they would like.

C. T.—How is that?

F.—Why, they are so mad with the grocers now because of them handling patent medicines, lime juice, and toilet soaps, that they have passed a resolution not to handle anything else that the grocers handle. They are even getting up a special soap and are going to ignore all manufacturers or wholesalers who supply grocers with goods belonging to their trade. It would just be their delight to get a hold of a package tea that the grocers could not handle and they would sell a lot of it too, because people have an idea that anything you get from a drug store is better than you get anywhere else. A man came into a store the other day and seeing some sal soda in a box at the front of the counter picked up a piece and looking at it very carefully said, "That looks just the same as I get from the druggist. How much is that a pound?" "Two cents a pound" said the grocer. "Why it looks just as good as what 'I paid 5c. for 2 ounces of.'" "Well, sir," said the grocer, "that is just the same class of goods," and with that the dupe left the store a wiser man.

C. T.—Well, under those circumstances I guess the druggist would only be too glad to get a hold of it.

F.—You bet they would, but you did not tell me whether he said he would close or not.

C. T.—No, sir, not much. He began to tell me such a rigmarole about the grocers handling articles that they should not that I was glad to get out safe and sound.

F.—Ah, bother take it. That is just the trouble. Business is not classified enough. There is a friend of mine signed to close who keeps groceries and crockery. He closes regularly with the rest, but there is a man who keeps a stationery store just opposite, and with stationery he keeps crockery. Well, he doesn't close, and this friend of mine has the excruciating pleasure of seeing his customers go into this stationery store to get what crockery they want.

C. T.—That must be kind of galling. That man was just telling me that the grocers kept everything in the fruit line and now you tell me that the stationery men keep crockery. If you keep on you will drive me wild.

F.—Pshaw. That is nothing. It's a wonder that the tobacco men don't sell groceries because the grocers sell tobacco and cigars, maduro colorado, maduro obscura, and every otherura, and it's a wonder that the liquor men don't go into groceries too because some grocers handle liquor under license. And again you see some grocers keep flour and feed. One such man told me that he closed his grocery store, but when some of his customers came from a distance for feed that store was open, and if they asked him for a pound of tea he could not turn them away without it, seeing that they came 10 or perhaps 15 miles to get it.

C. T.—Well, he could send them away without it, but it would seem rather hard, and I suppose if he gave it the other grocers would kick.

F.—You bet they would. If some of them saw that, they would open up right straight and they would not get over it for a week. Oh, I tell you it's funny. In regard to a tobacconist selling groceries, nobody would think of going into a filthy tobacco store for groceries. It would take a pretty strong stomach to stand it. It would be too much for the women; they can't stand it. The men would have to do the shopping then.

C. T.—I guess they would. They kick up enough about it at home, let alone anywhere else.

F.—Then, again, the grocers handle a lot of goods that the hardware men do. They sell brooms, whisks, clothes lines, black lead, stove pipes, varnish and one or two other lines. So you see the thing is pretty well mixed up.

C. T.—Well, sir, you are right. Now I come to think I remember they do, for I have sold to the hardware trade and I noticed those goods in their stores.

F.—Of course you have, but by the way, you were talking about package teas.

C. T.—Yes.

F.—Well, I saw a letter in THE GROCER the other day about a half chest of tea that was put outside a dry goods store for sale at 5c. a pound.

C. T.—Yes, I remember that myself.

F.—Well, sir, I can tell you a little story about that. That some man sells sugar for 3c. a lb. and potatoes 3c. a peck, and I'll tell you how he does it. A man entered the store at the hour advertised, and this is worth hearing.

DRY GOODS.

Last week was an exceedingly lively one for the dry goods wholesalers, due to the fact that the millinery openings were taking place. This attracted large numbers of buyers from the far east and distant west, as well as a larger number of the merchants who reside nearer the city. All lines were in good demand, but dress goods, gloves, hosiery and underwear received special attention. On the whole, it can not be said that trade surpassed expectations; in fact, it scarcely realized them. This was not so much the fault of buyers as the over sanguine hopes of sellers. The trade nevertheless was bulky and sound and the moderate men are satisfied. Some dealers had a larger week than last year, others report a slight decrease. The nearness of the exhibition weeks may have had some effect in lessening the number of buyers. The buying was careful, and this is a cause for increased confidence. This week has opened well, and the first week of exhibition time promises well.

Collections on Monday were fairly good, everything considered. The renewals were numerous, but this was expected by those who are carefully watching changes. This year there was no barley to be sold early, and wheat is always later in being realized in cash. Hence money is not so free as in former years, when barley furnished the first moving cash. There is nevertheless no cause for apprehension and most of the firms are satisfied with the receipts.

NOTES.

Gordon, McKay & Co. are showing an extra special line of all wool druggets. These domestic goods are from the best manufacturers, and the quality and prices are worthy of the shrewd buyer's attention. They carry a full line of Kleinert's dress shields in the leading makes in stock—nette and pure gum, such as New or Yk, Paris, Kleinert, Featherweight, eGm and Calla. These are staple goods with a great many retailers and have been strongly recommended and appreciated by those who have used this make of shields. A special low line of Victoria lawns are being offered this week, and opportunities like these should not be missed.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence are having a strong sale for waterproof clothing. The tendency is to longer capes in ladies' cloaks, running nearly 30 inches. They are showing some very pretty Japanese silk shawls, both in crepe and plain, which are very delicate with their fine embroidery and slender fringes. Kid gloves, cashmere hosiery and ladies' underwear were very active during the past week, but the house reports an active trade in all lines. Dress goods in all classes seem to receive more than usual attention.

W. R. Brock & Co. have been running on two special lines of grey flannels, which have sold extremely well, and they are now at the last cases of these lines. They have had a good sale for a special line of RobRoy and broken check Canadian flannels, which seem to give much better satisfaction than imported goods of a similar make. Colored cottons are moving remarkably well for this time of the year, and several lines have been in strong demand. This house has been having a good sale for quilted satin linings for sealette garments. Kongo flannels, polka dot flannels, black Bedford cords and black broche cashmeres are fast selling lines at present.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are offering two special lines of white honeycomb quilts. These two qualities are of extra value. They also report special value in table napkins and towels. Their lines of waterproof clothing are very complete and their stock is large and comprises the finest makes known to the trade. In men's tweed waterproofs they have made an especial effort to meet the growing demand for this class of goods, and have endeavored to control a large share of the trade by close prices. Their new lines in neckwear are being very much admired, and the movement is satisfactory.

Samson, Kennedy & Co. have just received a shipment of 36-inch fancy Bergamo, Coringas, and Gardinette art muslins. They are used principally for house decorations, in the shape of peek-a-boo curtains, etc. They have also received a large range of fancy wool goods, including shawls, wool caps and hoods, booties, infants, and a large assortment of ladies' black mits. At present they are enlarging their premises by the addition of a large new shipping room, which will be fitted up in the most scientific manner to meet the increasing output which the house is now experiencing.

John Macdonald & Co. are offering extra value in damask tabling. These are generally largely sold at this season of the year, and they are in a good position to meet this season's demand in this line of staples. A large shipment of lace curtains is just being opened up, comprising medium and best quality goods. A shipment of Kensington squares is to hand, and another of chenille curtains, both of which contained some attractive goods. They have just opened up ten cases of American suspenders which are popular price goods. Every year they secure a large quantity of underwear and top shirts, which are purchased at clearing prices from the mills. These are generally designated odds and ends, and are cleared by this firm at manufacturers' prices. They have already secured lines from two mills, which are being delivered this week. In the haberdashery and silk goods departments the lines are well filled for the exhibition trade.

McMaster & Co. opened last week several cases of new novelties in dress tweeds, also blue cheviots and estinanes. Their stock of these latter is always maintained, no quality ever being allowed to run short. For a walking dress these goods are unsurpassed, as nothing will spot them, and the color is perfectly fast. They have also a full assortment of their celebrated Cravenettes in blacks and navys, also brown and grey mixtures. These are shown in several qualities, and as they are thoroughly showerproof command an ever-increasing demand. In velveteens they have received several lots during the past few days, and in their stock will be found all the prices and qualities demanded by the trade, also several scarce and new shades, including tans and greys.

The subject is worthy of the attention of all merchants in hamlet, village, town or city.

Total pack on the Skeena, 90,750 cases.

A retail grocer of this city recently bought an empty whiskey barrel to put pickles in. This will be the fourth car these enterprising shippers have despatched to Eastern railway terminal points.

We clip the following from the Manchester, England, Grocers' Review, which would seem to indicate that our friends across the salt blue sea know a good thing when they see it: "Canned Cream, which might be kept sweet for years, was counted among the impossibilities only a short time ago, while today 'Highland Evaporated Cream' is a popular table delicacy and useful article for culinary purposes. The Helvetia Milk Condensing Co., of Highland, Ill., are making it an excellent success."—Adv't.

J. D. Roberts, who is perhaps better known as "Pure Gold" Roberts, has just returned from a lengthy trip in California, and is registered at the Manor, his usual headquarters in this city. Mr. Roberts has just received word that he has been admitted as a partner in the Pure Gold Manufacturing Company, and will henceforth be general manager for the company in the west, with head-quarters in Winnipeg. Mr. Roberts has for some time been travelling in that district in the interest of the company, and has worked up a good business, thus deserving his promotion, on which he is now receiving the congratulations of his numerous friends in this city.—Vancouver News-Advertiser.

In renewing their contract for another year, The B.C. Fruit Canning Co., speak in glowing terms of THE CANADIAN GROCER as an advertising medium. Mr. Taylor, the manager of the Company, showed our representative through the establishment which is as clean as a newly made table. He is an old Torontonion, and has numbers of friends here in the east. The company's output this year will far exceed that of last, and are very popular among the consumers and trade.

The Boissevain Mills at Boissevain, Manitoba, of which Wm. Preston, and J. S. McKay are proprietors, are ready for a big years business. The mill is 4 stories high, and has a floor space on each storey 30 x 48 feet. They have an elevator, 30 x 40 feet, with a storage capacity of 30,000 bushels. The capacity of their output is 150 bbls. per day, there is a C.P.R. siding into the mill. Their brands are Turtle Mountain, Strong Bakers, Good Luck, Jura & Surprise. They have one of the most compact Mills in Manitoba, and are working up a good Eastern trade.

The reference to poisonous ingredients in confectionery, which was made in last week's issue by the contributor of the "Spider and the Fly," would no doubt be generally understood to apply only to the manufacture of adulterated goods. It would be absurd to suppose that such harmful constituents made up any part of the candy produced in our first class factories, and we should be sorry that the statement in question should suggest anything so unjust or nonsensical. The writer's intention was to arraign adulteration, and adulteration has no stronger opponents than our leading Canadian manufacturers.

G. A. Anderson and F. Barnard have bought out the grocery stock of the New York Store, in London, Ont. Mr. Anderson has been head clerk in this store for a number of years, and thoroughly understands the business, and Mr. Barnard has been in the grocery business in the East end for several years, and is well posted in the grocery business. They should make a good team. N. McLeod who held his position as clerk for a number of years with Elliott Bros., and is now with their successor J. L. Fitzgerald, has bought the grocery stock of Mr. Barnard. Mr. McLeod is well spoken of by his employers, and has had a good schooling in the business, and should get a just portion of the trade of the city and surrounding country. These changes will be completed on Monday next.

TORONTO, Sept. 8, 1892.
GROCERIES.

The time of year, the cooler weather, the Exhibition, the advance in sugar, the incoming of fall fruits, are all given as reasons for the more spirited trade that has been done this week in the wholesale grocery sales-rooms. The amount of business done clearly marks this week out as the beginning of another period in the trade of the year. In midsummer there was a large business done in sugar, but it was not profitable and it was to the exclusion of business in nearly everything else. Trade is now quite general, though chiefly in sugar of course, but there is a profit made on the sugar and there is enough movement in other lines to give an air of liveliness which contrasts favorably with the late sleepiness of the street. There still are some hindrances to the mobility of merchandise, the chief of which probably is the want of the goods. Low grade Japan teas, currants, certain brands of canned salmon, and some other lines are not to hand yet, and buying to deliver is not characteristic of the season. All the dried fruit will soon be on the move and Japan teas are on the way. The expectations of the fall trade grow brighter, or at anyrate are more brightly reflected in street talk. Payments are not fully up to jobbers' ideal, but might easily be worse.

COFFEES.

So far as Toronto wholesalers are concerned the outside coffee market is unfelt at the moment, because stocks are sufficient for such demand as has now to be met. The price of Rio coffee is firmer and higher in the primary market and in New York, and mild coffees are also ascending the price scale. The movement of the latter is probably a cause of the stiffness of the former. Dread of the cholera has caused a stoppage in the receipts of Java coffee from Holland at New York, and this both firms the price of Java and leads to an advance of some consequence in all mild South and Central American coffees. Here quotations remain as they were, that is 28 to 36c. for Java, 28c. upwards for Mocha, 26c. upwards for Padang, 22 to 26c. for Porto Ricos.

DRIED FRUIT.

Currants are still to be had, but the seller has the advantage and nobody appears to be foolish enough to cut. They are firm at 5½ to 6c. in barrels and half barrels, and there turn out to be some barrels and half barrels left though they are few in number. Cases are firm at 7¼ to 7½c. The Avlona which left, Patras on the 28th ult. is on her way to Montreal. It is impossible to say whether the paternal care of the Greek Chamber was exercised in the interests of good fruit or was intended to help out the holders of old fruit. The prohibition against shipping new fruit before the 28th of August would benefit the latter. Private advices to hand give a report that indicates firmness. They state that the small transactions that have yet been closed are based on 16s. f.o.b. for Calamata, 16s. 6d f.o.b. for Provincials, 17s. f.o.b. for Filiatras, 18s. 6d. f.o.b. for Patras. They report the crop smaller than it was expected to be, and estimate it at barely 125,000 lbs., mildew and heavy rains being debited with heavy damages to the growing fruit. The quantity supposed to be necessary for the world's food consumption is placed at 120,000, which leaves little of the crop to be used for wine making. France is said to have realized this and her wine manufacturers have pushed prices up from 36 fr. to 53 fr., with buyers but no sellers. In Valencia raisins

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

The needs of the moment are light so far as country trade is concerned but a marked improvement has come over the city demand, for which of course the Exhibition is to be credited. Staple vegetables continue to be quoted at $1 to $1.05. Country orders are mere appendages to business in sugar and general goods, and are so small and few that it might be inferred they would not be submitted at all if they had not a chance on the skirts of other goods imperatively needed. Future business in the new pack drags slowly. Some small lots have been sold the last few days and some inquiry is developing, but the price has to be made favorable to buyers before the stock changes its ownership. New peas in considerable quantities are now coming forward and have about as good a chance with current consumption as any line of canned goods on the market, for they are the only class of vegetable of which the raw material is not now plentiful and cheap. Just how the weather is going to affect the tomato pack it is of course impossible to say. The stock is now cheap, but cool nights and mornings may be adverse to its general maturing before frost comes. Fruits are steady, the pack of plums is likely to be fair-sized, as prices are now reasonable for the raw fruit, but the crop is variable over the country. Peaches promise to be dear, as the yield is rather on the short side. Pears are plentiful. The hardening of sugar just on the brink of the canning season is pretty certain to curtail the volume of fruits put up by housewives. New salmon is now in sufficient stock for current requirements. The lowest price openly quoted is $1.45, but sales at $1.42½ are readily enough made. It looks as if, despite the shortage in pack, the jobbers would follow the same foolish policy this year that they followed last. A short time ago, six or seven of the wholesale grocers here signed an agreement to keep $1.45 the minimum price for Horseshoe salmon. Very soon afterwards one of the houses assenting to this agreement was found to be selling at 1.40. This put an end to the arrangement, and $1.42½ is the price at which Horseshoe salmon can be brought to arrive. Lobster is in freer request at $1.85 to $2.75. Sardines are scarce and unchanged.

For making tomato pulp and preparing pumpkin and squash for canning is very well known to all the canners in the United States, and a few of them are in use in Canada. The high tariff has prevented their being used extensively heretofore.

We are now manufacturing these machines at Oakville, Ont., to enable our Canadian friends to obtain them without paying a heavy duty; but we shall make only a few of them unless ordered. Those who contemplate purchasing, should send their orders promptly to insure the saving of duty, as late orders will have to be filled from stock in the United States which will be subject to a 30 per cent duty.

of the new crop, business has been materially curtailed on this market, owing to a number of Denia houses of unknown and doubtful standing offering at lower prices than the best shippers can accept, and buyers, while unwilling to trust their orders to such people, hesitate to pay the prices asked by regular shippers, so that business in new crop fruit makes slow headway. Spot stock can be bought here at as low as 4½c. by retailers, who, however, as is their wont at this time of year, buy sparingly on the eve of the incoming of new fruit. The lower values ruling on Sultana raisins have brought about considerable business, and orders have been cabled this week for a good many thousand boxes. The first arrivals will be small in quantity and of very fine quality, according to sample, and will arrive on a bare market. The finest qualities are always shipped earliest, so that opening quotations are usually the highest. There is a difference of 10s. per cwt. between the highest and lowest grades. As Eleme raisins can be brought in only when Valencias are scarce, there will be none imported to this market during the present year. Figs will be about the same price as they were last year. No sales and few offerings are reported yet, but nearly all business is done on open orders.

RICE AND SPICES.

The retail call for rice does not mend its pace appreciably and has caused no depletion in any warehouses so far. B rice is quiet at 3¾ to 4c., Japan at 5 to 5½c. Sago is still scarce. Tapioca is unchanged.

Spices are quiet. Some movement is expected now under the demand for pickling that will begin when fruits and vegetables treated by that process are ready. Prices are unchanged.

SUGAR.

The sugar market has risen superior to the control of the Trust manipulators in New York, and has completely thrown off the bears at all points. The advance in the price of raw has had a singular corrective effect upon Toronto jobbers. They had indulged their propensity for cutting, to the top of its bent, but before they had drunk the cup quite to its dregs they began to yearn with one consent for fuller prices, and had begun to get them, though only tentatively as it were. Then the market took the bit in its teeth, the price of raw went up, refiners had to advance, and jobbers joined the procession. They are now getting 4¾ to 5c. for granulated and 3¾ to 4½c. for yellow. They have to pay 4¾c. in Montreal, freight is 14c. a hundredweight, so that cost laid down here is equal to 4.89c. They would lose money if present stocks cost them the prices now current at the refineries, but as they were for the most part bought before the advance, they are making a little. In New York, granulated is 5.13c. The cause of the advance is the dependence of American refiners upon cane sugar for raw material. The alternative they had in beet sugar enabled them to keep down the price of raw cane sugar, but the embargo upon beet sugar and everything else from Hamburg and other European ports since the cholera spread to these ports, has put beet sugar off the market for the time being. The demand for sugar now for canning fall fruits is very active and has been materially quickened by the tendency of sugar to go still higher. Raw sugars in stock here are quoted at 3¾c. for Barbados and 4¾ to 4½c. for Demeraras. Willett & Gray's weekly "statistical" has the following: Total stock in all the principal countries, at latest uneven dates, 761,010 tons against 763,224 tons at same uneven dates last year. Stock in Havana and Matanzas, by cable, is 75,000 tons, against 92,000 tons last week.

The market gained strength daily until 3½c. was paid for 95° test centrifugals, at which nearly all of this description remaining in stock here was taken. This price being the equivalent of 3.9-16c. for 96°, usual terms shows an advance of 3-16c. for the week and of 5-16c. during the past fortnight. The cause of this rapid advance have been the small available supply to meet the very large consumption of the country, and the possibility that the delivery of a portion of such supply might be delayed by quarantine regulations, in consequence of the cholera now raging in Europe. The refiners however, have bought heavily here and in Cuba, and this large stock, with previous purchases elsewhere and now afloat, will make their position secure unless the troubles in Europe should increase and continue beyond present expectations. Importers' stocks here and in Cuba are so much reduced that the refiners must look to Europe for a large proportion of their fresh supplies, and the indications are that the market will remain strong for some time. Mr. Licht's report, just received by mail, shows that 62,500 tons of beet-root sugar was shipped or loaded from the 3rd to the 20th of August for America and Canada, and charters taken for 30,000 tons more for shipment in September. He cabled, after the late drought was ended, that the condition of the growing beet crop was disappointing. The stock in Hamburg on August 24 was reported to be 52,500 tons. According to mail advices from Europe, 71,900 tons of Java sugar is afloat for Europe and America. Several cargoes of this sugar should arrive here shortly, having cleared during July. An advance of ¼c. followed the upward movement in raws. This caused the demand to fall off slightly, but a good business is doing, and the people of the country are receiving their supplies as fast as needed. The higher grades are still required in larger proportions than formerly, thus neglecting the lowest grades, the prices for which remain unchanged. Buyers may feel assured that present prices will be maintained, with the possibility of a further moderate advance should raws continue to improve, as is now expected. At the close the demand is very heavy. German granulated is not obtainable for September shipment.

UNITED STATES FOOD EXPOSITION.

For the first time in the history of the United States a great National exhibition of food products will be held, showing the progress made by the country in the past four hundred years, and demonstrating the fact that it is the greatest food-producing country in the world. The date of October, 1892, was selected for holding the Exposition on account of its being the four-hundredth anniversary of the Discovery of America, which it is proposed to celebrate in this way. This will be the first strictly Food Exposition ever held, either in America or abroad, the exhibits being confined exclusively to food products, the manufacturer only being allowed to exhibit, and only such manufactured articles of food as the manufacturer will put his name upon and warrant to be the same as he offers to the public. Not alone will manufactured food be exhibited, but produce direct from the soil, sea and dairy. One of the most novel attractions of the Exposition, and what promises to be a popular feature, will be the exhibit of dairy products.

There will be two such exhibits, one, a New York State exhibit, under the auspices of the N. Y. State Dairy Commissioner, and the other a National exhibit, in charge of Professor James Cheesman, who represented the Agricultural Department of the United States Government at the Paris Exposition. It is proposed to devote nearly the entire Exposition Hall, which is over ten thousand square feet, to this department of the Exposition.

The vast amphitheatre, with a floor space of about thirty thousand square feet, will be given over almost entirely to manufactured articles of food. Here will be represented nearly all the leading food manufacturers of the United States, as well as a number from abroad, many of whom will give practical demonstrations as to how their goods are prepared. The booths to be erected in the amphitheatre promise to be of the most elaborate nature, far surpassing anything of the kind ever held in this country. In this great auditorium, the largest in the United States, the world-renowned musical director and composer, Herr Anton Seidl, with his famous orchestra, will give two concerts daily, afternoon and evening, during the Exposition, Mr. Seidl personally conducting at every performance. Ample provision has been made for handling the immense crowds who will congregate here at all hours during the Exposition. In addition to the large number of avenues and aisles on the main floor, as well as the promenades on the first, second and third balconies, there will be accommodations for from twenty-five hundred to three thousand people who desire to listen to the Seidl concerts after having viewed the many attractions of the Exposition.

The next in importance—and by many, the ladies in particular, it will be considered the feature of the Exposition—will be the Concert Hall, the handsomest and most artistic public hall in the country. In order to make this department easier of access from the amphitheatre, a contract has already been made for the erection of a grand double stairway, modeled after the entrance to the Grand Opera House at Paris, which will be built on either side and directly over the main entrance to the amphitheatre on the

of her lectures with a concert by the Seidl Orchestra. This hall has a seating capacity of twelve hundred, besides thirty-six boxes. There will be no extra charge of admission to these special lectures and concerts, one ticket admitting to every part of the Exposition, the price of which will be fifty cents. It is intended, however, to auction off the boxes, the purchasers of which will be entitled to

WHERE THE EXPOSITION IS TO BE HELD, MADISON SQ. GARDEN, N.Y.

Madison Avenue side. This stairway will lead directly into the Concert Hall, where the lectures and demonstrations in cooking will be given by Miss Maria Parloa, of Boston, the distinguished lecturer in the art of cooking. Miss Parloa is an authority on all matters pertaining to the culinary art and the science of cooking, and she stands unrivaled at the head of her profession. Miss Parloa will lecture each afternoon of the Exposition, and it is intended to precede each five season tickets to the Exposition.

Overlooking the Concert Hall, from which a wide staircase ascends, is the Assembly Room, which will be used as a ladies' or ladies' and gentlemen's restaurant.

On the ground floor, corner of Madison Avenue and Twenty-sixth Street, is the large restaurant, which will be devoted to a cafe or gentlemen's gill-room.

The interest manifested in this great Food Exposition extends all over the United States.

THE CANADIAN GROCER

The press, clergy, and professional men generally, the housewife, merchant and general public, all evince the greatest interest in the undertaking. Almost a ton of mail, and from nearly every section of this country, has been received by the General Manager endorsing the undertaking. The wholesale grocers in particular—and there are several thousand of them in the United States—express themselves as cordially endorsing the enterprise and wishing it the best of success, a great many of whom have promised to attend. From far-off Wyoming, Texas and Oregon, such letters have been received.

It is confidently believed that over half a that a number of Canadian merchants will visit New York in October and take in this Exposition.

SWEET FUEL.

The very low price of domestic molasses has already led to its free use for distillation into alcohol, and consumption for that purpose is increasing. The outlet, however, does not appear to provide an adequate balance for the supply, especially at primal points, and a suggestion is made that the surplus may be made useful as fuel. Since the bounty law on sugar went into effect the effort to extract every ounce of sugar has materially increascontains, say 20 per cent water, 8 per cent ash, 12 per cent gums and 60 per cent sucrose and glucose. Hence we have 72 per cent of carbonaceous matter available as fuel and only 20 per cent of water. This would certainly make excellent fuel if there were competent devices to burn it, such as are used for liquid fuels. Molasses has recently been used for fuel in Cuba, and with seeming success. It was there poured or sprayed on to the bagasse as it entered the furnace, and the judgments of those interested was that its efficiency as fuel when used in this way, was incontestable."

It is a well recognised fact that no business establishment is complete without some million of our most intelligent people will visit the exposition.

This great congress of food products will be opened on Saturday evening, October 1st next, by the President of the United States, who will be present on that occasion, should nothing interfere to prevent.

The Exposition opens at 11 A.M. and closes at 11 P.M., and run from October 1st to 27th, Sundays excluded.

For further information, address, DANIEL BROWNE, General Manager, Hudson and Franklin Sts., New York, who was seen by our representative in New York last week. He said "we would like to see a few train loads of Canadians visit us while the Exposition is going on, and you can tell your readers that we will try and make their visit both instructive and interesting if they can see their way clear to visit us." There is little doubt but ed the supply of low grade molasses practically useless for food, and with an estimated output for 1892 of 120,000 tons there is more or less anxiety as to its disposition. The Louisiana "Planter," in advocating some plan whereby the stuff can be used for fuel, remarks as follows: "Molasses is now as low or lower than ever, two cents per gallon hardly being obtainable for it. Of heavy-bodied molasses 166 $\frac{2}{3}$ gallons will weigh a short ton of 2,000 pounds. This would make full cost \$3.33c. per ton on the plantations, and rather less per ton than current prices for coal delivered there. The question would then arise as to the fuel value of molasses. As it is almost altogether carbonaceous matter it must have a considerable fuel value, but its relative merits as compared with bituminous coal we have no data at hand to determine. Heavy-bodied common Louisiana

Merchants throughout the country, who give it a trial, may satisfy themselves of its merits, feeling satisfied that where once introduced it would never be parted with.

MARKETS—Continued

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups are in very fair demand and are firmer in sympathy with sugar. The stock on this market is larger than it was a week ago.

In molasses there is little movement. The call is principally for low grades now at 28 to 33c., and these are most abundant in New Orleans descriptions.

TEAS.

There is less heard about the inexorable firmness of sellers and prices, but it still remains a fact that sellers have the advantage if they choose to hold on to it. Competition among them is a factor that is favorable to buyers, however. The want of low grade stock is some hindrance to business, as it is undoubted that buying on the part of retailers is freer from stock than to arrive. Low grade teas are on the way and some mediums of popular selling character are close at hand. China teas hold their own in the London market. Superior Indian teas are also well held and in good demand. The new green teas still consist of Ping Sueys only. It is reported by telegraph that the steamer Anglia with about 10,000 chests of Indian tea on board was lost a few days out from Calcutta. This loss would materially affect the market.

MARKET NOTES.

[Importers, wholesale merchants and manufacturers should send any items intended for this department so that they may reach the head office not later than Wednesday morning. The editor will always welcome such information.]

W. T. Harris, Chatham, N. B., dealer in general merchandise, offers 200 cases canned lobsters, also dried cod of finest quality.

Sales have been made in New York of new pack Canadian blueberries at $1.12½, delivered, for 2-lb tins. Gallons are quoted there at $4.60 delivered.

Eby, Blain & Co. received the first shipment, yesterday, of new Valencia raisins, Bevan's pack. These are the first 100 boxes that reached this market. Stock is very fine.

The Cape Cod cranberry crop is said to be 30,000 barrels less than last season, and 30,000 barrels larger than any previous season. In view of the small apple crop there will probably be a wide outlet this fall.

Game, Harrison & Lerner, Ltd., of London, Eng., have appointed H. C. Duncum, for many years assistant manager of their export department, to take the management of the department in the place of A. K. Preston, lately resigned.

Davidson & Hay have received a large supply of barrels and half-barrels of Redpath's honey syrup. They have also received shipments of new season canned peas, the Erie Sweet Wrinkled and Ontario Marrowfats. They expect to have in some fine new medium Japan teas by the first of next week.

Reports from the Skeena river state that the canneries have all closed down there with packs of between 11,000 and 12,000 cases. Reports from the Fraser river state that the canneries in operation have so far only put up about one-quarter of the pack agreed upon. It is considered likely that cohorts will be packed this year as the run of the sockeye salmon is about over, and this will be about the only means they can have to fill their pack. The Fisheries Department has extended the open season for small mesh fishing to September 1st, and it is believed the season will be further extended to September 15th, in order to allow the packers to make the most of the late run, should one come along.—B.C. Commercial Register.

The scarcity of desirable coffee appears to be quite as great in England as here, and a recent London market report says that large parcels of suitable descriptions of coffee for either the home trade or exporters are quite a rarity now, as the market is merely supplied with odds and ends of indifferent and undesirable quality.

The health department of the city of New York has caused to be published some timely recommendations as to diet while the cholera epidemic threatens to gain a foothold in this country. Among other advice from that quarter is the following. "Thorough cooking destroys the cholera germs; therefore, don't eat raw, uncooked articles of any kind, not even milk." This is doubtless intended to apply chiefly to the preparation of raw meats, vegetables and fruits. It is obvious, however, that the advice is a strong argument in favor of the use of canned food products. The processing of nearly everything in that line sterilizes the goods, at all events, and the fact that the food is in hermetically sealed cans is also a strong point, since no chance is offered for the germs of disease to touch the contents of the cans. This matter has been the subject of not a little discussion among local canned goods men during the past few days, and the deeper the matter is looked into, the stronger seems to be the conviction that the idea is no purely theoretical or visionary affair. Its application is wide, and unless the notes of warning sounded by the health authorities regarding the use of green fruit and vegetables and natural milk are far-fetched, the claims of the canned goods people are at least deserving of more than passing notice. However, it does not appear that handlers of the goods have taken other than a philosophical view of the matter. That is to say, no speculative tendency has developed, and the only movement in values thus far is brought about solely by natural trade conditions.—New York Commercial Bulletin.

PETROLEUM.

Sales are rather better as to volume, but are still at prices ruling last week. Canadian refined continues to quote at 14 to 14½ to outside buyers, and is ½c. higher delivered to city retailers.

The Petrolia Advertiser reports: Petrolia crude $1.26 per barrel; Oil Springs crude $1.27 per barrel. Since we last went to press, prices for both crude oil and refined are a good deal firmer, which is a natural advance for the season of the year. The operations on the exchange the past week

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

Prices do not harden in the flour market and the movement does not increase. Millers are still far from free sellers at bidders' prices but they realize that on the other side of the market lies the advantage. Enough selling and shipping go on to keep the advantage on the side of buyers. Feed is not in any material respect different from what it was a week ago.

FLOUR.—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.80 to $5.90; strong bakers', $4.40; white wheat patents, $4.70; straight roller, $4.25; low grades, per bag, $1.25 to $1.50.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.60 to $4.65; Manitoba strong bakers' $4.20 to $4.30; Ontario patents, $3.65 to $4.10; straight roller, $3.50 to $3.70; extra, $3.15 to $3.25; low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.50.

MEAL—Oatmeal is $3.80. Cornmeal is $3.50.

FEED—Bran is $11.50 to $12.50, shorts $13 to $14, mixed feed $22, feeding corn 50, oats 33c.

HAY—Old baled timothy is firm at $12 on track. New is $9.

STRAW—Is steady at $6.50 to $7.

MONTREAL.

There is no change to note in the flour market. A fair local trade is doing in straight rollers and strong bakers. Other grades are very dull. We quote as follows: Patent spring, $4.60 to $4.70; patent winter, $4.25 to $4.50; straight roller, $3.90 to $4.10; extra, $3.40 to $3.50; superfine, $3.00 to $3.15; fine, $2.60 to $2.75; strong bakers, $4.10 to $4.25.

A fair turnover for local wants is noted in meal, outside of which demand is slow. Granulated, bbls $4.10 to $4.25; rolled bbls., $4.10 to $4.25; Standard, bbls., $3.95 to $4.05; granulated in bags, $2.00 to $2.10; rolled in bags, $2.00 to $2.10; standard in bags, $1.90 to $2.00.

Bran and shorts are unchanged. Local demand being fairly active, mouille moves slowly. Bran per ton, $13.00 to $13.50; shorts per ton, $14.00 to $15.00; mouille per ton, $19.00 to $22.00.

have again shown the extreme susceptibility of the speculative market to buying and selling influences and its utter disregard to factors which should, under normal trading conditions, affect values. To this condition of the market the lack of outside influence may be attributed, as few care to risk operations in an article that is not governed by the ordinary conditions of supply and demand. The statistical situation, and the production and demand, having but little effect on the price, outside operations are at a loss on what to base values, and not being able to see the causes which influence the changes, are loth to become victims of the speculative manipulators, hence they let oil severely alone.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

There is no relaxation of the stiffness of prices for choice butter, which is exchangeable for as much as 18c. if it is of choice quality in the form of dairy tub. Equally good butter in large rolls will not bring so much, as it is shipping stock that is wanted. Buyers for export are still takers of nearly all descriptions, but medium to choice are the preferred grades. Low grade stock is rather more plentiful and less valued, 12 to 13c. being the prices generally going. Medium is 14 to 16c., choice 16 to 18c. The local demand is good on account of the Exhibition. Store-packed tubs are salable at 15 to 17c. if they contain select stock. Creamery tubs are out of sight as far as sale for extensive consumption at this point is concerned, and as this is not an export outlet for them there is little business to report. Tub and crocks of creamery butter sell at from 21 to 23c.

Cheese is in very good local demand and is quite firm at 10 to 10½c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Business is light at $1 to $1.20. The demand has shrunk further within itself as the season for renewal from the new crop approaches.

DRIED AND EVAPORATED APPLES—The call for dried apples is slack at 4½ to 5c. as to quality for ordinary trade lots, but less would have to be taken for quantities. Evaporated are equally dull at 6½ to 7c.

EGGS—New laid eggs are the kind that consumers want, and are worth 12c. Any other description of eggs sells with difficulty at nominal prices.

HONEY—Extracted is 7 to 9c., sections are 12 to 14c. Some demand for local consumption is reported, but otherwise business is backward.

HOPS—Such stock of the '91 crop as is yet held quotes at 18 to 20c., and '90 hops are nominal. Growers are expected to put new crop stock on the market this week yet. A considerable quantity has been bought for delivery here early this month.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market has received no special stimulus from the demand this week. Trade is satisfactory, however. The price of long clear was found to be something of a deterrent to trade, and it has been brought back to 7½ and 8c. In no other particular has there been any change in prices.

BACON—Long clear is 7¾ to 8c., smoked backs are 11¾ to 12c., bellies 11½c., rolls 9 to 9½c.

HAMS—Are steady at 12 to 12½c.

LARD—Pure is unchanged at 9½ to 9¾c. for tubs and pails. Compound is steady at 7¾ to 9c.

BARREL PORK—U. S. heavy mess is $15 to $16, Canadian $16, short cut $16.50 to $17.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef is 4½ to 5c. in fore and 7½ to 8½c. in hindquarters, mutton is 7 to 7½c. Lamb 8½ to 10c., mutton 6 to 7½c., veal 7½ to 9c.

VEGETABLES.

Potatoes are steady at $1.25 to $1.40 per barrel and 65c. per bag. Malta onions are $2.50 to $3 per hamper. Watermelons are $20 to $22 per hundred, muskmelons are $3 per barrel. Sweet potatoes are $4 to $4.50 per barrel. Tomatoes are 10 to 20c. a basket. Cucumbers are 15c. a basket. Celery is 25c. a doz.

GREEN FRUIT.

The market is almost literally bare of oranges. Stocks of Rodis are all but exhausted and Jamaicas are not to hand yet. Fruit importers do not care to buy for replenishing stocks at the present moment as they might thereby come into possession of stock too dear to sell a week after purchasing. They would have to pay about $8 a box for Rodis, and they expect Jamaicas to be much lower in a short time. Retailers would have to pay $8 to $9 for any of the oranges now in stock here. Maiori lemons are plentiful but dear, $9 being the figure now quoted. Verdellis are $8 to $8.50, and Messinas are the same price, but are virtually done. Bananas are moderately active at $1.25 to $1.50. Bartlett pears are 50 to 70c. a basket and $4 to $5 a barrel. The prices of lower grades taper down to 20c. a basket, that figure being quoted for a sort called the hog pear. Apples are $1.50 per barrel. Peaches are $1.60 per basket. Grapes quote from 3 to 4c. In plums 75c. to $1.25 is the range, prices being pretty much the same for gages blue plums and other descriptions.

FISH.

The demand is well kept up, but fish are not more plentiful. Salmon trout and white fish have advanced ½c. quoting now at 7½c., lake herring are unchanged at $2. to 2.50 per hundred, and salmon are firm at 17 to 18c.

SALT.

Everything is steady in the salt market. Prices Current call for no change.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW.

HIDES—No. 1 green cows', are 4½c., and the same grade of green steers' is 5c. Cured are ½c. more in each case.

SKINS—Lambskins and pelts are 5c. dearer, now bringing 55c. Calfskins, 5 to 7c.

WOOL—Fleeces are 17c. for clothing grades and 19 to 20c. for combing. Pulled is 22c. for super, 25 to 26c. for extra super.

TALLOW—Is 2c.; rendered is bought at 5c., and sold at 5¼ to 5½c.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, Sept. 8, 1892.

The tone of the grocery market is pretty much the same this week as it was last. All the heavies having about the same movement. Sugar shows a decidedly firmer tendency and refiners are inclined to talk stiff as regards values. Coffee is also held firm under a good steady demand rice is about in the same position. In green fruit there has been a good steady trade done during the week, in fact all lines are precisely the same as noted in our last. The wholesale trade report their men doing a nice steady trade in all sections. Payments are the same.

CANNED GOODS.

The local demand for canned goods is still very small, grocers only taking enough to fill their immediate wants. Packers are offering new pack tomatoes at 85c. to 87½c., but no transactions are reported. The combine claim to be sold out of British-American salmon and are now offering one or two off brands, which are supposed to be "white stock," at $1.17½, but none have been so far sold in this market. One dealer estimates the stock of old tomatoes in this market at 3,000 cases.

SUGAR.

The local sugar market still shows the firm tendency noted last week. Advices from New York and London report a firm market in both. The refiners here claim to be doing a nice steady trade at firm figures. We have to note quite a few lots changing hands during the week. The wholesale trade are now selling at our figures in most cases. Regarding the cutting some of the trade are shading and some are said to be selling at cost. This no doubt is done to push other lines that there is more profit in. The sugar market here is on a decided better footing now. We quote granulated 4½ to 4 9-16c.; yellows, low grade 3½ to 3¾c., and yellows bright 3¾ to 4¼c.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups have moved in fair quantities during the week, and we have to note sales of both Canadian and American. In molasses there has not been much doing owing to the light stocks in store here. Barbados is quoted at 33 to 39c., but it is reported that some of the firms are selling at 31½c. Stocks of this line are heavy in Quebec, and one or two of our local brokers are filling orders from that point. We quote American syrup 23 to 25c. according to quality, Canadian 1¾ to 2½ per lb., molasses 31 to 33c.

TEAS.

The Japan tea market is as dull as ditch water just at present. The prices asked by brokers here are thought to be rather high by our wholesalers and as the stock coming in is not as good as it might be they do not feel inclined to take hold freely. The brokers are all very firm in their ideas and say prices are likely to advance. The arrivals here so far have not been large and with firm advices from Japan the holders here think they are safe. The damaged stock ex Empress of India is expected here soon.

COFFEE.

Coffees have shown a slightly better demand than last week, and quite a few lots have changed hands. Values here are held firm, and advices from primary points say the same. We quote as follows:—Rios 18 to 20c.; Java, 23 to 25c.; Mocha, 24 to 25c.; Jamaica, 19 to 21c.; and Maracaibo, 22½ to 23c.; Santos, 17½ to 19c.

RICE.

The demand for rice has not been as good as it was last week, nevertheless several lots have moved. The mills say trade is not quite up to the average this year. We quote as follows: Standard $4 to $4.10, Japan $4.50 to $5, Patnas $4.50 to $5, and Carolinas $7 to $8 per hundred pounds.

NUTS.

Nuts are beginning to move in fair quantities. Stocks here are light and merchants are inclined to talk firm. New grenobles have advanced this week. Ivicas are held firm under very light stocks. The following are the quotations:—Almonds Tarragona 14 to 15c.; almonds, Ivica, 14 to 15c.; almonds, common, 10 to 11c.; almonds, hard-shell, 7 to 8c.; walnuts, Grenoble, new 13 to 14c.½.; walnuts, French 10 to 10½c.; cocoanuts per 100 $3.75 to $4.00; filberts 9 to 10c. pecans 16 to 17c.; peanuts 7 to 10c.

MONTREAL MARKETS—Continued.

DRIED FRUITS.

Dried fruit is still quiet, merchants are patiently waiting for the new pack to arrive and till they come not much can be said about this line. The first steamer will leave Dena on or about 15th of this month, and when it arrives it will strike a bare market. We quote:—Currants, provincials, $4\frac{1}{4}$ to $4\frac{1}{2}$ c. in bbls.; do. $4\frac{1}{2}$ to $4\frac{3}{4}$ c. in half bbls.; do. $4\frac{3}{4}$ c. in cases; currants, Patras, 5c. in bbls.; do. $5\frac{1}{4}$ c. in bbls.; do. $5\frac{1}{2}$ c. in cases. Raisins, Valencias, $4\frac{1}{2}$ c., Sultanas $7\frac{1}{2}$ c. prime stock.

GREEN FRUIT.

The green fruit market is still the same with a nice steady trade doing in all lines. The fruit sales we have been having lately have to some extent built up this fruit market. Quite a lot of Canadian basket fruit is now arriving and meeting with good demand. Lemons have dropped in price during the week and are held a good deal lower under fair stock and good demand. Bananas are still in good demand at the old figures. Most of the fruit handled here now is brought in via Boston. There will be a boat in the first of next week with a cargo composed of bananas and oranges. Pears, plums and peaches are meeting with good call, the same can be said about all other lines. We quote: Lemons $6 to $6.50; California peaches $1.75 to $2 per box; Southern peaches $3 to $4; Western peaches 75c. $1; California pears $2 to $3; plums $2.50 to $3 per crate; bananas $1 to $1.50 per bunch; Bartlett pears $4 to 55c per bbl.; Canadian basket fruit pears 50c. to $1; plums 75c. to $1; grapes 6 to 7c. per lb; black berries 13 to 14c.

APPLES.

Apples are in about the same demand at a little firmer figures. Stocks are arriving here in fair quantities. As yet very few have been expected. Dried and evaporated are still quiet. We quote apples \$1.50 to \$2, and baskets 20 to 25c. Evaporated 6 to $6\frac{1}{2}$ c., and dried $4\frac{1}{2}$ to 5c.

HONEY.

Honey is still quiet, the only thing of interest was the sale of some large lots of dark stock. We do not know what it brought but think it is under our quotations. We quote strained bright 7 to $8\frac{1}{2}$ c., dark 6 to 7c., comb bright $8\frac{1}{2}$ to 10c., dark 7 to 9c.

HOPS.

Hops are still dull and featureless with only a fair jobbing trade doing confined to local wants. Pressed hops are moving in fair quantities. We quote 25c for bulk and 17 to 18c for pressed.

FISH.

Fish is about the same as noted last week a few small lots of green cod has been moved at $4.75 to $5.00 per barrel and dry cod at the same figure per quintal. We quote as follows:—Smoked Yarmouth bloaters, per 60 box, $1.00 to $1.10; St. John's bloaters, per 100 box, 80c. to $1.00; boneless cod, large boxes, 6 to 7c.; do. small boxes 7 to 8c.; finnan haddies 7 to 8c.

We quote No. 1 herring, per brl., $4.50 to $4.60; lake trout, per half brl., $4.00 to $4.25; sea trout, per bbl., $8.25 to $8.75; codfish, green, No. 1, per bbl. $4.75 to $5.00; do. No. 2, per bbl., $4.25 to $4.50; codfish, dried, per bbl., $4.25 to $4.50; salmon, B.C., per bbl., $13 to $13.50; do. Nfld., No. 1, per tee, $22.50 to $23; do. do., No. 2, per tee, $21 to $21.50; do. do., No. 3, per tee, $20 to $20.50.

CHEESE AND BUTTER.

Cheese shows little change. Cable advices to-day did not indicate much change, limits for the most part being unworkable for strictly finest. There was business doing, however, in stock moveable at $9\frac{3}{4}$ c., and this is still the market here. At the wharf offerings from the French country aggregated 3,000 boxes, the range for them being $9\frac{3}{4}$ c. to $9\frac{1}{2}$ c., with possibly a 1-16c. more in some cases.

Butter did not furnish anything new to-day. Creamery is heavy with a large supply, 21 to $21\frac{1}{2}$ c. being the export idea, and holders of strictly gilt edge stock would not make any money at these prices. Townships' dairy moves at 18c. and Western at 16c.

EGGS.

There is little or nothing doing in the egg market. So far there has not been many exported, and stock is moving in a local way. Prices are however held steady viz., 11 to 12c.

PROVISIONS.

The local provision market has been quiet during the week, the demand being only small. Lard and smoked meats are in about the same position. We quote the following: Canadian short cut, per brl. \$16.75 to \$17.50; mess pork, western, per brl. \$16.00 to \$16.50; short cut, western, per brl. \$00.00 to \$00.00; hams, city cured, per lb. 11c. to $11\frac{1}{4}$ c.; lard, Canadian, in pails $8\frac{1}{4}$ to $8\frac{1}{2}$ c.; bacon, per lb. $9\frac{1}{4}$ to $10\frac{1}{4}$ c.; lard, com refined, per lb. 7 to $7\frac{1}{4}$ c.

GRAIN.

Grain locally is still quiet. There is a small movement in peas and oats. The stocks of grain and flour in store in Montreal show a decrease of 100,000 bushels of wheat, 18,930 bushels of corn, 35,258 bushels of peas, 103,943 bushels of oats, 11,616 bushels of barley, and an increase of 1,510 bbls. of flour compared with a week ago. Compared with a year ago there is an increase of 121,345 bushels of wheat, 40,513 bushels of peas, 210,104 bushels of oats, 47,637 bushels of barley, and a decrease of 5,942 bushels of rye and 3,160 bbls. of flour.

DRY GOODS.

Business in the dry goods trade continues to show a satisfactory improvement from day to day. Retailers who have been in town from the west speak so hopefully of the harvest that it makes the trade here feel good. The trade here anticipate a good fall. The millinery opening, which took place last week, proved a decided success. The styles shown were so nice they met with the approval of most of the trade. Travellers in millinery are now out, and the dry goods are home.

MONTREAL TRADE CHAT.

C. H. Burks has just returned from the Lower Provinces. He reports trade good down that way.

The Lady Charlotte Gelatine Co. say they are going to sell more of their popular brand than ever this year.

J. A. Mair, of the Helvetia Milk Condensing Co., was in town last week. He appointed L. H. Dobbin eastern agent for his firm.

A carload of maple sugar has been shipped from Quebec for San Francisco.

The German manufacturers' agents are going to have a nice time, as all their goods now are coming in late. One firm here says they have some goods coming which will be hard to pass through.

A. Desorveau was married last week.

The happy couple spend their honeymoon in New York.

Ed. Elliott is getting ready for the oyster season. He handles a big lot of them.

Several western retail men were in town during the week. They were sorting up their stock.

Frasier, Viger & Co. have taken off two of their country teams. They have only one running now.

The coming exhibition will be a success. The committee are working hard to make it one.

J. Scanlan has done up all the front of his store in the new.

People familiar with the American Sugar Refining Company's business declare that it is making a profit of over \$80,000 net per day. They figure in this way: The present daily output is 35,000 barrels of an average of 300 pounds each. The company pays an average of 3 6 16 cents for raw sugar and sells refined for an average of 4 13-16 cents. The cost of refining is about $\frac{3}{4}$ of a cent a pound, which leaves a profit over and above all expenses of 13-16 of a cent a pound, or \$85,050 per day.

The large quantity of tobacco seized at Ottawa in several leading grocery stores by Inland Revenue officers as not being kept in accordance with the regulations of the law, is still under seizure pending the decision of the department in the different cases. It is understood that where it is shown the violation of law was unintentional the tobacco will only be confiscated, but if the department has any ground to believe that it was for the purpose of fraud the party concerned will be prosecuted.

Writing on the subject of China's tea trade the Hong Kong Daily Press says that the Chinese have the most erroneous ideas as to the reasons which have brought about the depression in China's trade. They believe amongst other things that foreigners bought up such large quantities of tea four or five years ago that they have been unable to make room in the market for any more; and that by and by the demand will increase again. Of course this is the most disastrous impression which could well be harboured, as so long as it is entertained, the Chinese are not likely to make any serious effort for the revival of their tea-trade to prevent its entire extinction in time. The Daily Press finds no difficulty in attributing the depression to the oppressive lekin charges now levied upon the Chinese teas, which consequently stand no chance with the lightly taxed Indian and Ceylon teas. The export duty ought of course to be abolished, but our China contemporary confesses that the chances of the Chinese Government viewing it in that light are rather remote.

The outlook upon the Fraser is very much brighter than at the opening of the year, and the reports of business from New Westminster show an encouraging revival in trade. The steamer Barbara Boscowitz returned this morning from the north with 4,000 cases of salmon and passengers. All the canneries, with the exception of those on Alert Bay, were closed down. Nothing had been heard from the Forks of the Skeena, where it was expected that the Indians would attempt to stop the steamer Caledonia from landing.—News-Advertiser.

SELFISH CLERKS.

In many retail stores, says an exchange, there exists an evil which many good merchants complain of and a few possibly have not discovered—the habit of some salesman for purely personal and selfish motives attempting to monopolize the trade of customers by deceiving them into the belief that he or she, as the case may be, can do better by them than other salesmen in the same store, and customers so deceived and prejudiced will sit and wait for hours in some cases for their favorite salesman. Other and better salesmen in meantime may offer to serve them, but they invariably receive the reply,

"I will wait for Mr. Jones," and in some cases Salesman Jones has so thoroughly prejudiced customers that they will go to another store to do their shopping rather than allow another salesman or even the proprietor to serve them, which is very discouraging to an honestly aspiring salesman, and a great loss to the proprietor. This very bad state of affairs is brought about by Salesman Jones, who quietly and slyly says to customers who chance to fall into his hands, "When you come again call for me and I will do better by you than others can," etc.

The many bad results of such a practice are very apparent and should be corrected at once. Such a salesman is an unprofitable and a dangerous element and should be discharged if found necessary to the correction of the evil.

Customers should be made to feel that they will be served alike by all salesmen, and that the proprietor alone is responsible for all transactions. This will encourage salesmen, promote harmony among them and increase their sales.

Advertisers and Subscribers may have their correspondence addressed to the care of any of our offices and they are invited to use them at any time. At the Head office, Toronto, a place is set apart where they can see all the latest newspapers and the latest issues of trade papers from all parts of the world, where they can do their correspondence or obtain any information. Parcels may also be directed to the Head office.

The deadbeat fraternity are like the camp-followers of an army. They are too much despised to be thought worth excluding from the lines, and so are able to forage in the very camp while the contestants are engaged. Traders are so engrossed with their competitive warfare upon each other that they overlook these plunderers, and allow them to slip in and out between sentries the same as those who present the passport of cash at every point. It is the loose order that is constantly maintained by the grocery trade which enables these gentry to do so much mischief. It is not the individual traders who give them credit that are to be held responsible for the flourishing of the dead-beat class. Each dealer uses what caution, and what judgment he can to keep worthless accounts off his books. The fault lies in the lack of communication between traders, for it is only by such communication that it is possible to close the gaps through which deadbeats enter and carry off the substance of trusting creditors. It is not the fault of the grocer, therefore, but it is the unbridged void between him and his neighbor grocer that is the cause of so many unworthy customers getting into so many worthy traders. If there were lines of communication well established throughout the trade, dead beats could be easily repulsed from shops that they now as easily get a foot-hold in. Grocers should make common cause in this matter if they will not in any other. But they seem little disposed to do so, even when they are members of the same association. Instead of a fraternal readiness to warn a fellow-grocer against a customer that is discovered to be a deadbeat, the discoverer is rather inclined to want company in his misfortune. He has lost money through taking up this customer, and it will tend to equalize matters between him and his competitor if the latter also incurs some loss. Warning is therefore not freely given by one trader to another. It is a mistaken idea that the withholding of such information is good policy. Your rival gets through with bad customers who will turn up at your counter and try to become your debtors if you have no knowledge of them, and if there is give and take between you and your competitors on such matters, you will have small loss through deadbeats. A black list that every merchant contributes to honestly and fully, stops a big leak in the trade of a town or city, if the compiler has all the books of the local trade to skim his information from. One in each town, village, or city would permit of a wide interchange of information between all points whence and whether deadbeats migrate. Thus they could easily be forestalled at every new town they would strike, if bureaus of information of the sort described were in existence everywhere.

* * *

The strict nursery of the last generation of grocers, in which the young of the trade imbibed their earliest and most lasting commercial ideas was the apprentice system. Under this system the learner was as rigorously and thoroughly trained as the middy or the cadet, and when through his term he was usually as much a credit to his craft as either the marine or the soldier to the arm of the service to which he belongs. There was something admirable about the old method of bringing young fellows up to a trade. No doubt it had its hardships for the learner, but hardships that do not injure a boy's health or morals really benefit him. The oak would not be the sturdy, well-set tree it is in its old days if it had not to withstand many a storm in the course of its growth. The apprentice system instilled a knowledge of shop-keeping that was of immense value to the grocery trade as a whole. Salesmen knew goods, knew how to offer them for sale, knew how to display them, knew how to tie them up, knew how to address customers, and knew how to comport themselves behind the counter. They were impressed with that esprit de corps which is altogether wanting under the conditions that determine young men's entry into trade in this country. This spirit was one of the most valuable inheritances of their training. The whole future of the full-fledged grocer was deemed to be bound up in the grocery trade, and he was thus restrained from practices that might hasten him out of the trade. Having spent so many of the best years of his life in acquiring in a hard school all the special knowledge necessary for the prosecution of his business, he could not feel safe in attempting to make a living at anything else, and therefore did not resort to methods that would tend to force him to retire from that business. Hence he did not take to price-cutting, to credit-giving, to trashy goods, to crooked methods, with the gay hilarity of some traders of our day, whose principles were formed in a freer school. Our most reckless traders court failure, and are either reinstated by creditors or go into some other business. The graduate of the apprentice system had not the same versatility, and stuck to conservative courses that he might stick to his trade. Further, he was induced to do so by the protection the apprentice system afforded him, for it was only by its thorny path that competitors could come into opposition to him, so that competition was not the chaotic thing it is in this country to-day. The apprentice system afforded a channel through which the most venerable and most respected traditions flowed, and these exercised an influence for the dignity and tone of the trade.

AUTUMN NUMBER--12,000 CIRCULATION.

Under the apprentic system the service and the duty of the learner were obligatory until he was through the period for which he was articulated. Under the loose system holding in this country his service and duty are largely voluntary. Even when he is a fully responsible adult grocery hand his service is very mobile, and cannot as a rule be held after a month's notice is given. This independence is fatal to the attainment of a high level of efficiency among our shop-keepers, and it is the few who become as well versed in their business as they should be. There should be some improving agency at work upon the whole mass. The most practicable is organization, which if well planned and carried out, can be made to take the place, in a considerable measure, of the defunct apprentice system. This ought to be seriously thought of by the salesmen, saleswomen and office hands of our grocery stores. A great volume of influence and energy for their own improvement and well-being is allowed to go to waste, simply because no organized form is adopted into which its force may be compressed and stored. The clerks underestimate themselves if they think they are incapable of effecting momentous reforms in the grocery trade of the country. They are to be the future grocers of Canada, and cannot too soon take into their hands the consideration of matters pertaining to their trade generally, and to their condition as employees particularly. Upon that fulcrum—the position of the employee—they can exert enormous pressure for the raising, not only of their own efficiency and condition, but of the status of the whole trade. They should begin at once. The retail grocers' associations have not sprung into existence as fast nor as widely as they should, nor have they taken hold as zealously as they should of the questions which are constantly cropping up in practical trade. There is therefore a wide field for clerks' associations to work in, and it is for them to show that they can do as much for the trade as associations of their principals have done. The idea of clerks' associations ought to be agitated at every centre of retail trade. THE GROCER is open for the discussion of the question, and invites letters from all who take any interest in it. The clerks are a very fundamental element in the grocery trade. They should make use of every means, within their reach as individuals or as a body, for their self-improvement. The trade then will have the right ground-work under it, as it had when it stood on the basis of an apprentice system.

* * *

The Retail Grocers' Association of this city cannot be accused of "vaulting ambition which o'erleaps itself." On the contrary, its sober nature has never learned to stray far from the most ordinary walks of trade fraternities. It would be none the worse of a little soaring ambition. It has apparently been content to continue its mere existence and to be able to deal with all crying evils when they became acute. It never appears to have aimed at a very commanding place in the public or commercial regard. If it had, it would by this time have accumulated a considerable fund for the purpose of constructing a building in which to hold its meetings, in which its secretary should have its office, in which information about doubtful debtors could be obtained, and in which a clerks' employment bureau could be always open for grocers or clerks to register their wants. Several other features for the advantage of the members could be added if such a building existed. A library and reading room for the use of members and open to their clerks, would be a grand feature in such a building. A gymnasium would be another. If there were such a place of resort it would be used freely and would bring members into really intimate intercourse. Monthly meetings do not afford sufficient opportunity for the fellowship that makes friendship. Further, the discussion of the prosaic, commonplace subjects that come up at monthly meetings is not the best medium of coherence in an association. An association, to flourish and hang together, needs more brightness and relaxation in its proceedings, and should make a strong point of its social attractions, its restful pastimes, and its gratification of the finer tastes. Reading, conversation, exercise, should be brought into service as elements in the means of attracting and holding members. A good large building, comfortably furnished, and well appointed, kept well lighted and tidy, would do more to increase the membership and extend the influence of the association than a century of discussion would. The very possession of such a building would be a powerful bond of union, and members would become possessed of the true corporate spirit which is necessary for the suppression of the most objectionable practices the trade have now to complain of. All the best features of a club would be grafted upon the association, and the trade would be as completely brought under the control of its own self-interest as any of the professions is to-day. The means could be obtained. The large donations made to pic-nic funds in the past and the large receipts derived from pic-nics show that the Association has resources for accumulating money for any purpose it may choose to apply it to.

* * *

In these times of wanton price-cutting it is encouraging to hear from any quarter where there is at work an influence to stop that evil. Associations, which had rather disappointed the hopes of their friends in this matter, can take heart from the example of the Stratford body, and once more engage with the men who systematically lop off the profits. In Stratford all the grocers but one belong to the association, and everybody is making a fair profit on his goods. The president of that Association, H. T. Barker, speaks in very hearty terms of the work it is doing. He says that each grocer is able to do business upon a profitable basis, and that it is solely owing to the association that this is the case. It is a pity that the same could not be said by the trade of all other towns and cities in this country. The possibility of keeping prices out of the control of cutters is demonstrated by the Stratford Association, and what one association does another can do. THE GROCER has never supported either extreme for the determining of prices—either excessive competition or combination—but has always urged that the most be made of the moral sense of the trade. The fairest prices to both buyers and sellers are those which are quoted when rivals have confidence in each other and tolerate each other. Traders must be more or less intimately associated to become tolerant of their mutual rivalry. As soon as they get on terms that they can brook each other's rivalry, so soon will they begin to be easy as to each other and be particular as to prices. Associations should address themselves to the task of inculcating fair competition among their members. Where one member will make it a point to cut the prices of another, there is plainly a failure of a main purpose of the association.

ARE GROCERS MAKING A ROD FOR THEIR OWN BACKS?

EDITOR CANADIAN GROCER.

Sir,—Pardon me for again intruding on your valuable space touching the subject of packet tea. I have in my former letters tried to awaken the retail grocers from their apathy and indifference by pointing out the dangers and shoals ahead by their handling of these teas. Whether I have succeeded in doing so or not to any great extent will hardly be known at this juncture, but I do know of quite a few cases where these teas will not be bought by grocers again. It also appears that those directly interested in selling packet tea are up in arms and are waxing furious at the exposure of the tricks used by some to introduce these teas. Suppose we examine the matter more carefully and calmly, without prejudice, although some appear to think I cannot do this, because I am selling only bulk teas. Such reasoning is absurd, for there is no difficulty in the way of putting up tea in leaden packages, or fancy canisters, or even cornucopias, if it was thought necessary to do so. I personally do not believe in its security or longevity either for wholesale or retail. My reasons are very simple, and I will endeavor to make them plain.

Taking the retailer's position first. In introducing packet tea which bears another name than his own, the grocer introduces competition against himself, and plainly shows his want of confidence in his own tea, and his own ability to give value as good as or better than his competitors, in fact, it leaves him entirely out of the question altogether. His judgment and knowledge are done as far as selecting and choosing tea for his trade is concerned, for he no longer trades on his own name in teas, but he barters away his own name upon which he has built up his business, and which is so widely and well known as Mr. Brown's or Jones & Co.'s good tea, "which pleases so well, and such good value, and we would go blocks or miles to get it, for no other tea pleases us like Brown's tea," etc. But in place of his or their name he introduces the "Ticklemefancy," or the "Orientali," or "Sallylung" brand of tea, with such a pretty canister to keep buttons in, and which our Johnny cried so for to other day and nearly broke our Mary's head in two because she wouldn't let him have it to keep his marbles in. Now let us suppose that either one or two of these brands should take with the public, and supposing that two grocers handle them in one town. What will follow? Judging from past experiences, the first thing will be to cut the price down and down until there is no profit left for either, and perhaps worse still, they will even sell less than cost to draw custom, like a celebrated package coffee, put up in one pound packages and sold nearly all over the States by retail grocers at from one to three cents a package less than cost, just as a leader to draw custom. The packer of this coffee has amassed a fortune and is entirely independent of what the retailers may do with his coffee, as he sells it at one price to the trade only. This being a fixed rule, it is easily seen, then, in this case, who makes the money and gets the name. Such a thing like this might happen in package tea, but I don't think it will with any brands on the market here at the present time. And again, supposing it is not the "quality" of tea which takes or that the people care for, but the packages or canisters in which the tea is packed, will it not be the eye or fancy, and not the taste, or perhaps both, that will have to be pleased, and in such cases the packages will play the most prominent part, which has already begun, and more to follow? I am told, and as sure as eggs are eggs, and not chickens, when just laid, the firm which gives the best looking packages to take the eye and please the fancy will secure the trade for the time being, but the grocer to do this will either have to lose his profits on tea altogether or cut down the quality. And so it will become a war of who can give the most attractive and best packages, not regarding the quality of the tea. In this way the tea trade will become the poorest paying part of the retail grocery business, and in my opinion will fall lower than the clap-trap trade of giving presents with tea, a business which is on its last legs in Canada, particularly so in Toronto. It is all nonsense to say that people like being humbugged and fooled continually. Such arguing is an insult to an enlightened community, for they do not, and none know it better than the retailers. If it be true, why don't more of these scheming institutions succeed, then? I am not much of a prophet, but I'll venture to predict that in less than two years all such teas as "Ticklemefancy," "Orientali," "Sallylung," and many others will have been banished from all first-class grocery stores, perhaps not altogether forgotten, for such names and quality could not depart without some feeling of pity for their exit, for having shone so in beauty and lustre on the surface, but yet the heart was shockingly deceiving, and like "the Mermaid," which I told you about in a former letter.

In summing up the whole matter, does it not seem, and mean, that a raid is being made on the tea trade of Canada by old country firms who have no interest at stake here, neither any reputation, but having failed in their purposes and intentions in their own places of business in England, they are now seeking to ruin our wholesale and retail trade in Canada? Instead of our wholesale merchants combatting its progress by exposing their methods of business, and also its poor value, many are falling into the trap by copying and thus encouraging a trade for poor packet tea, which in my humble opinion will ultimately wind up in disaster for both wholesale and retail. I wonder if the history of one of the most prominent competitors here to-day is known in Canada, whose name is on all their packages except the lowest grades? This particular firm at one time ranked among the best known and most respected tea firms in England for bulk teas, but at this time they did not put up packet teas, but they very foolishly, it is said, permitted their travellers to sell to hotels and restaurants where they stopped (like many of our wholesale grocers are doing to-day) and when the retail grocers found it out, and having some backbone in them, they unitedly and at a given time shut completely down on doing business with this firm, and so drove them practically out of business. They then turned their attention to the packet tea trade, and went right in for supplying hotels, taverns, confectioners, pastry cooks, pork butchers, etc., and I would not be surprised to hear of it being peddled by the costermongers as they go through the streets crying their fruit and vegetables. Some contend that the grocers, having forced them into doing this, hurt themselves by causing this opposition and diversion to the tea trade, but though Johnny Bull may like to cut his own throat, he won't let any one else do it for him for fear that the head might be taken off as well. It is not necessary to go to England, sir, for proof of this statement, for there are more than two persons in this city connected with the tea trade who can corroborate this statement. Oh ye gods of "high grade packet teas of purity and excellence," how much lower will ye stoop by designs and cunning artifices to catch the weary public. And if you cannot induce the grocers to take ten pounds on trial, then you will send five pounds. Anything and everything, so long as the grocer gets it, and, like the one-cent grab bags put up for children, it is all chance what you get for your money.

And now to conclude and make my bow and exit. Let me do so by saying that if the tea trade of Canada is to be done through packet teas, then I firmly believe that tea will no longer be the best paying article in the wholesale and retail trade, but it will become worse than the sugar business of to-day. It will get so completely complicated and distorted that all parties will suffer and get discouraged and perplexed. And the grocers will prefer to push coffee and cocoas in preference to tea, and these commodities will increase and flourish, as they are already doing in our largest towns and cities. And now, just one conundrum and I am done. Do not the retailers, by keeping and offering for sale packet teas, introduce competition against their own special blends or bulk tea, and do they not give more prominence to packet tea than their own by placing the packages to the front and giving them the most prominent position in their stores, thereby inviting and drawing the attention of their customers to an article which they (the grocers) honestly believe is not value, as they know their bulk tea to be the best for the money, and is it not more profitable to them than packet tea? Why, then, do they prefer doing this and cutting down their profits? is a question I think should merit an answer. I would like to hear the views of more retail grocers on this all-important subject, which so touches their internal interests, and if it can be shown that I am mistaken in my convictions I will openly acknowledge it, and then perhaps become a competitor in packet teas.

Respectfully yours,

STEPHEN HUSTWITT.

Dear Grocer,—Being a constant reader of THE GROCER (and I have had no cause to regret it, but the contrary) I was somewhat interested in reading the letter of W. G. Campbell, 412 Queen street, of your city, in your last issue. He seems to bear down rather heavy on the wholesale trade, and in a way, I think, that is uncalled for, and fearing that it may be taken as expressing the mind of the retail trade generally, I wish to give my dissent to it.
